WATER WORKERS DUE BACK ON JOB MONDAY, CITY'S OFFER ACCEPTED

Vote to Return After Getting Promise That Reclassification Study Will Be Started at Once.

The 400 municipal water division employes who went on strike Friday are scheduled to return to work tomorrow. By unanimous vote at a union meeting yesterday, they accepted the city's offer to begin an immediate job reclassification study in the water division if the walkout was terminated.

The workers had demanded reclassification in a special category so that they might negotiate for wage increases unavailable for their present rating.

Approximately 200 of the striking laborers and truck drivers attended the meeting at Big Club Hall, 5200 Shaw boulevard. Their union executive committee, which met Friday night with city officials, presented the city's offer, but made no recommendation itself.

Plea by Official.

Then John M. Keane, business representative of Local 675, AFL-CIO State, County and Municipal Employes, urged that the offer be accepted. After hearing his plea, the men voted to go back to work tomorrow.

In agreeing to end the walkout, the workers made no pledge regarding acceptance of findings in the forthcoming job reclassification study. The union will submit these findings to the men for a later vote, Keane explained.

Personnel Director R. Elliott Scearce will start work on the study at once. He previously had indicated that such a review would require 90 days.

An hour of discussion preceded yesterday's vote by the strikers. Union leaders said the discussion dealt chiefly with the objectiveness of the proposed study. After being assured that the city would be fair and intended to make an impartial study, the strikers agreed to go back to work.

The walkout resulted from the men's feeling that their request for reclassification was not being considered and that they were getting a "runaround," a union official declared.

The strike disrupted a number of city services Friday. About 1000 union members, including City Hall switchboard operators, refused to cross picket lines set up by the water division employes.

Following a conference with Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, Keane withdrew pickets from City Hall and other municipal buildings late Friday, permitting a return to near-normal operations in some departments.

Services Which Were Hobbled.

Services interrupted, in addition to those directly affected in the water division, included garbage and rubbish collection, street cleaning, street lighting repairs, traffic control, operation of Kiel Auditorium, parking meter collections and various inspections.

St. Louis University and St. Louis University High School, scheduled to hold graduation exercises at Kiel Auditorium, were asked to make other arrangements because of the strike, but were able to proceed with their programs as originally planned after pickets at the Auditorium were withdrawn. Mayor Tucker delivered the university commencement adtion, announced.

City garbage and rubbish collection crews will catch up with their work in a few days, Earl W. Deering, head of this section announced.

Service on the north side is near normal, only three garbage collection routes having been skipped. On the south side the work is further behind because the Memorial day holiday fell on Wednesday, a garbage collection day, and nine of the 25 rubbish collection crews were off the job because of the strike.

Approval of a new city compensation bill by the aldermanic ways and means committee Friday apparently was a factor in mollifying the strikers. The bill would give virtually all city employes a 5 per cent increase.

Goal of Workers.

Keane said the water division men expect to seek an additional increase in the near future to bring their scale up to that paid by Laclede Gas Co. for similar work.

Present wage rates of the water division men, as reported by Scearce, are $1.44 to $1.64 an hour for drivers and $1.39 to $1.56 an hour for laborers. The men work a 40-hour week, receive three weeks' paid vacation, 13 paid holidays and unlimited sick leave, Scearce added.

"Our problem has been that, if our men wanted a pay increase, we had to negotiate for every laborer and driver on the city payroll to get it," the union agent said. "We are seeking a specialists' classification of 'Water Division Laborer' and 'Water Division Driver' for bargaining purposes."

Wage rates are recommended by the Civil Service Commission. There is no signed contract between the union and the city.

Republicans Drop Chotiner As Worker in Fall Campaign

Chairman Hall Says National Committee Has Enough Experienced Personnel to Meet Staff Problems.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP)—Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall announced today the Republican National Committee would not use political strategist Murray M. Chotiner in this year's presidential election campaign.

Chotiner, Vice President Richard M. Nixon's campaign manager in 1952 and ace Republican instructor on how to defeat the opposition, is under fire from the Senate Investigations subcommittee. The subcommittee wants to know whether he used government contacts improperly in carrying on his law practice.

Hall said that Chotiner, "because of his experience, has been called upon to perform numerous campaign services" but that "the national committee is now staffed by experienced personnel sufficient to meet the campaign staff problems of both the presidential and vice presidential nominees."

Hall made his disclosure in a letter in reply to a reporter's question.

Republican National headquarters made the reply public.

Chotiner, a Beverly Hills, Calif., attorney, in the past has been a campaign instructor in Republican headquarters. He lectured on how to win elections at a meeting of Republican leaders here earlier this year.

In Los Angeles, a spokesman for Chotiner said he was out of town and probably could not be reached before Monday. Nixon also was not available for comment.

Senate investigators have been looking quietly into many aspects of Chotiner's law practice since the Republicans took over the White House. Informed sources say Chotiner has protested that the subcommittee, headed by Senator John L. McClellan (Dem.), Arkansas, is going into his relations with some clients who had nothing to do with government.

He has written to McClellan balking at giving names of his clients, the fees they paid, or the government officials he contacted about their cases.

Chotiner wrote McClellan that it would be "unfair" to give the information the subcommittee seeks because neith-

NEIGHBORS PLOW FIELDS FOR MAN WHO ROBBED BANK

Overwhelmed with gratitude, Richter, 31 years old, the father of six children, said he "couldn't understand why they are willing to help me after the mistake I made."

Richter has admitted robbing the Northwestern State Bank at Ulen, Minn., of $1158 two weeks ago. He said his bills were piling up and he was desperate for money.

Richter is free on $10,000 bail posted by his parents and his wife's parents.

"We're trying our best to give him a helping hand," said Harold Haarstad, Richter's nearest neighbor. "He's a nice fellow and a good worker."

Fourteen tractors, operated by friends, worked the 135-acre tract. At the Richter home, the farmers' wives served a potluck lunch for the volunteer crew. After the plowing and discing, Richter's neighbors helped him seed his crops.

300 STITCHES TAKEN IN SOLDIER'S HEAD AFTER AUTO CRASH

HACKENSACK, N. J., June 2 (AP)—Three hundred stitches were required today to close severe head wounds suffered by a Kansas City (Mo.) soldier in an auto accident.

Authorities at Hackensack Hospital, after extensive emergency treatment, said Kenneth M. Le Forge, 20 years old, was resting comfortably but was considered in serious condition.

Le Forge was riding in a car driven by a buddy at Fort Devens, Mass., Dey Dunham, 21, of Leesville, La., when it collided almost head on with a car driven by Robert Kiley of Teaneck.

BRITISH WOMAN FORMS GROUP TO SIT WITH CATS

Would Keep Kitty From Being Lonely While Family Is Out for Evening.

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—Katherine Wilson has an idea cats get lonely and so she said tonight "I have formed Cat Sitters, Inc."

By letters and pamphlets she hopes to organize hundreds of people willing to sit with the cat while the family is out for the evening.

Miss Wilson, well known as a judge at international cat shows, said cat sitters should get the same pay as baby sitters.

PRAVDA BARELY MENTIONS PROMOTION OF ITS EDITOR

MOSCOW, June 2 (AP) — News that the editor of Pravda has become Soviet Foreign Minister barely got into Pravda today.

A two paragraph item telling of V. M. Molotov's resignation and the appointment of Pravda Editor Dmitri T. Shepilov to succeed him was printed at the bottom of the last column on the last page.

The paper said nothing about whether a new editor had been appointed.

MAN ACCUSED OF KILLING OFFICER FREED ON BOND

Dowd's Office Does Not Oppose Bail, but Later Files Motion to Revoke It.

James Z. Bradley, who is charged with murder in the killing of Patrolman Thomas Mulrooney in a tavern holdup, was released on bond without any opposition from Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd's office, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Circuit Judge Michael J. Scott, who approved bail for Bradley May 18, said he did so after the circuit attorney's office informed him it would not oppose bail.

First Assistant Circuit Attorney Joseph M. Settich said he did not oppose bail for Bradley because to do so would require the state to expose its evidence at a hearing. This would be necessary to show that the presumption of the guilt of the defendant was great, Settich said.

Judge Scott has authority to deny bail in all felony cases where the death penalty can be imposed. In many instances bail has been denied to defendants charged with first-degree murder.

Motion to Reduce Bonds.

Following an inquiry by the Post-Dispatch as to why Bradley had been released on bond, the circuit attorney's office filed a motion to revoke Bradley's bonds, which total $35,000. A hearing on this motion is scheduled before Judge Scott tomorrow.

In explanation of the effort to revoke the bonds, Dowd told the Post-Dispatch his office had expected a jury trial this spring.

"Now it has been set for June 18 when jury trials will be closed down for the summer," Dowd said. "Therefore, we hope to take Bradley off the streets in view of this long continuance."

Bradley is represented by Raymond A. Bruntrager, who was first assistant to Dowd until he resigned last September. Bradley was released on a $15,000 murder bond and two $10,000 armed robbery bonds, signed by Alvin Crouppen, professional bondsman.

Admitted Shooting.

Bradley admitted to Chief of Detectives James E. Chapman that he shot Patrolman Thomas Mulrooney in a holdup last March 16 of Joe and Pete's tavern, 1544 North Ninth street, in which $550 was taken. Bradley and a companion, Thomas B. Crews, a former convict, are charged with murder in Mulrooney's death.

Crews and Bradley also are charged with two armed robberies. Crews is held in city jail. The murder charge against Bradley was scheduled for trial last week, but was continued.

Blind Students Cross Canyon.

TUCSON, Ariz., June 2 (AP) —Six students at the state school for the blind here have accomplished a feat most outdoorsmen would give their eye teeth for — hiking across the treacherous Grand Canyon from Hopi Point on the south rim to Bright Angel Point on the north, a distance of 21 miles.

St. Louis Grade Schools Using Oriental Abacus to Teach Sums

The abacus, a calculating instrument used in the Orient for centuries, has appeared in St. Louis public schools to help first and second graders with their sums.

William Kottmeyer, an assistant superintendent of instruction, said abacuses are being tested at five schools, along with other teaching aids. Some tiny abacuses have been used occasionally in the past, he added, but the new models are bigger, and presumably better.

Abacuses consist of counters strung on wires stretched horizontally on a wooden frame. Their purpose is to give pupils an easier visual concept of numbers than, for example, apples and pears chalked on a blackboard. Clarence T. Hunter, principal of Banneker school, said teachers have found them practical. The children like them, too, he said.

RUSSIA REVAMPS ITS GOVERNMENT; DROPPING THREE BIG MINISTRIES

Justice, Waterways, Road Transport Powers Go to Republics—Textile and Light Industry Merge.

LONDON, Sunday, June 3 (AP)—The Soviet Union today streamlined its government, abolishing three ministries and handing greater authority to the various republics.

The Ministries of Justice, Inland Waterways and Road Transport have been abolished, Moscow radio said. Their duties were transferred to the republics.

The Textile Ministry was merged with the Ministry of Light Industry. Twelve other ministries were shorn of their power over many key industries and control was switched to the republics.

An official Tass News Agency statement broadcast by Moscow said the reorganization was made possible by an increased number of experienced technicians and administrators in the republics.

Most important ministry to be abolished is Justice, which had jurisdiction over all the judges in the Soviet Union. Konstantin P. Gorshenin has held the Justice Ministry post.

Secret Police Not Affected.

The Justice Ministry's jurisdiction did not include the secret police or the Soviet prosecutors. Both of these function separately under their own chiefs.

Tass said the government changes were "guided by the decision of the twentieth congress of the Communist party of the Soviet Union" in February. The party congress called for greater responsibility for the republics, which correspond roughly to states in the United States.

"Accordingly," said Tass, "the central committee of the Communist party of the Soviet Union and the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers (cabinet) have resolved to transfer industrial establishments and organizations now under direct control of the U.S.S.R. ministries to the control of the constituent republics.

"This applies to ministries of foodstuffs, meat and dairy industry, finishing industry, procurement, light industry, textile industry, building materials industry, paper and woodworking industry, automobile transport and highways, inland waterways, health and also to the retail trade network and to catering establishments."

More Efficiency Expected.

Tass said the switchover "will encourage more efficient industrial management, better use of available reserves for expanding production, and fuller satisfaction of national economic requirements."

The presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the supreme governing body, has approved five separate decrees giving effect to the changes, the broadcast said.

Tass said the Ministry of Textiles and the Ministry of Light Industry were merged into a new Ministry of Light Industry under Nikita S. Ryzhov. Ryzhov has been minister of textile industry.

The Ministry of Procurements was revamped and renamed the Ministry of Grain Products. Its new minister is L. R. Korniyets, who has been minister of agriculture procurements.

Tass said the Justice Ministry was abolished "with the view to ending centralization in governing operations of legal institutions . . . and increasing the role of the union republics in this matter."

Separate Justice Agencies.

A separate Justice Ministry will be set up for each republic. To co-ordinate these new justice ministries, a legal commis-

TITO IN RUSSIA SAYS SPLIT OF COMMUNIST NATIONS WILL NEVER OCCUR AGAIN

Tito in Russian Capital

YUGOSLAV CHIEF SPEAKS FRANKLY OF DIFFICULTIES WITH OLD REGIME

MOSCOW, June 2 (AP) — President Josip (Tito) Broz of Yugoslavia, arriving for a triumphal state visit, declared today the Communist nations would never again be split as they were when the Kremlin tossed Tito aside in 1948.

Tito, resplendent in his gold braided marshal's uniform and with cheers of thousands of Russians ringing in his ears, said in a speech broadcast from gaily decorated Kievsky railroad station:

"The spirit of Lenin's principles of collective leadership are such that I am sure there never again will be misunderstanding among the nations of the Socialist (Communist) camp."

Others included newly appointed Foreign Minister Dmitri Shepilov and the veteran old Bolshevik he succeeded, V. M. Molotov.

Timing of Shift Significant.

Tito came to Moscow to patch up what differences remain between him and the present Soviet leadership. There was wide belief that last night's naming of Shepilov, a friend of Tito, as foreign minister, had been timed to coincide with the arrival of Tito, who has little love for Molotov.

Tito did not hesitate to refer to what he termed the "difficult" period after the 1948 break between Yugoslavia and the Communist countries led by the Soviet Union. Molotov, as foreign minister under Premier Stalin, played an important role in bringing it about.

"We have come with the best wishes of our people. We were very happy to receive your invitation to see your wonderful country. It is not necessary to repeat that your efforts in constructing Socialism have achieved great results. Since the days of the October revolution and through the years of the great patriotic war the hearts of the Yugoslav people have been with you.

"Our history, old and new, has been full of suffering, and we can understand your suffering. Our ties have been strengthened in blood.

Optimistic About Future.

"Things were very difficult for us at one time, but we had faith the time would come when our friendship would be strengthened again."

Tito stressed that he felt sure that under the Soviet Union's new collective leadership there could never be such a "misunderstanding" again.

Of his current visit to Moscow, where he trained as a revolutionary in his early years, he said:

"I am sure our exchange of opinions will establish mutual understanding between us. They will not only strengthen our friendship but the friendship of all peoples and the peaceful co-existence of all nations."

Children pelted the broadly smiling Tito with flowers as he left the train, accompanied by his wife, Jovanka, who wore a smart black suit with a jacket trimmed with red embroidery in the Yugoslav national pattern.

Tito listened impassively as President Voroshilov stepped up to a microphone and said in a brief greeting:

"Our mutual aim is to strengthen friendship and cooperation between our Socialist countries, to improve social and cultural relations between our two countries. The people of the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia welcome the strengthening of ties between our two countries in the interests of both."

Rides Off Amid Cheers.

At the conclusion of the welcoming ceremonies Tito, Voroshilov and Khrushchev drove away in an open limousine to the cheers of the Moscow throngs.

He walked in 15 minutes ahead of Tito's arrival time with former Premier Georgi Malenkov and First Deputy Premier

MICHIGAN PLANS EXTRA SESSION TO HIKE JOBLESS AID

Gov. Williams to Act in Expectation of Further Unemployment in Auto Plants.

By SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, June 2 — Further evidence that the unemployment in the automobile industry will grow worse before its gets better was seen yesterday in the announcement by Gov. G. Mennen Williams that increased unemployment benefits would be sought at a special session of the Michigan Legislature which he would call soon.

Legislation to correct technical defects found by bond lawyers in the 1955 highway modernization act also will be offered, thus expediting projects that would offer some employment opportunities.

With 220,000 Michigan automobile workers out of jobs, including 130,000 in Detroit, more lay-offs were expected in June and even greater reductions in the work force were foreseen for July, August and September when the state total may mount to 300,000.

Ward's Automotive Reports, Inc., statistical agency for the industry, reported that this week's production was 95,550 vehicles, lowest since October 1954. Ford Motor Co. said its May production was 168,184 cars and trucks for a five-month total of 876,196 compared with 230,176 and 1,122,555 for last year.

Gov. Williams unexpectedly spoke out for increased state unemployment benefits as workers began signing up for "supplementary unemployment benefits" under provisions of a contract signed by the United Automobile Workers and the industry a year ago. In that short period the 5 cents a man-hour paid into a fund by the employers has not built up to a point which makes it possible adequately to supplement state payments. It was intended that the combined payments would provide 65 per cent of normal take-home pay for four weeks and 60 per cent for an additional 22 weeks.

Furthermore, since only those employes laid off since May 1 are eligible for supplementary payments, it was estimated that fewer than 40,000 were covered and that many of those who qualifyied because of the small amount in the funds and their relatively low seniority, would receive as little as $10 a week and for as short a time as three or four weeks from the state. A $70-a-week worker with 10 years' seniority would get about $33 a week.

The General Motors fund, which would have a ceiling of about $150,000,000 now contains about $40,000,000; Ford has a fund of $14,000,000 as compared with a $55,000,000 top, and Chrysler Corp. has $8,000,000 against the $49,000,000 necessary to give its workers full benefits.

Because of the concentration of automobile plants Michigan has been hit the hardest by the slump which has extended to manufacturers of components, parts and accessories. Detroit and Flint have been placed on the "labor surplus" list and thus are eligible for special consideration in the awarding of Government contracts. South Bend, Ind., and Kenosha, Wis., also are recent additions to the list because of automobile factory lay-offs.

There have been lay-offs and curtailments of operation in many other cities including St.

Closer Russian Ties With Tito Forecast After Molotov Ouster

Yugoslav President Has Been Pressing for Removal of Foreign Minister.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 2 — Closer ties between Russia and independent Communist Yugoslavia are forecast as a result of the resignation of Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, the last of the Old Bolsheviks in high office and perhaps the ablest diplomat of his time.

For more than a year President Josip (Tito) Bros and other Yugoslav leaders have been saying that "Molotov must go" before cordial Russian-Yugoslav relations could be completely restored. Yesterday, on the eve of Tito's much-heralded state visit to Moscow, Molotov went.

Long Expected.

Molotov's resignation had long been expected by the West and no significant changes in Russia's international policies are looked for.

To the extent, however, that Yugoslav friendliness with Russia may portend Yugoslav coolness toward the West, the Kremlin action may be interpreted as unfavorable to Western aspirations. Since its break with Russia in 1948 Yugoslavia has pursued an independent neutralist course; some observers claim to have seen a leaning toward the Soviet orbit in recent months.

A pro-western, or at least independent Yugoslavia, is important to the West for a variety of reasons. One is the Western-approved Yugoslav-Greek-Turkish alliance, through which Yugoslavia is linked to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization though not itself a member of NATO. Yugoslavia's continued receipt of American military aid has been a source of controversy in Congress.

Visit to Yugoslavia.

Molotov's position became uncertain with the death in March 1953 of Premier Stalin, with whom he was closely associated for many years. Reports that Molotov would be replaced by Dmitri T. Shepilov, editor of the Communist party newspaper Pravda, became current a year ago with the state visit of the Russian leaders to Belgrade in an effort to patch up Russian-Yugoslav relations.

Those who made what Secretary of State John Foster Dulles called a "humble pilgrimage" to the Yugoslav capital included Premier Bulganin, Communist Party Chief Nikita S. Khrushchev, Deputy Premier A. I. Mikoyan and Shepilov, who was identified as follows:

"Chairman of the commission for foreign affairs of the Soviet of nationalities of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., member of the Central Committee of

RADIO SIGNALS RECEIVED FROM PLANET VENUS

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 2 (AP) — The director of Ohio State University's radio observatory has reported that several times in May the observatory received strong radio signals from the planet Venus.

Dr. John D. Kraus said yesterday it was the first time the planet has been heard from. It is more than 27,000,000 miles from Earth.

Kraus said signals were observed on each occasion for a period of several hours. The signals consisted of crackling sounds somewhat similar to radio static from thunderstorms on Earth, he added.

The signals may indicate similar storms on Venus, he said. The planet often is called the Earth's twin since it is nearly the same size and comes closer than any other planet.

The observations were made with a radio telescope.

The newly discovered radio signals are being studied to learn more about atmospheric conditions surrounding Venus.

The planet is the second from which radio signals have been detected, Kraus said. Carnegie Institution of Washington, D. C., picked up radio noises from Jupiter last year.

SENATOR DRAWS LINE ON SENDING BE-BOP ABROAD

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP) —Senator Allen J. Ellender said today that sending be-bop bandsman Dizzy Gillespie abroad was the best way to convince opera-loving Europeans that Americans are barbarians.

Ellender said it might be all right for the State Department to send "great" jazz musicians like Benny Goodman or Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong overseas to demonstrate United States culture. But he drew the line at be-bop which he heard Gillespie play at the White House correspondents' dinner last week.

"Noise, pure noise," said the Louisiana Democrat.

"Imagine that being sent to Paris—and it was.

"Anybody listening to it will be convinced that we are barbarians. A lot of tom-toms, and horns blaring!"

Ellender drew a bead on be-bop—and cast a few rocks at rock-and-roll — in his weekly radio broadcast for a New Orleans station, then warmed to his subject in remarks to reporters.

After a blackout since 1950, Russian hams last Tuesday night suddenly began responding to American signals, Willard H. Du Bord, 10247 Midland boulevard, Overland, a veteran amateur radio operator, told the Post-Dispatch yesterday. So far Du Bord has made contact with four stations in Moscow, one in Kiev and another in Riga.

Other American hams are so anxious to put an ear to the Iron Curtain that conversations are held to bare essentials, Du Bord said. Russian hams first began conversing with Americans on a limited basis about a month ago during the Bulganin-Khrushchev visit to Britain.

The Russian are as sharp at Morse code as at foreign diplomacy, Du Bord said. Some appear to combine the two, identifying themselves by such American-sounding names as "Leo," and "Henry."

Both Campaigning Hard for State's 68 Convention Votes—Illinoisan Favored in Local Polls to Win—Democrats Outnumber G.O.P. in Registration.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2.

IN THEIR FINAL presidential primary, former Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois and Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee are ending their exhausing competition of views, personalities and physical endurance in a last-ditch fight for California's 68 votes at the Democratic national convention in August.

If Stevenson wins the primary vote Tuesday, he will be so far ahead of Kefauver and the so-called inactive candidates that only some unforeseen mishap could prevent him from again being the standard-bearer of his party.

If Kefauver wins, the California indorsement will revive the slight chance he had for the nomination before his close defeat in Florida last Tuesday.

Stevenson's defeat by Kefauver would practically close out Stevenson's chances for a second nomination. The reasoning would be that if he could not beat Kefauver in such an important state, he would have no prospect of beating President Eisenhower in the November election. Stevenson would remain in the race for the nomination to keep his commitments, but the big question would be to which dark horse he would throw his support in a deadlock.

Kefauver's Strategy.

Kefauver's defeat would mean the end of the trail for the tall Tennessean. He won an expected victory in New Hampshire and an unexpected one in Minnesota. After that came his defeats in Oregon, New Jersey, the District of Columbia and Florida. His campaign strategy has been to fight the "bosses" in the national and state organizations. The "bosses" or "leaders" will have a great deal to do with the Chicago decisions on candidates and platform. Kefauver will stay in the fight until August, of course, but it is a question whether he could deliver a majority of the delegates he has won to some other aspirant.

Stevenson, according to local polls and indications, is slated to win in California. His more ardent supporters claim, and one poll indicates, the division will be as great as 60-40. The vote in Florida, where the old-age legislation was also an issue, points to a narrower margin.

Kefauver's supporters are making no predictions. They give the Florida photo-finish, which the Tennessean has called a "moral victory," as their reason for caution. They also note that Stevenson, then also backed by the party organization leaders, was thought to be a shoo-in victor in Minnesota but lost to their man by a ratio of 6 to 5.

Both Working Hard.

Both candidates flew to California this week as soon as they thought they had done as much as they could in Florida, and they have kept up the same physically exhausting, temper-trying pace they set in that state. They campaign by airplane, bus and afoot for 18 hours a day.

Stevenson, perhaps because he has more influential and experienced local papers, had the larger crowds and seems to arouse more enthusiasm with his greater adaptability in speaking to diverse audiences. It is debatable whether his quips and jokes, some a little off-color, are good politics, but he gets plenty of laughs.

Kefauver is solemn and, when not posing for pictures, more dignified.

This is a primary, not an election, but neither produces the shouting and applause that an Eisenhower, Truman, Roosevelt or even a Dewey could evoke.

Voters Appear Apathetic.

As in Florida, the voters appear apathetic. Many of the party leaders say privately that they do not see how the Democrats, whoever the candidate, can overcome the lead of more than 700,000 the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket piled up over the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket in 1952.

The hottest fight is over the nominations for a superior judgeship, although the Democrats are also moderately excited over whether State Senator Richard B. Richards or former Representative Samuel Yorty shall have the senatorial nomination to run against Republican Senator Thomas H. Kuchel, who defeated Yorty two years ago.

Republicans claim that Kuchel will win the Democratic nomination — a possibility in this state where cross-filing is not only permitted but openly practiced.

Stevenson and Richards are supporting each other.

President Eisenhower's announcement that he would seek re-election ended the threats of a Republican primary fight and the divisions between Vice President Nixon, Senator Knowland and Gov. Knight factions have coalesced for this campaign. This has dampened some interest the voters might have had in the primary.

Democrats Lead, on Paper.

On paper, and only on paper, the Democrats have the best of the registration with 3,059,873 voters signed up to the Republicans' 2,277,530. There is semi-permanent registration here and apparently some of the voters who signed up in the New and Fair Deal days have not bothered to change their records although they obviously have voted Republican for the presidency and the governorship. Another explanation is that many of the Southern newcomers to the state have registered Democratic, but in 1952, with the Democratic registration over 3,000,000, Stevenson got only 2,200,000 votes.

Slightly over 40 per cent of the registration is in Los Angeles county, and both candidates have campaigned hard in that region. This weekend, however, both are concentrating on San Francisco and Northern California areas.

Kefauver, for example, arrived here late Thursday night and attended a dance till midnight. He started at 6:30 a.m. yesterday to go to two plants, held a press conference at 9:30 and then toured downtown San Francisco. At noon, he addressed a group in Union Square, had lunch in a bus, and continued his tour of the city. Today he started at 8:30 a.m. for an airplane tour that took him close to the Oregon border, made eight stops for brief speeches and was scheduled to return here at midnight.

Appeal to Three Groups.

At his press conference yesterday, he made a big play for the Negro, veteran and pensioner vote.

At the noon luncheon hour he went to Union Square for a 20-minute set speech, which he delivered fluently and without humor. About 400 persons—some of them white collar workers, other shoppers but mostly those who had come to enjoy the brilliant sunshine—gathered around the loud speaker mounted on an auto trailer.

Several Stevenson workers were there to observe. One boasted that when their candidate spoke at the same place a month ago the square was packed and the newspapers estimated the crowd at 4000. Local reporters said, however that the Stevensonians had made a production of their rally, with a large publicity build-up, a full band and picture taking of Adlai a few blocks away lending a hand on the turntable for the historic cable cars. The reporters said the small crowd for Kefauver was evidence of the apathy of the voters.

Political Views Similar.

This writer was with Stevenson in Los Angeles, San Francisco and the surrounding counties. The political views of the two candidates are so similar as to be almost identical, but their personalities and campaign techniques are radically different.

Stevenson is an improved campaigner even though he does privately complain about "this mad endurance race."

He is openly annoyed by what he calls Kefauver's "abuse and deceit" tactics in Florida and here, but he has not repeated here his charges of Kefauver "absenteeism" in the Senate. At every opportunity, he stresses his record as Governor of Illinois, his war service in Washington, his postwar United Nations experience in San Francisco, New York and London, and his recent trip around the world.

His major speech to the San Francisco Press Club was not interrupted by applause. It was a comprehensively reasoned attack on the Eisenhower Administration and contained his own 10-point program for farmers, organized laborers, small business men, pensioners; for legislation on taxes, education and civil rights, and what he would do on foreign affairs.

"We cannot do these things," he said, by drift, complacency, advertising techniques—no, nor by mottos, slogans and fine moral sentiments. We must have national leadership, and the apex of leadership in the American system is the office of President. Only the President can provide the firm direction, the bold vision and the moral strength that made this country great."

Unlike 1952, when he almost ignored former President Truman, he told his listeners:

"Harry Truman stopped Communism in its tracks and with the Truman Doctrine, the Marshall Plan, Point Four and NATO, he created an image of an America that seeks not to rule the world but to help men everywhere."

Attack on Eisenhower.

In his direct attack on President Eisenhower he said:

"Whenever this administration has been confronted with a hard problem it has appointed a committee to smother the problem; and the prospect for the future is even worse, for we are now asked to remake the role of the presidency itself to meet the present unfortunate circumstances. And already we are beginning to see the consequences . . .

"The President is kept in ignorance of our lag in guided missile developments for many months;

"The President smiles at Israel while the Russians move into the Middle East and arm her enemies;

"The President is not informed of the confusion of self-interest in the Dixon-Yates deal and at sundry high levels of his Administration;

The President gives a clean bill of health to Richard Nixon's California crony (Murray Chotiner), yet the Republican managers secretly drop him from the team;

"The Secretary of State announces, in a magazine article, if you please, that he has led us three times to the brink of war, with the President's approval, but the President says he has not read the article;

"The President is not informed of controversy in the armed services until it erupts in a violent quarrel;

"The President withholds the immense prestige of his office from those who seek to resolve the crisis in civil rights, and, in the latest so-called security case, the President says he is not familiar with it because, as he puts it, 'they bring before me what has been going on: usually not in terms of names but in terms of numbers.'"

Stevenson's Handicaps.

Stevenson would have liked to make speeches of this sort in a dignified, less hurried campaign. He could not do this here for two reasons: first, the California press, with the exception of the McClatchey papers, is notoriously proRepublican when it does publish political news; and, second, Kefauver set the pattern for the hand-shaking bunion derby that won him so many uncontested primaries in 1952.

The contest in California has been hard and bitter, to the great delight of the Republicans. Both candidates early recognized the importance of the state, even beyond the 68 votes it will have at the convention. Both have made five trips here, each time getting more personal. If there ever was a possibility of a Stevenson-Kefauver ticket, the Florida and California fights appear to make a reconciliation impossible. When this endurance race is over neither or both together will have enough delegates to control the Chicago sessions and each must start over after a brief rest, to see how many uncommitted non-primary delegates he can bring to his side.

Stevenson Tops Kefauver to Date in Convention Votes.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) —With 686½ Democratic convention votes needed for a presidential nomination, the latest Associated Press tabulation of pledged votes and preferences expressed in polls stood this way:

Adlai Stevenson	186½
Estes Kefauver	140½
Others	226
Uncommitted	347

Republicans have selected 937 of their 1323 delegates, of which 790, well over a majority, favor President Eisenhower's renomination.

Presidental Gift Horse

QUARTER HORSE AND FINE SADDLE GIVEN PRESIDENT

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 2 (UP) — President Eisenhower, who used to ride "$5 horses on $15 saddles when I was a kid," today welcomed to his farm a western quarter horse complete with hand-tooled leather saddle.

The 7-year-old sorrel mare, named Doodle De Do, was presented to the President by Lester Goodson, president of the American Quarter-Horse Association, as a gift from the association.

Goodson also brought along a two-year-old light bay named Sporty Miss, a gift of his own to the President's 8-year-old grandson, David.

A quarter horse is a sprinter and is featured in short races in many sections of the West.

Mr. Eisenhower posed with Goodson and the two horses in front of his barn. He wore a tan raincoat against the light drizzle that earlier forced him to give up his plans for a round of golf.

SPRINGVILLE, Utah, June 2 (AP) — An exploding bazooka rocket ripped a Utah youth's body almost in two last night, killing him instantly.

Killed was Ivan C. Russell, 15 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Russell of Springville. A companion, Verl Van Patten, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Golden Van Patten of Springville, was injured and reported in serious condition. Hospital attendants said his legs were mangled and his arms and abdomen were torn.

Police Chief Henry Weight termed "erroneous" reports that nearly 12 rockets had been turned in by teen-agers following the explosion. Such reports have been published but weight said he could find no basis for them. He added he had been unable to learn where the two boys got the rocket that exploded. Previous reports said it had been picked up on a National Guard firing range.

Burma Begins 3-Month Vote.

RANGOON, June 2 (AP) — Burma has started voting in a three-month-long national election. It is being held in nine stages on 221 candidates representing 11 parties standing for 86 seats in the House of Nationalities, the upper chamber of Parliament. Burma has a widely diverse tribal population and many tongues.

AIRCRAFT FIRM DEVELOPS WORLD'S TINIEST TV CAMERA

BURBANK, Calif., June 2 (AP)—Lockheed aircraft engineers today claimed development of the world's tiniest television camera—only 1¾ by 2 by 5 inches.

The midget telecaster, weighing only 1½ pounds, can relay to a 27-inch screen within test planes.

It will enable test pilots and engineers to view immediately operations in hard-to-see spots such as landing gear wells.

Such operations as landing gear raising and lowering against the slipstream now are photographed by movie cameras and viewed later. The TV camera will immediately detect any trouble.

GEORGE ASSERTS HE WILL SEEK TO RESTORE AID CUT

Senate Committee Expected to Take Up Administration Bill This Week.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP) — Senator George (Dem.) of Georgia served notice today that he will fight to restore part of the billion-dollar slash in President Eisenhower's foreign military aid program voted by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

George is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which may begin work on the aid bill next week. He told a reporter the House committee's cut was "too great" and could seriously impair the effectiveness of the Atlantic defense alliance in Western Europe.

The Democratic foreign policy leader said "some cut may be justified" in Mr. Eisenhower's $3,100,000,000 military aid budget, but it ought not be too deep. He expressed hope that the House, which is scheduled to act on the aid bill Wednesday or Thursday, would "partially" restore the committee's cut.

Pledges to Lead Drive.

If not, George made clear, he will lead a drive in the Senate for a military aid authorization somewhere between the sum approved by the House committee and the amount sought by the President.

Prospects for the House overruling its Foreign Affairs Committee appeared dim. There are indications Administration forces would forego any real effort to restore the cut on the House floor.

Representative Vorys (Rep.), Ohio, a ranking G.O.P. member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he had not yet decided whether he will offer an amendment to restore any of the funds. Vorys favored some reduction but sharply opposed the heavy cut.

Another committee member said he did not think the House would be in a mood to restore the funds. The committee approved the cut by a vote of 18 to 11.

Taking NATO Job.

George is retiring from the Senate at the end of this year to become President Eisenhower's special representative to seek expansion of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization into non-military fields of international co-operation.

He expressed particular concern about the effect of the House committee action on NATO. About $700,000,000 of the overall cut would be applied against funds sought by the Administration for equipping NATO forces with advanced atomic weapons and missiles.

Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, NATO commander, told the Senate committee last week any substantial cut in NATO funds would seriously impair defenses of western Europe against Communist attack.

ADM. RICHARD EDWARDS DIES

OAKLAND, Calif., June 2 (UP)—Retired Adm. Richard S. Edwards, who won the Navy Cross for work in raising the submarine Squalus in 1939, died of a heart ailment today at the Oakland Naval Hospital. He was 71 years old.

The four-star admiral, deputy commander in chief of the U.S. fleet and deputy chief of naval operations in World War II, had been a patient at the hospital for seven weeks.

Decision Affecting Criminals Would Spike Communist Guns, Clear Issue Over Political Prisoners.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — The government was reported today to have decided that if any Chinese citizens now serving sentences in United States prisons wish to go to Communist China they will be released and permitted to do so.

The decision grows out of a claim by the Chinese Communists, who are holding 13 Americans, that the United States is keeping in prison Chinese who would like to return to the Communist mainland.

The American position is that the Chinese held here are ordinary criminals who have been convicted of a variety of misdeeds including narcotics law violations and even murder, whereas the 13 Americans in Communist China are held on political charges.

The United States government, therefore, does not consider that the release of any Chinese here would be in a nature of a swap for the Americans imprisoned in Red China. Its position is that giving such Chinese the opportunity to go to Red China would remove an obstacle which the Chinese government has belatedly raised to the release of the Americans.

Probably 30 or 40 Prisoners.

The exact number of Chinese citizens who might be eligible to make this choice has not been disclosed but one estimate is that there are between 30 and 40 in United States prisons, mainly serving time for narcotics violations.

United States Ambassador U. Alexis Johnson and Red Chinese Ambassador Wang Ping-nan have been conducting negotiations at Geneva since Aug. 1 of last year on the release of Americans held in China and on other issues, including the dispute over Formosa.

On Sept. 10, Johnson and Wang issued an announcement stating that all American nationals in Red China and all Chinese nationals in the United States would be permitted to go home if they wished to do so. The British government was given the right to see that this agreement was carried out in Red China. The Indian government was given the right to see that it was carried out in the United States.

The Indian government, under this arrangement, will have the task of interviewing Chinese citizens held in American prisons to find out whether they wish to go home. The British government is supposed to have had access to Americans in Red China's jails for many months, but the United States has charged that the Chinese Reds have not permitted proper access in all cases.

13 Americans Still Held.

At the time of the September agreement 29 Americans were held in Red China. All but 13 were deported from the country and for several months the problem of getting these 13 out has been a major concern of the United States.

The Sept. 10 announcement was held by the American government at the time not to apply to persons imprisoned on ordinary criminal convictions. Thus the United States did not construe it to mean that the Chinese now to be interviewed behind bars were covered by it. It was felt to apply principally to Chinese students, numbering several thousands, who had been in the United States for years and about whom the Peiping regime had carried on a long propaganda campaign.

Early this year, however, the Chinese Communists began concentrating their propaganda fire on Chinese in United States prisons and Wang raised the issue formally with Johnson in the Geneva talks.

Last week when State Department Press Officer Lincoln White was asked in a news conference about the Chinese propaganda blasts, he said that all Chinese in the United States were free to go to Red China if they wished. It was not understood at the time that this covered those imprisoned for crimes but information now available makes it clear that this is so.

DOCTOR PASSING CRASH SITE HELPS SAVE LIFE OF GIRL

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 2 (UP)—An Air Force doctor who passed by the scene of an automobile accident near Troy, Kan., yesterday helped save the life of a 12-year-old girl during an ambulance ride to a hospital here.

The girl, Judy Botts, Highland, Kan., was bleeding profusely when Col. Ralph E. Switzer, Grandview (Mo.) Air Force Base physician, stopped at the accident scene on U.S. 36 and applied compresses. The doctor said the girl stopped breathing twice on the way to the hospital but was revived by artificial respiration.

Her condition was reported as serious last night but hospital attendants at Missouri Methodist Hospital said she had a "fairly good night."

The accident occurred when a car driven by Judy's mother, Mrs. Gene Botts, and an automobile driven by Roy Horner, Troy, collided as Horner's car pulled out of a service station.

RIOTERS BATTLE BOMBAY POLICE AS NEHRU SPEAKS

BOMBAY, India, June 2 (AP) —Nearly 5000 police officers and home guards today battled hundreds of anti-government rioters trying to break up a meeting of Prime Minister Nehru with his Congress party.

The demonstrations continued tonight. Crowds jeered Nehru.

A government statement said 1375 demonstrators were arrested and taken to overcrowded Bombay jails. Eighteen policemen, including two deputy police commissioners, were injured in the stone-throwing.

As the rioters shouted against the government's plan to split up Bombay state along language lines, Nehru told his followers gathered inside a huge tent he would not tolerate violent agitation in India "even if the Congress party is destroyed."

The fighting was the worst mob violence in Bombay since last February's riots over the language issue. At that time police fired into the mobs, killing between 100 and 400 persons.

The government plans to split Bombay state three ways: A northern state for the Gujerati language adherents who speak the native tongue of the late Mohandas K. Gandhi; a southern state for Marathi speaking Indians, and the City of Bombay, officially bilingual and administered by the federal government. About half of Bombay's 3,000,000 people speak Marathi and want the city to become the capital of the proposed southern state.

The pro-Marathi followers defied a police bar on processions and marched in massed formations to the seafront meeting ground where the Congress party members had assembled.

The police and Bombay home guards ringed the area and charged repeatedly with their clubs into the formations. The demonstrators fought back with stones and sticks. The car of Bombay State governor H. K. Mahtab was mobbed, but he was not attacked. Police used tear gas to disperse other crowds.

Inside the tent Congress leaders conducted the session nervously, apprehensive of shouting and jeering outside their enclosure. The one exception was Nehru, who lashed out against agitators.

"We cannot submit to the present upsurge of violence even if we die in the process," he told his party members whose attendance had been sharply cut by early threats by demonstrators. "Are we civilized men or beasts that we should tolerate this?"

FIXING SOIL BANK RULES DELAYED BY DISPUTE OF TOP OFFICIALS

Agriculture Department May Need 10 Days or Two Weeks to Make Eligibility Regulations.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) —There are signs that President Eisenhower's approval of the new farm bill largely caught the Department of Agriculture unprepared to put the soil bank into effect this year.

The President signed the bill, with its $1,200,000,000 annual soil bank program, Monday and Secretary of Agriculture Benson outlined in a general way Thursday how it would work on 1956 crops.

But department officials said today it may be another 10 days or two weeks before the agency's local agricultural adjustment and conservation committees will be able to tell individual farmers whether they are qualified for the program.

They said top officials had not yet decided on regulations defining eligibility because of a conflict of views.

The department had done much work on the soil bank—a system of paying farmers to take land out of the production of surplus crops. But that work was done on the assumption that the plan would be offered before the spring planting season.

As it turned out, final congressional action on a bill acceptable to the Administration came late in the season, and not without Administration criticism of what it called congressional delays.

Offering the soil bank after crops had been planted posed problems not contemplated earlier, officials explained.

Benson told a press conference Thursday that farmers "in areas where crops are not too far advanced will be able to earn (soil bank) payments in connection with 1946 crops of corn, wheat, cotton, peanuts, rice and tobacco.

This was interpreted at the conference—and without contradiction from Benson—as meaning that farmers would be permitted to plow under immature crops regardless of their condition and get soil bank payments.

Department officials said later, however, that this was not necessarily correct. They said some top officials oppose payments on land which was already destined to crop failure or near failure because of bad weather or other conditions. Benson himself was not available, being on a tour of drouth areas in Iowa and Nebraska.

Making payments on land where crops were poor, some officials argued, would violate the intent of the soil bank, which is to obtain a cut in production for every dollar spent. Such payments, they said, would be drouth relief, or poor crop relief, because nature had already reduced production on the acreage.

On the other hand some officials—backed by farm state Congressmen—want the payments offered to distressed farmers as a means of tiding them over.

Benson was described as siding with the group that would bar payments except in cases where they would result in an actual cut in production.

Until this issue is settled, it will not be possible to draw regulations for use of local farmer committees in determining soil bank eligibility.

Under consideration is a proposal that drouth-plagued farmers be admitted to the program, but at lower rates of payment than are offered to other farmers.

JUDGE FITZGIBBON TO SEEK TO RETAIN POST IN ELECTION

Judge David W. FitzGibbon will seek retention as a judge of the Court of Criminal Correction in the general election next November, he said yesterday.

In a letter, Judge FitzGibbon filed for the position with the Missouri Secretary of State as is required under the Missouri nonpartisan court plan.

Judge FitzGibbon will seek his fifth four-year term on the court, which has exclusive original jurisdiction over offenses that constitute misdemeanors under state law, as distinct from city ordinances, and hears appeals from the city's police courts. He was first elected to the court in 1940. He lives at 2 Arundel avenue.

Monkey A.C. Aims Were High at Start, Rowdies Moved In After War Years

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Boys Who Belonged to Scout Troop Started Club — Brawl at Picnic in County Ended Its History.

By CARL R. BALDWIN
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

The Monkey Athletic Club, which is disbanding because of discredit brought by a small group of rowdy members, once was a spirited organization dedicated to sportsmanship and brotherhood, a study of the club's history by the Post-Dispatch disclosed yesterday.

Senior members of the club gave up the fight to continue after repeated outbursts of antisocial behavior by junior members which culminated in a brutal fight at a high school fraternity picnic in St. Louis county last Sunday.

A number of St. Louisans who organized, directed and participated in activities of the Monkey A.C. in the early 1940s, expressed shock when they heard the news of the latest trouble the club was experiencing.

Former members, some of whom are now respected business men, doctors and college professors, found it difficult to digest the news that the current Monkeys were the subject of an investigation by the Police Department's hoodlum squad, that the Monkeys' entry in the Missouri Rugby Union had been suspended for unsportsmanlike conduct, and that 22 members have had brushes with the police.

Causino Disturbed.

One of those most concerned with the deterioration of the Monkey A.C., which is only one phase of a growing problem of youthful delinquency, was Joseph H. Causino, executive secretary of the South Side Y.M.C.A. The veteran welfare worker once had the Monkeys under his wing.

"I returned to the city from the Y.M.C.A. camp Tuesday and got an earful of the worst news about boys going wrong that I have ever heard," Causino related.

He referred to the Monkey A.C. fight, the "bombing" of a Missouri state trooper's car with a log dropped from an overpass by an 18-year-old youth, and an armed invasion of Fairmont City by a group of St. Louis boys.

"Nothing like this has happened in my 26 years of working with boys," Causino said. "It is confusing to me. What are the parents doing about it? What are the churches doing? What are the schools and the public doing?" He shook his head.

Change in Types.

Causino pointed out that the Monkey A.C. members who caused the trouble in St. Louis county were an entirely different type from those who belonged when the organization was enrolled under the banner of his Young Men's Brotherhood in 1940.

"The Monkeys were an outstanding club then," he said. "They had parents' nights and sisters' nights, excellent social and athletic programs. Sixty members went into service in World War II and I can't recall one who received a dishonorable discharge."

What happened to the Monkey A.C. is a classic example of the difference between a boys' club that is directed by qualified leaders toward a proper goal and a boys' club that runs itself, policemen and social workers told the Post-Dispatch.

Causino put this way:

"The Monkey A.C., as it was constituted when this trouble broke, was built on sand instead of a firm foundation. The boys never learned to bump elbows and remain friendly with opponents. Instead of being properly directed they became misguided missiles."

Causino said the Y.M.C.A. was taking over sponsorship of the Monkey Cubs, a group of 25 boys aged 14 to 17. The group will be renamed and will participate in the Y's Brotherhood athletic program.

Scout Troop Background.

Nucleus of the original Monkey A.C. was a closely knit group of boys who attended Sherman School in South St. Louis. They belonged to Boy Scout Troop 74, and were noted for their aggressiveness and loyalty to each other.

A former associate said the boys earned the nickname "Monkeys" because of their antics at a Boy Scout summer camp in 1937. After that the troop became known as the "Monkey Troop" and adopted an official neckerchief bearing the figure of a monkey.

When the boys outgrew the Scout program they decided to remain together in a club. So the Monkey A.C. was organized and it was enrolled in the Y.M.C.A. activities.

The club's sponsor and coach from 1940 through 1944 was Alfred Londe, who had grown up in the Sherman School neighborhood and had established an excellent record as student and football star at the University of Missouri. He was an outstanding quarterback and halfback.

Under the tutelage of Londe and Barney Brimmer, another good St. Louis athlete, the club enjoyed great success in sports. Many could not continue their formal education after high school but earned recognition for athletic prowess with the Monkeys.

The club looked for future replacements by organizing younger boys from the neighborhood into Junior and Cub groups. Their sisters even became members and were known as the Monkeyettes.

World War II brought a temporary end to the club after most of the members entered service.

Some of the Monkey alumni got together and revived the club as a social group after they returned from service. The Monkey A.C. caught on again, but newcomers took over the athletic program. The Monkeys became an independent organization without sponsorship by any social group.

In Trouble With Police.

Along about 1949, police records show, some of the Monkey A.C. members began to get into trouble. Names of 22 Monkeys were entered on police blotters between 1949 and 1956, mostly for such offenses as disturbing the peace, affray, assault and speeding.

A few were charged with more serious offenses, including manslaughter, leaving the scene of an accident and interfering with police officers.

In recent years the Monkeys have had from one to two teams entered in the Missouri Rugby Union each season. Organizers of the union are college alumni and some of the players learned the game in college.

Several years ago Monkeys sent a team to Cambridge, Mass., to play a game with Harvard's rugby team. The Monkeys lost a close contest.

A spokesman for the Missouri Rugby Union said individual members of the Monkeys were well liked and were considered "swell fellows" by others in the league. But some of the Juniors, including several involved in the county picnic scrap, have become increasingly more "boisterous," he said.

Several games had to be halted this year while referees admonished Monkeys for fighting. The Monkeys finally were suspended with 10 minutes to go in a recent game. The suspension held good for the last two games of the season.

Complaints by Neighbors.

Despite the actions of some of the Junior group, the Monkey A.C. as an organization had come to the attention of police only infrequently. Several times persons living in the neighborhood of the Monkey A.C. clubhouse at 1558 Thurman avenue complained about the members engaging in loud talk as meetings were breaking up.

The clubhouse, next door to a tavern, is in the neighborhood of the Thirty-ninth street business district north of Tower Grove Park.

Other social athletic groups were aware of the wild element in the Monkeys, the Post-Dispatch was told.

A member of one such group said directors of social functions kept a sharp lookout for invasions by members of the Monkeys.

"Some of those guys were always trying to crash somebody else's party," he said. "They would push in, get on their muscle and start a fight. We kept them away by stopping them at the door."

Causino, who sponsors 40 successful boys' clubs in his Brotherhood program, added a footnote to the history of the Monkey A.C.

"A boys' club is a wonderful thing," he said, "but it must be more than just a vehicle to play a game. It must have qualified leadership that can properly direct the tremendous physical energy of youth. Without this leadership the club's headquarters becomes just a corner hangout for a bunch of roughnecks."

E. ST. LOUIS ACTS TO SILENCE NOISY AUTO MUFFLERS

The ear-splitting courting habits of East St. Louis youths have once more aroused the ire of Police Commissioner Russell T. Beebe, who announced yesterday a campaign to stamp out noisy automobile mufflers.

Each spring, he explained wearily, the boys surrender to the urge to doctor up their mufflers so that the greatest possible racket is produced when motors are gunned. The object is to attract the attention of young women, he said.

This annual phenomenon attracted Beebe's attention when church services he was attending recently were interrupted by the roar of unmuffled motors. The commissioner directed two police officers to work full time making arrests regardless of the consequences to romance.

ARSENAL BUS EXTENSION IS EFFECTIVE TOMORROW

The outer portion of the Arsenal bus line will be extended starting tomorrow to permit transfer connections to be made to Chippewa and Cherokee busses, Public Service Co. announced yesterday.

Under the old routing, busses went south in Roger place from Utah street to Oleatha avenue, then looped back to Utah via Oleatha and Oak Hill avenue.

Starting tomorrow, busses will continue south in Roger to Phillips avenue, then loop west in Phillips and north in Oak Hill to return to Utah.

CLOSED HEARING HELD IN ADVANCE OF RED INQUIRY

One of Witnesses Said to Have Once Been FBI Informer—Public Sessions Tomorrow.

A subcommittee of the House Un-American Activities Committee, which will open public hearings here starting tomorrow, held an unannounced closed-door session at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson yesterday.

The scheduled hearings will be in the courtroom of United States District Judge Roy W. Harper, starting at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Attending yesterday's secret session were Representative Morgan Moulder (Dem.), Camdenton, Mo., subcommittee chairman, and Representative Gordon H. Scherer (Rep.), Ohio, who has replaced Representative Bernard W. (Pat) Kearney (Rep.), New York, on the committee.

One of yesterday's witnesses was Joseph Schoemehl, a 73-year-old retired night watchman, of the Rex Hotel, 10 North Tenth street.

He told reporters he was permitted to testify yesterday rather than at the open hearings because of his health. He said he suffered a paralytic stroke in 1937.

Another person heard yesterday afternoon, Loyal Hammack, a salesman from Ste. Genevieve, told reporters after his appearance that he had volunteered as a witness because he "wanted to see Communist infiltration weeded out of my part of the country."

He said he gave information on a jurisdictional labor dispute involving the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers and another union.

"You know the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers is a Communist-led outfit," he remarked. He said he preferred not to say whether he had ever been a member of the Communist party himself.

Witness Against Five.

Schoemehl was a witness at the Smith Act trial of five Communists here in 1954, who were charged with conspiring to advocate overthrow of the Government by force. He testified then that he had belonged to the Communist party here after 1945 as an FBI informant.

Chairman Moulder said purpose of the hearing yesterday was a preliminary review and briefing for the benefit of counsel and investigations.

Frank S. Tavenner Jr., committee counsel, said the committee had leads on some witnesses who did not appear at the 1954 trial.

Among the matters the committee will investigate are infiltration of defense plants here by persons suspected of Communist activities. It is also planned to question persons who have engaged in such diverse activities as urging greater relief expenditures during the depression, participating in race relations conferences, signing "peace" petitions and advocating the cause of the Loyalists during the Spanish Civil War.

Use of Fifth Amendment.

A statement suggesting that witnesses before the committee invoke the Fifth Amendment has been circulated by the Communist party of St. Louis.

The Bar Association of St. Louis has assigned lawyers for five witnesses pursuant to its offer to assist in obtaining counsel if prospective witnesses experienced difficulties in enlisting legal aid in "an unpopular cause."

FRENCH TO HONOR ALL NANCIES AT BASE NEAR NANCY

The French city of Nancy, birthplace of three little orphan sisters recently adopted by Mr. and Mrs. John C. McGuire of St. Louis, has decided to make an official display of gratitude to Americans.

This will take the form of crimson scarfs embroidered with the city's coat of arms, which will be presented to all American women named Nancy at a nearby United States Air Force Base.

The three orphans, aged 5, 6 and 7, arrived from France May 25 to make their home with their new parents, who live at 3855 McDonald avenue. The adoption was arranged with the aid of friends of the McGuires at the air base near Nancy.

AUTO FATALITIES INCREASE, 47 HERE SO FAR THIS YEAR

Thus far in 1956, 47 persons have died in traffic accidents in St. Louis, compared to 38 killed in the corresponding period in 1955, the Police Department traffic analytical bureau reported yesterday.

Officers said the increase shown this year over 1955 probably would be greater by the end of this month, because in June of last year, only three persons were killed, far fewer than average in a month.

Japanese War Payments.

TOKYO, June 2 (AP)—Japan is starting this month to pay $10,000,000 to The Netherlands for suffering of Dutch nationals interned by the Japanese in the East Indies (Indonesia) in World War II. Payments will be spread over five years.

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Dunlap, 8625 Argyle avenue, Charlack, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary Wednesday with a reception for family and friends at their home.

Dunlap, 73 years old, retired three years ago after working 57 years as a telegrapher for Western Union. Mrs. Dunlap is also 73. The pair has three sons and eight grandchildren.

POLICE WIVES ORGANIZE NEW SOCIAL GROUP

Leaders Say They Might Act Where Welfare of Husbands Is Concerned.

St. Louis policemen are prohibited from belonging to any organization without approval of the chief, but their wives are under no such bar and a group of them have formed the Police Wives Association, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday. Present membership is about 200.

Mrs. Gregory E. Sullivan, 3834A Lee avenue, corresponding secretary of the association and wife of a patrolman assigned to Penrose Street District, said the organization was intended to be social but added: "I wouldn't say that if the occasion came up we wouldn't take up something where the welfare of policemen was involved."

She said the association founders were aware of the department rule against police membership in unauthorized organizations, but felt strongly that the rule had no bearing whatsoever on wives.

"We don't feel that our husbands are responsible in any way for what we do," she said.

In 1945 about 900 policemen here formed a union, with a no-strike clause in its charter, but Gov. Phil M. Donnelly and the Police Board frowned on the activity. Their ban on union membership was upheld by the courts as was their ouster of several union leaders.

The wives' association's next meeting is a 8 p.m. Wednesday at the De Andries Knights of Columbus Hall, 3408 Union boulevard, at which plans will be completed for the organization's first big affair, a dance June 16 at the same hall. Tickets will be $4 a couple.

Mrs. Sullivan said 1000 postcard notices of the Wednesday meeting have been sent to wives. The invitation asks the recipient to "bring another policeman's wife with you."

Underlying motive for the organization, she continued, was simply to provide a means for police families to become better acquainted.

Government Presented 47 Witnesses in Effort to Show That Defendants Conspired to Halt the Prosecution of Tax Evader Irving Sachs.

By JAMES A. KEARNS JR.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

As the trial of Matthew J. Connelly and T. Lamar Caudle shifts to the defense tomorrow, the prosecution will strive to keep unshaken 17 days of testimony intended to prove that the defendants conspired to help tax evader Irving Sachs to the detriment of the Government they served.

Forty-seven witnesses were put on the stand to detail a story of oil royalty payments; prolonged and unusual medical examinations of Sachs; calls to and from the White House in behalf of Sachs's attorney, and interminable delays in prosecution.

The Sachs case led a charmed life in Government circles from the time the investigation began in 1945 until he entered a plea of guilty in United States District Court here in early 1951. Even then, the man charged with evading $128,721 in income taxes got off with a $40,000 fine. He never went to prison.

Government prosecutors have tried to convince the jury that Sachs would not have fared so well without the help of the two Truman Administration officials—Connelly, who held the important post as the President's appointments secretary, and Caudle, head of the Justice Department's tax division.

Government's Case.

Connelly and Caudle were not on the Government's side, as they should have been, the prosecution charged. Testimony was introduced to show that the two men acted much like defense attorneys for Sachs, accused of violating a law of the United States.

All this was done because of something more than just sympathy for a man who claimed he was too ill because of epilepsy to be prosecuted for tax evasion, the Government contended.

A major point in the prosecution's case is evidence that Harry I. Schwimmer, attorney for Sachs, bought an oil royalty for Connelly for $3600 and another for Caudle for $3300.

Tom L. Evans of Kansas City, a personal friend of President Truman, testified Schwimmer told him in 1949 he "would like to do something" for Connelly because Connelly had been "so nice and wonderful to me."

Testimony also was offered showing Connelly's indorsement on 25 checks for $1418, representing oil royalty payments, and Caudle's indorsement on four similar checks for about $200. The Connelly checks were sent to his home rather than his office in the White House.

Whether the defendants actually received oil royalties, the dividends paid on them, and under what circumstances are matters for the jury to decide.

Loan From Evans.

Also brought to the jury's attention was $750 borrowed by Connelly from Evans Nov. 11, 1949, "for purchase of an oil royalty from Harry Schwimmer."

Evans testified the $750 was repaid the following day by Schwimmer, but after Connelly was indicted last year his attorney sent a check to Evans, enclosing $750 as repayment for the loan.

Near the close of its case, the Government introduced an entry from Schwimmer's journal. It showed $10,000 received from Shu-Stiles Inc., Sach's firm, in October 1949. Below was a notation: "Paid out oil royalty, M.C. $4200."

The journal then disclosed the remaining $5800 was "held in escrow to be paid out depending on whether I. Sachs case is dropped." No explanation was offered for this statement and "M.C." was not identified.

The prosecution presented testimony intended to convince the jurors Schwimmer had easy access to high Government officials for conferences on the Sachs case, especially when Connelly, calling from the White House, reminded Charles Oliphant, then chief counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau, of a conference Oliphant was to have with Schwimmer that afternoon.

"He asked me to call you and let you know we know him," Connelly told Oliphant, referring to Schwimmer.

Appointments With Caudle.

On at least two occasions, the President's appointments secretary also arranged appointments for the tax evader's attorney with Caudle, the evidence indicated.

The record was clear that Schwimmer made persistent efforts to help his client. He first argued Sachs had been promised immunity because of voluntary disclosures about his tax delinquencies.

When this argument failed, the situation looked bad, but then Schwimmer learned, in a conference with Caudle in 1949, that the Justice Department's current policy was to forego prosecution of tax evaders when danger to health was involved.

Schwimmer "went for this information like a trout for a fly," Wyllys Newcomb, chief Government counsel, said in his opening statement.

An extended series of medical examinations followed, the Caudle-Schwimmer conference. Dr. Robert M. Bell, a Public Health Service physician, was the first to examine Sachs. He said the possibility of a fatal outcome from prosecution was "remote."

Schwimmer, apparently unhappy about this conclusion, had five other St. Louis physicians examine his client. They all reported Sachs was too ill to stand prosecution.

Caudle said he was "impressed very much" by these conclusions and sent the Sachs case back to the Bureau of Internal Revenue for civil settlement. Government evidence disclosed. However, Oliphant, chief counsel for the Bureau, and Arthur Cunningham, one of Caudle's chief assistants, were convinced there should be prosecution.

Cunningham recommended prosecution at least four times, but Caudle, in a memorandum to another assistant, said it would be "sadistic" to prosecute Sachs because of his health.

Finally, Caudle asked for a board of psychiatrists at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, a federal institution, to make a report based, not on a personal examination of Sachs, but on the statements by the five St. Louis physicians plus affidavits from Sachs's relatives.

The board decided Sachs was too ill to prosecute. Newcomb charged the reports given the board were "loaded" in the tax evader's favor.

Dr. Bernard A. Cruvant, one of the three psychiatrists on the board, testified he was approached by a physician and an attorney who wanted him to examine Sachs. This, he said, was only a few days before Dr. Cruvant was informed he was to be on the Government's examining board. He declined the invitation to make a personal examination of Sachs.

A Scrap of Paper.

Among the Government's exhibits introduced at the trial was a scrap of paper bearing Dr. Cruvant's name and telephone number at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Written by Schwimmer, the note was found in Caudle's effects in North Carolina last year.

While trying to get Sachs free of tax troubles, Schwimmer became ill. He told an associate that Connelly had arranged with the Justice Department for continuing the tax case during his extended illness, a witness testified.

Another Government witness recalled that Schwimmer, having been advised by Oliphant that the Sachs case would be handled as any other, without preferential treatment, said he would call Connelly.

In the meantime, the case remained bottled u pin Washington. E. Riley Campbell, head of the Internal Revenue Bureau's penal division, testified it had "a flag on it," referring to a bright-colored card attached to the folder indicating it was to receive personal attention of the chief counsel.

Finally, Drake Watson, then United States Attorney in St. Louis, heard about the case and sent a letter of inquiry to the Justice Department. Later, United States District Judge George H. Moore requested Watson to present a number of tax cases, including the one involving Sachs, to the federal grand jury.

Indictment Returned.

Government evidence indicated Watson got little satisfaction from Caudle but finally Peyton Ford, then Deputy Attorney General, authorized grand jury action. Judge Moore testified that the day Sachs was indicted in 1951 he received a call from Schwimmer in Kansas City.

The attorney asked the judge to stop the indictment and stated he had discussed the Sachs case with someone in the White House. Pressed by Judge Moore for the identity of the person to whom he spoke, Schwimmer said it may have been "Matt Connelly."

Efforts were made by Government counsel to prove Caudle continued his attempts to help Sachs almost to the day the tax evader appeared in court and was fined.

Milton Weiffenbach, who was chief federal probation officer here, described a telephone call from Caudle in 1951 in which the tax division chief said Sachs should never have been indicted.

Caudle at the time disclaimed a letter, sent by an assistant over his name, recommending a heavy fine and jail sentence for Sachs, Weiffenbach testified.

Before the case goes to the jury in United States District Judge Rubey M. Hulen's court, the threads of Government evidence will be pulled together by Chief Counsel Newcomb in his final argument.

In the meantime, Connelly and Caudle will have their day in court this week.

G.O.P. DROPPING CHOTINER AS AID IN CAMPAIGN

er he nor his clients were charged with misconduct.

Subcommittee counsel Robert F. Kennedy and investigator Carmine S. Bellino are in California conducting an on-the-spot investigation. Bellino is an accountant who specializes in analysis of bank accounts and records.

Lawyer For Contractors.

The subcommittee brought up Chotiner's name while investigating reports of graft in military uniform purchases. Chotiner testified he had served as attorney for blacklisted contractors Herman and Samuel Kravitz and Joseph (Joey) Abrams.

He testified May 2 that he talked with the White House staff about problems of some of his clients. He denied he used influence or mentioned Nixon's name on behalf of his clients in his contacts with the government.

The White House said the clients were North American Airlines and California Central Airlines.

Chotiner also testified May 2 that he was attorney for the late Marco Reginelli in a deportation case. Kennedy called Reginelli the top hoodlum in the Philadelphia-New Jersey area. He died in Baltimore last week.

Chotiner wrote to McClellan May 26 that he had talked to several Justice Department officials about the Reginelli case, including Deputy Attorney General William P. Rogers, an old friend of Nixon's.

Sought List of Clients.

Earlier, McClellan wrote to Chotiner asking for a list of his clients since January 1953; how he got the cases, and whether he was paid in cash or by check. He also asked what persons in government Chotiner got in contact about his clients' affairs.

A reliable source said the subcommittee also had subpenaed records of South West Airways Co. represented by Chotiner before the Civil Aeronautics Board. Chotiner wrote to McClellan that he had been retained by the firm last October, but refused to comply with a McClellan request for the names of all persons in government or Congress with whom he discussed the case.

A CAB spokesman said the case involved unsuccessful efforts by South West Airways to prevent United Airlines from competing with it at Santa Barbara and Monterey, Calif.

Chotiner has been active in Republican affairs for 20 years. He was a top party strategist in 1952 and 1954.

Eisenhower Comment.

At his May 4 press conference, President Eisenhower was asked about Chotiner's testimony before the subcommittee that White House aids had given him some assistance in some business he had with the government.

Mr. Eisenhower answered with considerable heat that he had issued orders soon after taking office that government officials should "throw out instantly" anyone claiming any special influence or privilege in dealing with federal agencies.

Chotiner had testified that White House aids Maxwell Rabb, secretary to the Cabinet, and Charles A. Willis, former patronage chief, had checked the status of his cases and arranged appointments for him.

The President said he had not checked Chotiner's testimony in detail. But he said "there is absolutely no grounds" for believing that his aids had done anything wrong.

"In no case did any connection he had with the White House benefit him one bit," Mr. Eisenhower said. "I can't believe that anybody on my staff would ever be guilty of an indiscretion."

RUSSIA DROPPING THREE MINISTRIES IN STREAMLINING

sion will be formed under the cabinet "to be charged with codifying and systematizing Soviet legislation," Tass reported. The commission also will draft legislation to be introduced in the Council of Ministers.

The duties of the Road Transport Ministry are being taken over by a national roadbuilding administration under the cabinet.

The Ministry of Inland Waterways will be succeeded by new waterways ministries in each of the republics concerned.

By the United Press.

The central justice agencies and the smaller courts in the republics recently have been criticized by Communist party leaders for certain "illegalities" during the reign of the late Premier Stalin.

A sweeping campaign was launched to right the legal wrongs of the Stalin-era courts, including the release of political prisoners.

Soviet leaders also have announced their intention of clarifying certain laws to tighten the operations of the justice agencies and "protect the rights of Soviet citizens."

TUNED-UP PHONE SOUNDS C SHARP LIKE A CLARINET

CRYSTAL LAKE, Ill., June 2 (UP) — A clarinet-like musical note sounded in a Crystal Lake home yesterday, and it may have sounded the death-knell for the telephone bell that has summoned people to the phone for three-quarters of a century.

A "musical tone" electronic telephone was installed in the home of Mrs. Ralph Dannehy, housewife and mother of two. It was the first to be installed in what is to be a year-long experiment among more than 300 Illinois Bell Telephone Co. subscribers.

A company spokesman said the new telephone may become a part of the Bell system's electronic telephone exchange of the future.

The phone sounds a sustained note instead of the conventional jingling bell.

Mrs. Dannehy said it was "a lot more pleasant."

VOTERS OF O'FALLON, ILL., APPROVE NEW HIGH SCHOOL

Voters in the O'Fallon (Ill.) Township High School District approved the selection of a site for a new high school and the issuance of $890,000 in bonds to finance its construction in a special election yesterday, School Superintendent Clyde McDaniel reported.

The site approved is on the Holliday farm east of the town. It was approved, 722 to 627, while the bond issue passed, 722 to 621.

Voters of the O'Fallon Community Consolidated School District No. 90 authorized the purchase of the present high school and its alteration at a cost of $330,000 for which bonds were approved. Another bond issue of $60,000 for repairing and altering present grade school buildings also passed.

PROTESTANTS BREAK LAWS IN SPAIN, CATHOLIC SAYS

MADRID, June 2 (AP) — A high official of the Roman Catholic Church today accused Spanish Protestants of breaking the laws of Spain with United States and British assistance.

Mgr. Zacarias de Vizcarra, bishop consiliary of the lay organization Catholic Action, made the accusation in an article commenting on the recent consecration in Madrid of a Protestant Episcopal bishop. The article was published in the weekly magazine Ecclesia, organ of Catholic Action. The prelate objected to the dissemination in Spain of Protestant literature, including Protestant Bibles.

Annual Rotary Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, June 2 (AP)—Some 9000 Rotarians and members of their families from more than 80 countries of Europe, Asia, Africa and North, South and Central America will gather here for the annual convention of the Rotary International next week. Convention delegates started registering today.

the Communist party of the U.S.S.R. and editor-in-chief of Pravda."

Conspicuous by Absence.

Molotov was conspicuous by his absence. It was made clear to Yugoslav leaders at that time, though they were not told in so many words, that Shepilov was the man to see. The Soviet-Russian talks were held from May 27 to June 2 and the Soviet delegation made every effort to assert the high standing of Shepilov.

It was shortly after the Belgrade affair that Harold Macmillan, then British Foreign Secretary, told reporters with little qualification that Molotov was "out." The report could not be attributed to Macmillan at the time.

It was obvious to those who attended the meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers in San Francisco last June, when the ministers made preparations for the "summit" meeting at Geneva in July, that Molotov had been shorn of the power of decision he once exerted.

In the private sessions of the ministers he repeatedly said that before he could give an answer to a question he would have to consult "those to whom we are responsible." There were several specific incidents during the ministers' meeting that raised the question of Molotov's status; these were discussed in a Post-Dispatch article last July 2.

Contrast in Demeanor.

Diplomats at San Francisco noted the contrast in Molotov's demeanor last June and his behavior in January 1954, when the Big Four foreign ministers convened in West Berlin. At that time the since-demoted Georgi M. Malenkov had become Premier. Malenkov had appointed as his principal aids Bulganin, Molotov, Lazar M. Kaganovich and Lavrenty P. Beria. The latter was named head of the secret police.

In July 1953, Beria was expelled from the Communist party as an enemy of the people; he was executed in December of the same year. A year ago in Belgrade Khrushchev said:

"We . . . ascribe without hesitation the aggravations (resulting in the 1948 Russian-Yugoslav break) to the provocative role" played by Beria and other "recently exposed enemies of the people." This accusation was a surprise. Beria, of course, was dead and the Kremlin drive to downgrade Stalin had not begun. The facts of record were that the provocative role was played by Stalin and Molotov.

Russian, Yugoslav Conflict.

Russian and Yugoslav policies began to conflict in 1943. In 1947 Stalin set up the Communist Information Bureau, or Cominform, an organization he expected to employ to dominate Communist parties in other countries. Yugoslavs thought the Cominform, now recently dissolved, was aimed particularly at them. They agreed to enter it with reluctance.

The Cominform was unsuccessful in assuring control of Yugoslav Communists and in 1948 Stalin began to wage a campaign of pressure and subversion against Yugoslavia. There was a bitter exchange of correspondence between the Soviet Communist party and the Yugoslav Communist party. The Soviet letters charged among other things that there were so many "bourgeois spies" in the Yugoslav Ministry of Foreign Affairs that it was not safe to conduct diplomatic relations.

The Soviet letters were signed by two men—Stalin and Molotov.

Tito Expelled.

In June 1948 the Cominform denounced Tito and other Yugoslavs for "anti-party, anti-Soviet opinions incompatible with Marxism-Leninism" and for favoring the West. The Yugoslavs were told to admit their errors or face expulsion from the Communist party. The Yugoslavs said the charges were false and accused Russia of trying to undermine the Yugoslav state. Tito was expelled.

Having failed in the attempt to dominate the Yugoslav Communists, Stalin and Molotov changed course. Molotov became more conciliatory. But he claimed the Yugoslavs had altered their policies, not the Russians. His arguments were rejected by Tito, who asserted the Yugoslavs had not deviated from their independent course.

Earlier this year the Russians changed their pitch on the responsibility for the Cominform break. In his secret speech to the twentieth Soviet Communist party congress last February Khrushchev reportedly charged Stalin (not Beria) with personal responsibility for the failure of Russian-Yugloslav policy. He did not mention Molotov personally, but he did say that Soviet foreign policy was too rigid and must be improved and made more flexible. Molotov told the congress in effect he still opposed giving in to Yugoslavia.

Forced to Take Action.

With this background it is easy to see that the Russians were forced to take action in the case of Molotov before Tito arrived in Moscow today. With Stalin dead, Molotov was the last barrier to resumption of good relations with Yugoslavia, which has been a major aim of Soviet foreign policy. Yugoslavia was the first and only satellite successfully to break the Russian hold and the defection has been a source of deep concern to the Kremlin.

Yugoslavs felt that little of a positive nature could come out of the Tito visit while Molotov held office. They think the replacement of Molotov proves Tito was right and has not changed, and that one of Tito's aims, the elimination of the cult of Stalinism, is further advanced.

There have been several additional unconnected hints in the past year or so that Molotov's star was waning. Last September he apologized publicly for saying the Soviet Union only now is building socialism. According to orthodox Communism, socialism already is in existence.

Jean Hersholt, Screen Actor And Radio's 'Dr. Christian,' Dies

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

JEAN HERSHOLT

HOLLYWOOD, June 2 (AP)—Actor Jean Hersholt, the "Dr. Christian" of radio, died today after a long illness. He was 69 years old.

Mr. Hersholt, a native of Denmark, was famed in the motion picture industry as a humanitarian. He founded the Motion Picture Relief Fund for 18 years.

He was a former president of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences which annually awards the Oscars for the industry's best performances.

Honored Recently.

Death came at his home this morning, only two weeks after he had been honored by Hollywood's great and near-great at a civic banquet.

They saw a man who looked like death was near. Mary Pickford, an old-time friend, broke into tears when she saw him.

She later told a reporter: "Thank God, we are honoring this great man before it is too late."

Mr. Hersholt, who had three operations in the last year, had left a sickbed to attend the testimonial which honored his fiftieth year as an actor.

The long dinner was a trial to the actor who had to leave before the tributes were finished. But he was there long enough to hear himself praised by California Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, Miss Pickford, actor Charles Coburn, producer L. B. Mayer, studio head Y. Frank Freeman and, via telegrams, from President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon.

It was Miss Pickford who summed up the evening's accolades with a simple speech.

"Jean," she said, "we respect you, we honor you and we love you. Denmark has lost a great citizen. We've gained one."

Many Weep.

As Mr. Hersholt got up weakly to speak, many of the biggest names in the movie industry wept unashamedly. He called it "the most memorable evening of my whole life."

His most recent illness stemmed from after-effects of an operation three months ago when he had his prostate gland removed. The others were for the removal of the appendix and a minor back operation.

Mrs. Allan Hersholt, his daughter-in-law, said the year-long siege with surgery was just too weakening. She added, however, that doctors had found no malignancy.

He had acted in more than 450 films, he recalled recently, adding proudly that his debut was in the first film ever made in Denmark. The desire to act came naturally to him: his mother was an actress and his father a makeup artist and the owner of a theaterical wig-making establishment.

Played Dr. Dafoe.

Probably the single role that brought him the widest fame was that of Dr. Dafoe, in 1936, in "The Country Doctor," a film about the Dionne quintuplets. Following this he launched his famous "Dr. Christian" role.

Last year he made his first film in 16 years, radio and a "Dr. Christian" having kept him busy in the intervening years.

He came to Hollywood in 1913 and got a job with Thomas Ince which paid him $12 a week. He worked in as many as four or five films a day, often playing an Indian and a cowboy in the same movie.

His screen portrayals made him famous but not many people were aware that he was also a makeup man (he made up the late Rudolph Valentino for "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse") and a director. He directed many Zane Grey westerns.

Cast as Villain.

In 1922 Mary Pickford cast him as the villain in her "Tess of the Storm Country" and he immediately became the most-sought-after heavy in pictures. Some of his best dirty work was in "Don Q," the Douglas Fairbanks film, Erich Von Stroheim's "Greed," and Sam Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas." He thought he was meaner—and better—in "Greed" than in anything he ever did for films.

He was a former president of the Motion Picture Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Mr. Hersholt also was recognized as a leading authority on the works of the Danish author, Hans Christian Andersen. Several years ago he presented to the Library of Congress his collection of Andersen's works, the largest outside of Denmark.

He also made the first complete English translation of Andersen's famed fairy tales.

Mr. Hersholt leaves his wife, Via, and son, Allan, a writer and actor.

Financial Bipartisanship.

FREMONT, Nebr., June 2 (UP)—R. V. Graff, delegate to the Dodge county Democratic convention in Fremont, came up with this idea for putting his party on a firm financial basis: "We could borrow from the Republicans."

DEMOCRATS TAKE BOLD CIVIL RIGHTS STEP IN MICHIGAN

Want National Party Pledge To Work Toward Total End of Racial Segregation.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 2 (AP) — Michigan Democrats made a bold bid for leadership of the national Democratic party today by adopting a "Michigan declaration" pledging the party to work toward the total end of racial segregation in the United States.

Then they adopted a civil rights resolution proposing means by which to eliminate segregation.

The two-day state convention pledged Michigan's 44 votes at the Democratic National Convention Aug. 13 in Chicago to Gov. G. Mennen Williams as a "favorite son" candidate on the first ballot. The delegates gave little indication what they would do with their votes after they were released by the Governor.

The convention did not bind the delegation to vote under the so-called unit rule, which requires delegates to cast their ballots in a block.

Adoption of the "Michigan declaration" and the civil rights resolution foreshadowed possible repetition of the "loyalty oath" fight at the 1952 national convention when Williams and the late Senator Blair Moody of Michiga ndrew the ire of southerners by demanding that they commit themselves in advance to support the party's nominees.

Williams, comparing the "Michigan declaration" to the Declaration of Independence, said the document constitutes a "key that will unlock the aspirations of Americans."

The declaration will be circulated among party organizations throughout the country in hopes it will form the skeleton of the national platform plank on civil rights.

The civil rights resolution accused the Republican party of playing "a shameless game" with the issue of civil rights by claiming progress in that field under the Administration of President Eisenhower.

"Executive and legislative paralysis in the national capital ha spermitted bigotry, violence, interposition, nullification, defiance and economic boycott to grow and expand," the resolution said.

It urged the Democratic party to work for the outlawing of the poll tax, for a federal anti-lynching law, the disqualification of candidates elected where Negroes are prevented from voting, establishment of several federal commissions on civil rights and endorsement and support of the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation.

Delegates from Detroit's first congressional district scrapped for hours over how many national convention delegates should be Negroes. The district lies in a heavily Negro and Polish area of Detroit.

After delaying the start of the convention more than an hour today, harmony was restored and the original slate of delegates selected by the district weeks earlier was seated.

There was one Negro delegate and one alternate among the four delegates and two alternates, and the district supported a Negro as its candidate for delegate-at-large.

The convention also adopted a resolution calling for concrete action to get unemployed Michigan workers back on the job.

Another resolution called for farm crop price supports of 90 per cent of parity, and expansion of federal crop insurance.

GIRL'S ATTACKER SENTENCED

SANTA ANA, Calif., June 2 (AP)—Jack Walker, 25 years old, was sentenced by Superior Judge John Shea yesterday to a minimum of five years in prison on for twice kidnaping and raping the former Miss California, Donna Schurr Brett. Appeal bond was set at $25,000.

Walker, convicted by a jury May 11, was found guilty of twice abducting Mrs. Brett, 19, the second time forcing her out of her home at knife point. Mrs. Brett was the 1955 California titlist in the Miss Universe pageant.

ELECTION ROLLS OPEN THURSDAY IN CITY, COUNTY

Prospective Voters May Register in Precinct for Aug. 7 Primary.

Registration of voters for the Aug. 7 primary elections will be conducted in precincts throughout St. Louis and St. Louis county next Thursday. Polling places in both the city and county will be open from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. to accept new registrations.

Purpose of the intermediate registration is to permit qualified persons who are not registered to become eligible to vote without having to go to the offices of the respective election boards. There are 787 precincts in the city and 360 in the county.

In the city, prospective voters also may register at the office of the Board of Election Commissioners, 208 South Twelfth boulevard, during regular office hours until the close of registration July 14. The office is open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and from 9 a.m. until noon on Saturdays.

The final date for registration of voters in the county will be July 2. Prospective voters who fail to take advantage of the precinct registration may register at the St. Louis County Board of Election Commissioners', at Clayton. The office is open during the same hours as the city election office.

Persons desiring to vote must be citizens of the United States who will be 21 years of age, as well as residents of the state for one year and of the city, or county, for 60 days by Nov. 7, the date of the general election.

An all-out drive for voter registration will be conducted in the city and county by the Teamsters' Joint Council 13, Harold J. Gibbons, president of the council, announced.

Some 150 volunteer workers from various locals of the council in the area will canvass neighborhoods to encourage new voters to register, regardless of party affiliation. Special announcements of the precinct registration will be sent to each of the 40,000 members of the union in the city-county area, Gibbons said.

COMMERCE DEPT. OPPOSES BILL ON MERGER NOTICES

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP) —The Department of Commerce said today a House bill requiring advance notice of corporate mergers would impose "impossible burdens" on the business community.

Philip A. Ray, the department's general counsel, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that the measure is "inflexible" and would cover "thousands of normal business transactions." He said it should be modified to distinguish mergers and purchases that might promote monopoly from "day-to-day" business dealings.

He also suggested that the 90-day advance notice required should be cut to 30 days. Mergers frequently are based on market value of securities which could change substantially in 90 days, he said.

RESERVE COLONEL RETIRES AFTER 6 YEARS AS SERGEANT

Army Reserve Lt. Col. Sidney Ferguson of St. Louis, who has served with the Regular Army since 1950 as a master sergeant, was retired at Fort Leonard Wood last week after 34 years' service, 20 of them on active duty.

In 1946-47 Ferguson, then a reserve major on active duty, was stationed in St. Louis as adjutant of the Missouri Military District. He then served three years in Trieste, Italy and Germany. In 1950 he returned to St. Louis accepted the master sergeancy and served three years as assistant unit adviser of the 5908th USAR School.

At retirement he was serving as a special weapons instructor at Fort Leonard Wood. Ferguson's military career began when he enlisted in 1918. He returned to civilian life in 1919 and was graduated from Mississippi State College in 1923 with a reserve commission as second lieutenant. He is 56 years old and lives with his wife at 9904 Reavis road, Affton.

Bill for Vice President to Take Over if Need Be Urged by Celler

House Committee Head's Proposal to Be Considered by Group That Has Been Studying Problem.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Chairman Emanuel Celler (Dem.), New York, of the House Judiciary Committee said today Congress should provide for these steps to be taken if a President becomes disabled:

The Vice President on his own initiative declares the President unable to exercise his office and takes over as acting President.

Celler said in an interview he will ask the Judiciary Committee to approve a bill directing Vice Presidents to assume this responsibility. A special subcommittee which has made an extensive study of the constitutional problems raised when a President is disabled, but still alive, will meet Wednesday to consider the recommendation.

The subcommittee has sifted dozens of suggestions from constitutional scholars and former officials, including former President Herbert Hoover.

"There are disadvantages to alll of them," Celler commented. "This one seems to have the least disadvantages."

Basically, he said, his proposal assumes the Vice President will be guided by his own sense of responsibility and respect for public opinion.

Celler said public opinion, for example, would not support a Vice President in supplanting a President who suffered an illness like President Eisenhower's heart attack last year.

"The President was not unconscious, the outlook from the start was good, he was soon able to do a limited amount of work," Celler said. "If he had been confined to a hospital for a year, immobilized under an oxygen tent, it would have been different."

There have been two Presidents much more gravely disabled: James A. Garfield, who lingered for 80 days after being fatally wounded by an assassin in 1881, and Woodrow Wilson, ill for long periods in 1919-20

In neither instance did the Vice President step in.

Celler said he thinks Vice Presidents Chester A. Arthur and Thomas R. Marshall would have taken over if there had been on the law books "a simple, brief, but mandatory" provision that the Vice President "shall" determine when a President is unable to function and "shall" assume the powers and duties of the presidency temporarily in case of need.

"The Vice President needs statutory backing to do what the Constitution intends him to do," Celler said. "Naturally, he would hesitate because of loyalty.

"There are objections also that the Vice President should not have the duty of raising the question of presidential inability and determining it because he is a party at interest. The safeguard there is that his action would have to be accepted by the people. I would not expect any Vice President to move except in a case where it would be clearly necessary."

Record Cold in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 2 (AP) —A nip of blackberry winter chilled Indiana with temperatures in the 30s this morning while spring floods billowed downstream in the south. In all recorded weather history, it has never been colder so late in the season. South Bend's low of 35 and Evansville's 41 both set new late-season cold records.

MICHIGAN PLANS EXTRA SESSION TO HIKE JOBLESS AID

Louis, Atlanta, Kansas City, Cleveland, Arlington, Tex.; Lansing, Saginaw and Pontiac, Mich.; Mahwah, N.J. and Racine, Wis.;

When automobile sales began to sputter, miss and backfire, Harlow H. Curtice, president of General Motors, revised his estimate of total 1956 automobile production by reducing it from 6,500,000 to 5,800,000. The 1955 figure was 7,400,000.

At the same time Curtice issued a blast against the Federal Reserve System blaming the slump on its increase in the bank discount rate — the rate that member banks may borrow Federal Reserve funds. The Federal Reserve directors had taken this anti-inflationary action when it appeared that consumer credit was rising too far.

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks and Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey looked down their noses at the independent Federal Reserve Board's tight money policy which added nothing to the Republican "prosperity" election year boast. They disagreed with the Federal Reserve directors but agreed with each other that the economy was becoming "spotty." Arthur F. Burns, President Eisenhower's top economic adviser, also criticised the Federal Reserve action.

Reuther Blames Companies.

Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, called attention to the 900,000-car inventory in dealers' hands and placed the blame on the companies.

He expended his remarks in a statement to the Detroit Free Press in a copyrighted article which appears tomorrow in its special section marking the twentieth anniversary of the organization of the union.

The huge inventory, Reuther asserted, "explodes the myth" that production and, consequently, the size of the work force, is governed by customer demand and is impossible to control.

"What actually happened," he went on, "is that General Motors sets the pace and everybody follows, whether it's insane or otherwise, they tell us this privately."

Reuther suggested that management eliminate the peaks of demand for new model automobiles by a seasonal price differential. To those who want the newest first, a premium price of $100 or so would not be a deterrent. This, he contended, would permit a lowered price and increased production in months which now bring layoffs.

"If a fellow wants strawberries in February," he explained, "he has to pay a premium price."

Effect of Automation.

Ben Weinberg, UAW research director, when asked about the effect of automation, said:

"A very considerably larger number of automobile workers would be employed today to produce the present number of cars had it not been for automation and other technical innovations in the last few years.

"Displacement was concealed during that period by the fact that the market generally was expanding. If we can keep the market expanding through higher wages, through distributing some of the benefits of increased productivity in the form of increased leisure, then we can avoid that kind of displacement in the future.

"No one knows what's on the drawing boards in the way of new automation installations or what their potential displacement effect is likely to be."

UAW View on Automation.

Asked if it would be the UAW policy to resist automation, Weinbert said:

"The UAW favors automation and advanced technology. We want to be able to get the benefit of the most modern tools that science and technology can produce, but they must be geared to raising the standard of living of the great mass of people and not raising the standard of luxury of a few who already have more than they need.

"If you expand the productive power but don't expand the purchasing power base, then you're in trouble—and that's why we're in trouble now. The automobile industry is able to create new cars faster than the economy is able to create new customers."

Reuther explained that his union had asked that a Government-industry labor board be set up to act as a clearing house for all information on automation. The various automobile manufacturers know what they are doing in this field and have a good idea of what their competitors plan to do, he said, but they cannot keep informed on developments in such fields as oil or chemistry unless such an agency is established, he said.

White-Collar Impact.

Automation, he went on, "will have a greater impact on the white-collar worker than in the industrial field because you can standardize office routine where you don't have a model change every year."

Asked if this meant such workers would become more interested in joining a union, Reuther answered: "The whole psychological framework within which this group has operated is going to be changed radically because they have always thought of the machine as something that threatens or affects the welfare of the industrial worker. Now they are going to find that automation is on their doorstep."

Pressing for approval of his automation information "clearing house," Reuther went on: "If I.B.M. comes out with a new electric brain that revolutionizes the routine of an office, workers ought to know how fast it will have an effect on the insurance business, for instance. What's Metropolitan going to do? What about Prudential?"

Reuther said that his union expected to attract large numbers of white-collar workers in the automobile, farm machinery and aviation fields when they realized that automation affected them as well as the manual worker.

367 DELINQUENT SEWER BILLS PAID IN THE LAST WEEK

About one-fourth of 1426 delinquent bills charging for sewer service were settled last week, officials of the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District reported yesterday.

William Q. Kehr, district executive director, said 367 of the bills, which were mailed to St. Louis and St. Louis county residents in January, had been paid. A smaller number were found to have been sent to tenants instead of to landlords, he said, and will be re-mailed and removed from delinquent status. In other cases, householders have died or moved, he added.

He pointed out that remaining persons who have not paid the $3 sewer charge for the first six months of the year will be sued in magistrate courts by the district if they do not make payment. He emphasized that this applied only to unpaid bills mailed in January. Additional groups of bills are mailed each month, and become delinquent after 90 days.

RED KOREA CALLS U.N. TO PARLEY ON ARMISTICE RIFT

SEOUL, June 2 (UP)—The Communist military high command today called the United Nations command to a face-to-face meeting Monday, presumably to denounce the U.N. order ousting neutral truce inspectors from South Korea.

The Communist call was made as the Peiping radio denounced the expulsion move as an attempt to "wreck" the 1953 Korean cease-fire.

The U.N. armistice delegation at Munsan announced the North Korean and Communist Chinese military headquarters called a meeting Monday of the Joint Military Armistice Commission.

The brief U.N. announcement disclosed only that the Communists "stated that among the subjects to be discussed will be matters concerning alleged violations of the armistice agreement by the United Nations command."

Something to Crow About.
MIDDLETOWN, N.Y., June 2 (AP)—Mrs. Herbert Houck, preparing breakfast for her family, cracked open a three-yolked egg. Houck, one of the state's biggest poultry farmers, whose stock produces 6,000,000 eggs annually, said that in 23 years in business he recalls only two three-yolked eggs.

FRENCH MOP UP REMNANTS OF BIG ALGERIA FORCE

ALGIERS, June 2 (AP) — Two French divisions smashed through the "gates of iron" triangle today in northeast Algeria. The French said they were mopping up remnants of a big Algerian force trapped in the sunbaked gorges of the Biban mountains.

Claiming its greatest victory in the nationalist rebellion now more than one and one-half years old, the French army declared that its first estimates put rebel casualties at 290 killed and 110 captured. The French admitted losses of their own but gave no figures.

Some dispatches estimated the rebel toll would be above 500 in dead and captured when full reports are in from troops still battling through the Biban gorges southwest of Bougie.

The French Seventh Mechanized Division swept in on the desperately resisting rebels from the western edge of the Akbou-Lafayette-Bordjbou Arreridj triangle. The Nineteenth Infantry Division—thrown in during the later stages of the three-day encircling movement—closed in on the triangle from the east.

Three companies of helicopter-borne troops hovered over the battlefield and dropped men at critical points to support the attacking infantry.

Artillery and fighter-bombers raked the rebel positions and left rebel dead strewn over the mountainsides, dispatches said. The troops overran two small rebel arms factories and seized stores of weapons and explosives.

The French army's victory claims came at a decisive moment for French Premier Mollet. The government is engaged in a debate in the National Assembly on North African policy that will wind up next week with a vote of confidence.

Far to the west of the Biban fighting in the Oran region, elements of the French Twenty-ninth Division fought into a rebel network of caves around the Lourmel district. The division brought up light tanks in support of the operation and called in naval gunfire to root out rebels in the more isolated cave hideouts.

Mollet Offers Algeria Autonomy When Peace Is Restored.
The New York Times News Service.

PARIS, June 2—French Premier Mollet offered rebellion-wracked Algeria today "a very large autonomy" when peace is restored.

The Premier made this concession, a substantial advance over any previous declaration, in a speech winding up three days of debate in the National Assembly on general government policy. A few minutes later he asked the Assembly for a new vote of confidence, approving all of the government's policies, at home and abroad. The Assembly will vote on the confidence motion next Tuesday.

In his final appeal for support Mollet insisted that the "indissolubility" of the links between Algeria and France must be maintained. At the same time, he said, the "special personality" resulting from the admixture of European, Berber and Arab populations in Algeria must be respected.

"The Franco-Algerian community, established on the basis of equality of rights, will include a very large autonomy," he said.

TITO IN MOSCOW SAYS REDS WON'T EVER SPLIT AGAIN

A. I. Mikoyan. Shepilov talked and joked with the foreign diplomats. Among those who offered congratulations was Charles E. Bohlen, the United States ambassador.

The railway station was a riot of color for Tito's arrival. The red and white flag of Yugoslavia and the red Soviet hammer and sickle flew over scores of pots of blooming hydrangeas and pansies.

Tito strode down the railroad platform with Yoroshilov to review an honor guard. Then Tito moved across the platform to shake hands with the diplomatic corps.

Crowds Line His Route.

The crowds lined the streets leading from the station to the Spiridonovka palace, where Tito will begin his stay in Moscow. Until yesterday this was Molotov's official residence.

In front of the Foreign Ministry, from which Molotov resigned, thousands of persons jammed Smolenskaya square chanting "Tito, Tito, Tito."

Tito and his hosts drove through Red square, past the Lenin-Stalin mausoleum and into the Kremlin. Persons in the square noted that Tito stared straight ahead as the car passed the mausoleum.

At the Kremlin, Tito first paid a courtesy call on Voroshilov in the latter's office on the fourth floor of the Presidium building.

Waiting for him along with Voroshilov in the oak-paneled room were Shepilov, Presidium Secretary Nikolai Pegov and N. P. Firubin, Soviet ambassador to Yugoslavia.

The group stood chatting beneath gold and frosted glass chandeliers facing a battery of klieg lights set up for newsreel, television and still cameramen. Four Western reporters were admitted to Voroshilov's private office for the first time to witness the meeting.

Asks for a Cigarette.

As a grandfather clock in the corner struck 7, Tito strode in, behind him his deputy, Edvard Kardelj.

He took his seat at the long green baize-covered table, next to Voroshilov, and gazed out of the long window draped in peach satin curtains at the view over the Kremlin and the Moscow river.

His first words within the Kremlin were to ask Voroshilov for a cigarette. Tito began smoking a Russian cigarette but exchanged it for a gold-tipped Yugoslav one, saying, "I like them stronger."

Newsmen were then asked to leave.

On the walls were etchings of Engels, Marx and Lenin—and a big empty place where the portrait of Stalin obviously once hung. But downstairs in the huge ballroom, one end was dominated by a bust of Stalin at least 15 feet high.

Vorys Looks For Move to End U.S. Aid to Yugoslavia.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—Representative Vorys (Rep.), Ohio, said today he expects the latest Yugoslav-Soviet developments will spur a move in the House to knock out United States aid to Yugoslavia in the new foreign aid bill.

"I think such a move would have strong support," said Vorys, a senior member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The committee has already voted to limit United States economic aid to Yugoslavia in the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, to $15,000,000, half the amount the Eisenhower administration asked for.

The United States has an estimated billion dollar foreign aid investment in Yugoslavia.

Vorys declined to say whether he himself would support a notion to knock out all United States aid to Yugoslavia, or who he thought would make the effort.

The Foreign Affairs Committee voted to chop the proposed $30,000,000 for Yugoslavia in half after being told the Yugoslavs have accepted some $200,000,000 worth of easy-term loans from Russia.

Some details of United States aid to Yugoslavia have been made public; some have not been disclosed.

The International Co-operation Administration said about $420,000,000 in economic and technical aid have been supplied the Yugoslavs since Tito broke with Russia in 1948.

Government secrecy shrouds the amount of military aid given, but there have been published reports that it is at least equal to the amount of non-military aid.

Military equipment has included jet fighters, tanks, artillery, transport jeeps, and communications and engineering equipment. The amount of this has declined in recent years as the Yugoslav forces were brought up to strength.

JOHN BURROUGHS TO HOLD GRADUATION WEDNESDAY

The John Burroughs School thirty-first annual commencement exercises will be at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday in the school amphitheater, 755 South Price road, Ladue.

Principal speaker at the ceremony will be W. Clark Ellzey of Stephens College, Columbia, Mo. His subject will be "We Finish to Begin." Other speakers will be Clair S. Cullenbine, president of the school's board of trustees, and the Rev. Dr. J. Layton Mauze Jr., pastor of Central Presbyterian Church.

Diplomas will be presented by Dr. Leonard D. Haertter, director of the school. In the event of inclement weather, exercises will be in the school's Memorial gymnasium.

Third Class Travel Ends.

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—Third class travel disappears from British railways tomorrow but passengers will hardly notice the difference. Henceforth they will ride second class—in the same carriages and at the same price. Only the markings on the tickets will be different.

U.S. REWEIGHING ITS ARMS POLICY TOWARD RUSSIA

President and Stassen Think Soviet May Have Ideas—Dulles Stand Unclear.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—The Eisenhower administration is re-examining its strategy for disarmament negotiations with Russia. It hopes to avoid a new deadlock due to flat Soviet rejection of President Eisenhower's "open skies" approach to arms control.

President Eisenhower and his special assistant on disarmament, Harold E. Stassen, are reported to believe that the Soviet government also may be trying to find ways to keep disarmament talks fluid. They hope that Russia will move toward an eventual agreement.

Whether Secretary of State Dulles shares such hopes is unclear. Dulles has recently given evidence of disagreement with Stassen in estimating Russian behavior. Some informants say the "differences of emphasis" in recent public statements by the two men are reflected in the secret discussions among the President's advisers on foreign policy moves.

Stassen, Generals Disagree.

There also apparently have been differences of judgment between Stassen and military authorities. This situation is said to have made it necessary for Mr. Eisenhower personally to resolve disagreement within his official family by making Presidential decisions on the course to be followed.

Decisions taken so far in preparation for further talks between the Western powers and the Soviet government on the arms issue were reported today to represent a shift of American policy away from the "open skies" proposal and toward the concept of "bringing the nuclear threat" under control.

This concept was advanced by President Eisenhower in a letter to Premier Bulganin three months ago.

It means simply that Mr. Eisenhower believes it would be possible for the world's atomic powers to make a start on checking the development of atomic power by diverting new production of atomic materials to peaceful rather than military purposes.

New Inspection Techniques.

Mr. Eisenhower and Stassen, Dulles and other officials all have agreed that new production of nuclear explosives—most of which may be diverted into peaceful nuclear fuels—can be inspected and controlled by techniques now known to the scientists. Explosives already produced, however, can be hidden so well that no inspection could find them. That is the reason for concentrating United States strategy on new production.

The "Open Skies" plan got its harshest blow so far as Stassen was concerned when he talked to Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev at London on April 24. Khrushchev told him bluntly that Russia would never agree to an exchange of military blueprints and aerial reconnaissance in advance of a complete disarmament program. Mr. Eisenhower had said such an exchange would create confidence that would make later agreements on a complete program possible.

After the Khrushchev talk and the breakdown of big power negotiations in London, the United States government was faced with the need to take a new look at its policy and strategy to see what might be done to save the situation.

Stassen Is Optimistic.

Stassen is said to be convinced the Soviets are taking a similar look at their own policies. While Khrushchev knocked off once and for all the "open skies" spearhead of United States disarmament policy, Stassen reported to Mr. Eisenhower that he was encouraged by his talk with Khrushchev to look for Soviet moves toward disarmament.

It was this kind of reaction which led him into a conflict of ideas with Secretary Dulles. For weeks the word around the State Department has been that Khrushchev's talk with Stassen was almost entirely negative and showed the Soviet leadership opposed not only to the "open skies" proposition but also to any effective kind of inspection.

Stassen has advised the President, however, that he feels several things the Bulganin-Khrushchev regime is doing are moving in the right direction. That was his public as well as private estimate of Russia's recent announcement of plans to cut its armed forces by 1,200,000 men.

Twining Trip a Barometer.

He felt similarly optimistic about the Soviet invitation to Gen. Nathan F. Twining, United States Air Force chief, to join in Moscow's Aviation Day celebration June 24. He attaches importance to Soviet maneuvers to bring about an exchange of naval visits between Russia and the United States.

What Stassen sees in these moves is evidence that the Soviets are beginning to let down some of the bars of secrecy which are among the great causes of fear and suspicion in today's world.

Dulles, by contrast, warned that Russia's manpower cut would increase its atomic production capacity. He said he did not think the invitation to Twining was very significant.

One test of the two different points of view will come in the way in which the Russians treat Twining. If he and his group are given a real look at the Soviet air force, including new equipment, the Stassen point of view will be borne out more than if they get simply routine treatment and see nothing of importance.

Indian Rail Strikes End.

NEW DELHI, June 2 (AP)—Thousands of workers returned to their jobs on India's nationalized railways tonight, ending five days of sporadic strikes across the northern half of the country.

COOPER ASSERTS HE WON'T SEEK SEAT IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—John Sherman Cooper announced today he will not seek the Senate seat of the late Senator Alben W. Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky, because he considers it a duty to continue as Ambassador to India.

Cooper, in a telegram to Dewey Daniel, chairman of the Kentucky State Central Committee, expressed appreciation to his friends who wanted him to run. The Republican Senate nomination was considered his for the asking.

Earlier a bulletin at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston quoted Cooper as saying his decision not to enter the Senate race had nothing to do with his health. Cooper is scheduled to undergo a minor throat operation there Monday.

Cooper's decision had been seen as an important one because of the current close 48-to-47 Democratic margin in the Senate—which means organizational control could hinge on just one G.O.P. victory.

C. P. WHITEHEAD LEADS FUND DRIVE

General Steel Castings Corp. Head Appointed by United Fund.

Charles P. Whitehead, president of General Steel Castings Corp., has been appointed general chairman of the second annual United Fund campaign, which will be held next fall, it was announced yesterday.

Whitehead, who succeeds William A. McDonnell, will appoint other officials who will conduct the 1956 drive for funds for most health and welfare organizations in St. Louis and St. Louis county.

In the 1955 campaign, first drive held by the United Fund organization, Whitehead served as co-chairman of the promotion division. In 1952, he headed the large firms division of the Community Chest drive. The Community Chest now is among groups supported by the United Fund campaigns.

Whitehead, who lives at 16 Wydown terrace, Clayton, is a vice chairman of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis and a director of the Municipal Theater Association.

He also is national vice president of the National Defense Transportation Association, president of the Railway Supply Manufacturers' Association and a member of the governing board of the Railway Progress Institute.

He has been president of General Steel Castings Corp., Granite City, since 1945. In addition to holding directorships of several St. Louis concerns, he is board chairman of National Roll & Foundry Co., Avonmore, Pa.

JAPANESE PARLIAMENT OK'S SCHOOL BILL AFTER FIGHTS

TOKYO, June 2 (AP)—Four days of fighting and chaos in Japan's Parliament ended, at least temporarily, tonight with final passage of bills strengthening government control of schools.

The upper house voted 143 to 69 for final approval of the measures. This opens the way for action on ratifying the Japan-Philippines reparations pact and debating 31 other major bills before the session ends at midnight Sunday.

The vote came after police were summoned to the floor to break up fighting and mob tactics used by outnumbered Socialists to stall a vote on the school program of Prime Minister Hatoyama's Conservative backers. More than 30 members, employes and guards of the Parliament were injured in the fighting.

AMERICAN PRINCIPLES GUIDE S.E. ASIA, INDONESIAN SAYS

Southeast Asia can learn from America's experiences in raising the standard of living, achieving and maintaining freedom and building up that part of the world, Ahmed Husin Shahab of Djakarta, Indonesia, acting director of the Asian Press Board, said here yesterday.

The United States has become prosperous because of the freedoms guaranteed in its Constitution, Shahab said. Southeast Asian countries are patterning their constitutions after America's because "the principles are sound and not owned by any one nation," he declared.

Shahab, sponsored locally by the St. Louis Council on World Affairs, arrived in the United States 10 weeks ago. He is here to observe life in America generally with the idea of possibly writing a series of articles for the Asian Press Board, a small news service founded by his father 10 years ago.

YOUTH GOES WADING, LOST IN UNDERTOW

Drowns on Mississippi River Outing North of St. Charles; Body Removed.

Francis Hubert, 10149 Dellridge lane, Dellwood, drowned yesterday when he was caught in a strong undertow in the Mississippi river about 10 miles north of St. Charles, Sheriff Lester Plackmeyer reported.

Hubert, 19 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hubert Sr., was an expediter at the Marlo Coil Co. The sheriff said the youth was on an outing with another boy and two young women and was wading a short distance from the boat in which they had been riding when the drowning occurre.

Efforts by the companions to rescue Hubert were futile, the sheriff said, and the St. Charles county Volunteer Rescue Corps was called out. The rescue group dragged the river for two hours before finding the body unnder a clump of brush in about 15 feet of water.

Melvin Ernest Connell Sr., 27, a mover, 2427 South Third street, apparently was drowned last night in the Mississippi river at the foot of Sidney street, police reported.

Melvin Connell Jr., 7, told police that he was playing with a toy boat which he would shove out into the river and that his father would swim out and bring the boat back to him.

Other witnesses told police that Connell was swimming between two barges when he disappeared under one of the craft and did not re-appear.

Connell's wife identified clothing and a wallet found near the river as belonging to her husband.

Free chest X-rays were given to 4940 persons living or working in the area between Easton and St. Louis avenues east of Taylor avenue in the last week of May, it was reported yesterday by the Tuberculosis and Health Society.

X-rays were given by the Christmas Seal mobile unit. A survey by the same unit in 1954 found the rate of new tuberculosis cases in this area to be three times the national average.

Results of the tests will be sent to those examined in two or three weeks. The mobile unit made 66,623 free chest X-rays in the St. Louis area last year.

RIVER CALLED AID TO HOUSING BOOM

Its Attraction Cited by Director of Redevelopment Authority.

The Mississippi river, which brought prosperity to St. Louis in pioneer days, is an attraction that should contribute heavily to a boom in new housing developments in the central city area, Charles L. Farris said yesterday.

Farris is executive director of the Land Clearance for Redevelopment Authority, which is developing the Memorial Plaza apartment project, a $17,000,000 enterprise that is to provide living quarters for more than 1000 families.

"On both sides north and south of the site of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial," he said, the river will make a fine view for apartment dwellers, and moreover these sites will be more desirable as places to live because of the many more families who will be living in the central section."

Expressways, he added, will prove to be ways for getting into the city as well as out of it, and they will be much in demand for that purpose as more families decide to live east of Grand boulevard.

He predicted that all of the Plaza apartments would be rented before the buildings are finished, and that additional housing developments, privately financed, would be undertaken.

Farris emphasized that planning in this field should embrace the entire East Side and all of the metropolitan area.

CHINESE-AMRICAN WINS $30,000 ON BASEBALL QUERY

NEW YORK, June 2 (UP)—Mrs. Maisie Chen, Chinese-American woman who is an expert on the Brooklyn Dodgers, won $30,000 tonight on a television quiz show by naming six Dodger managers who had pennant-winning teams.

Mrs. Chen, who saw her first baseball game only five years ago, will try for the top prize of $100,000 on NBC's "The Big Surprise" next week.

Another contestant, Kenneth Donald Iain Murray, 60-year-old Scotsman from Manhattan Beach, Calif., decided to quit and retired from the program with $20,000. He was an expert on pirates and buccaneering.

STUDENTS POSE NATIONAL STRIKE IN TENSE BRAZIL

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 2 (AP)—Tension and an uneasy peace prevailed in Rio de Janeiro tonight as the government faced a growing economic and political crisis.

The streets were patrolled by an increasing number of armed troops. All street cars carried soldiers. Radio and television stations, including government stations, were subject to strict censorship.

The National Students Union said nearly a million students throughout Brazil were ready to strike if their demands are not met and that labor unions were prepared to join them. The student demands include revocation of a recent Rio streetcar fare increase and dismissal of the capital's mayor, Negrao de Lima, and its police chief, Gen. Magessi Pereira.

The political crisis was marked by a widening breach between Congress and President Juscelino Kubitschek, and transcended party lines. Speakers of the opposition and government parties in both houses last night deplored police violence against students and members of Congress.

VATICAN CITY, June 2 (AP)—Twenty thousand pilgrims and tourists from many nations hailed Pope Pius XII today on the feast day of his namesake, St. Eugene.

They cheered the 80-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church as he was carried on his portable throne into St. Peter's Basilica. The Pope appeared to be in good health after easing his schedule yesterday because of fatigue.

The Pope gave his blessing to all in the basilica and to their families. He remained in the basilica half an hour. Later, responding to cheers, he appeared at his apartment window.

SHOWS OFF EXTINGUISHER AND STARTS A REAL FIRE

DEWSBURY, England, June 2 (AP)—Mill Owner Day installed a new set of automatic fire extinguishers in his place of business and called in local firemen for a demonstration.

Beaming proudly, Day kindled a blaze under an expensive carding machine and stood back. Automatic jets were supposed to squirt carbon dioxide gas on the flames. They didn't.

Day hurriedly pulled a hand-operating lever to set the fire-fighting equipment in operation. Again nothing happened. Workmen doused the flames with buckets of water. Day estimated the damage at £300 ($740).

GIRL, 17, REMARRIED TO MAN WITH WHOM SHE HAD ELOPED

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—The stormy romance of 17-year-old Sydney Silverman and a high school industrial arts teacher twice her age took a happy turn last night with their remarriage.

Miss Silverman and George Wald, 34, her former teacher, were married in a religious ceremony at the Brooklyn home of Rabbi Norman Pauler. Their parents attended the wedding.

Morris Silverman, 43, father of the bride, had ordered the couple to stay away from each other until August. But Sydney talked him into advancing the date.

Silverman had Wald jailed when he learned of the teacher's elopment with Sydney last Jan. 9. Silverman objected to the marriage because his daughter was only 17.

Later Silverman agreed to drop abduction and rape charges against Wald if Sydney would keep away from him until her eighteenth birthday in August.

Wald was once divorced and once widowed.

EXPERTS BELIEVE INFLATION IN U.S. HAS BEEN HALTED

But Threat Has Not Disappeared — No General Decline in Business Started.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—Government analysts today expressed belief the "sharp edge of inflation has been blunted."

This does not mean, one economist stressed, that any general decline in business and the economy is under way. Nor does it mean, he added, that the threat of inflation has entirely disappeared.

It does mean, he said that inevitable adjustments are taking place that were to be expected after the booming business of 1955, which carried over into the early months of this year.

And, this economist said, there is no reason for pessimism over certain downward trends that may well prove to be temporary. Generally, he said, the outlook is for a continued high level economy but at rates in the immediate future below those of recent booming months. This may extend into the third quarter of the year but with a recovery anticipated in the last months of 1956.

Encouraging Factors.

On the bright side these factors were noted:

The continued high level of construction activity at a 42 billion dollar annual rate, especially in commercial and industrial lines.

Expected expenditures of 35 billion dollars or more this year by business in expanding its plants and equipment.

High personal income, at an annual rate of 315 billion dollars; high Government spending, including the usual cleanup in payments as the fiscal year draws to a close June 30.

On the downward side, analysts noticed especially the rise in manufacturers' inventories which had a book value of $48,200,000,000 at the end of April or about $5,000,000,000 higher than a year ago. One said this was disturbing because it could lead to a slowdown in production in some lines if the increase continued.

Other Declines.

Other declines noted were in new automobile sales from a year ago, in production of copper and some other metals, the recent general downward trend on stock exchanges and in sales in many lines in recent weeks.

One analyst expressed belief that there may be a decline in steel orders. Many firms placed orders earlier in the year to assure themselves of materials and in advance of a possible steel price rise following the present wage talks.

Recently, too, there has been a tightening of the money supply and some administration sources have criticized the Federal Reserve Board for raising its discount rate, the rate at which it lends to banks.

The board thus far has given no sign of a major change in its current policy of keeping restraint on credit. But it does plan to meet seasonal needs and take whatever steps it deems necessary to ease the money supply.

WILSON TO FLY TO ATOMIC PROVING GROUNDS IN PACIFIC

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP)—Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson will leave by plane tonight for the United States atomic proving grounds in the Pacific, presumably to witness part of the current series of nuclear tests.

The Defense Department said Wilson will make a brief stop in Hawaii to confer with Adm. Felix B. Stump, commander-in-chief of United States Pacific forces. Wilson will return to Washington June 12.

TRUMAN PREDICTS SHAKE-UP WON'T ALTER RED POLICY

SALZBURG, Austria, June 2 (AP)—Former President Harry S. Truman said today he doubted V. M. Molotov's resignation as Soviet foreign minister and his replacement by Pravda editor Dmitri Shepilov would mean any change in Russia's foreign policy.

He told a news conference: "I don't trust the Russians, if you want the facts. Molotov is one of the last of the old Bolsheviks and his departure can be regarded as the continuing turnover after a dictator passes."

Truman met reporters at the inn in nearby St. Jacob, where he is visiting until Tuesday as the guest of Stanley Woodward, former ambassador to Canada.

He said he was convinced that President Eisenhower "can and will be beaten" in November.

Informed that White House Secretary James Hagerty had predicted the forthcoming campaign would be rough and dirty, Truman said: "The campaigns of 1952 and 1954 were the roughest and dirtiest I have ever been in. And the Republicans dug up all the dirt. If they want to fight dirty again we will meet them half way. We Democrats, however, have never fought unfairly and in the last two campaigns the dirt was all on the other side of the fence."

Sloan Grant for Psychiatry.

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—The Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, Inc., has made a grant of $150,000 to the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kan., in support of the Menninger School of Psychiatry. The two organizations jointly announced the gift today. It is the first major grant in the mental health field made by the Sloan Foundation.

DEMAND FOR STATE TAX RISE PREDICTED

Expenditure Survey Leader Prefers Sales Rather Than Income Levy Boost.

KANSAS CITY, June 2 (AP)—More tax revenues will be needed by Missouri if anticipated demands for increased services are received, the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey was told yesterday.

Its executive director, Edward Staples, reporting at the organization's spring meeting, said he favored an increase in the sales tax rather than the state income tax if the money need develops.

"Studies we have made show that the sales tax can produce more revenue without unduly burdensome rate increases, while the income tax can't produce additional revenue without an unreasonable increase in rates," he said.

The survey is a privately supported governmental research organization with headquarters in Jefferson City. Arthur V. Burrows, editor of the St. Joseph News-Press and St. Joseph Gazette, is president of the organization.

Some of the probable demands for new or increased services, Staples said, include:

About $10,000,000 a year more to finance the new state school foundation program of state aid.

More money for higher education.

About $4,500,000 a year to pay for the $75,000,000 bond issue passed last January.

Money needed to finance the normal growth of all state programs.

"If all of these demands are met, or even a few of them," Staples said, "new or increased taxes will be an issue at the Missouri Legislature when it convenes next January."

EX-DOCK BOSS RYAN WINS SUSPENSION OF JAIL TERM

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Former dock boss Joseph P. Ryan has won suspension of a six months' jail term because of ill health, but must stand trial in August on income tax evasion charges.

Ryan, 72 years old, president emeritus of the International Longshoremen's Association, independent, was convicted Jan. 24, 1955, of accepting influence payments of $2500 in 1950-51 from a trucking firm employing ILA members. The conviction, under the Taft-Hartley Act, was upheld last April by an appeals court. Ryan paid a $2500 fine.

Since last December, Ryan has been in and out of hospitals for psychiatric care and treatment of an ulcer.

COURT TO DECIDE IF 669,000 HANDKERCHIEFS ARE 'RED'

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP)—Alfred Kohlberg, New York importer and an outspoken critic of Communist China, is up to his neck in $90,000 worth of handkerchiefs. He faces loss of the 669,000 handkerchiefs unless he can prove to the Treasury Department they were not manufactured in Communist China.

Kohlberg appealed to the district court yesterday to hurry a court hearing. He hopes to prove the handkerchiefs actually were manufactured in the British colony of Hong Kong.

Kohlberg said that unless some action is taken soon, the handkerchiefs—now in a New York storehouse—will become "mildewed, disclored and odoriferous."

25-CENT SERVICE CHARGE ON RIDERS OF AIRPORT CABS

Airline passengers riding taxicabs from Lambert-St. Louis Field to local destinations have been paying a 25-cent service charge since the new terminal building opened last month.

The charge was imposed by the city on the taxicabs and is passed on to the customers. It serves a dual purpose, providing revenue for maintenance of the terminal building area and helping control taxicab operations. All taxicabs licensed by county authorities to operate from the airport pay the charge.

Director of Public Utilities Conway B. Briscoe, who a few years ago experienced considerable trouble because of "wildcat" taxicab operations at the old terminal building, said yesterday the new practice of charging each taxicab 25 cents before the driver picks up a customer at the terminal building entrance has done much to control solicitation of customers.

"The drivers are taking their turns in line and awaiting calls for transportation," he said.

MARINE ON SHIP SHOT AND KILLED ACCIDENTALLY

QUONSET POINT, R.I., June 2 (UP)—A Marine guard aboard the aircraft carrier Antietam was accidentally shot and killed today.

The Navy public information office said the names of all involved would be withheld pending notification of kin.

The Navy said a Marine was inspecting a gun aboard the ship as he went off duty. The gun accidentally fired, killing a man seated at a desk.

OFFICE CENTER FOR OAKLAND STADIUM SITE

At Least Three Major Buildings to Be Erected on Land Sold By St. Louis U.

Plans for a multi-million dollar office center to include at least three major office buildings, in the west-central part of the city, were disclosed yesterday following announcement of the sale of Oakland Stadium, 5200 Oakland avenue, and adjoining property by St. Louis University.

Razing of the stadium will commence next fall to make way for construction on the 10-acre tract. It is hoped that at least part of the project will be ready for use by 1958.

Sale price for the property was "slightly under $500,000," the Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert S.J., president of the university, told the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

The proposed development will constitute the first major concentration of office buildings in that section of the city, Harold W. Dubinsky, partner in a real estate firm that purchased part of the property, said.

Called Excellent Location.

Dubinsky said his firm expects to construct "at least" one office building on its property, which consists of the west 315 feet of the tract and includes most of the stadium. "It is an excellent location, and we expect it will help keep in St. Louis some firms that might otherwise leave," he said.

East of the Dubinsky tract, a "two or three-story" structure is planned by the Merchants Exchange to house its trading floor and offices of the exchange and its members, now in an 81-year-old structure on Third street between Pine and Chestnut streets.

The present building will be sold, Harold H. Vogel, chairman of a special building committee of the exchange, said. The new building will have approximately 55,000 square feet of floor space, considerably less than the 23-story building that the exchange had under consideration for two years, but for which plans were abandoned last February.

Vogel said the proposed new building would cost "considerably less" than the earlier project, the cost of which had been estimated at $10,000,000.

Falstaff Building.

Adjacent to the exchange building, Falstaff Brewing Corp. is planning a structure to house approximately 350 workers employed in its executive offices now at six locations here, Harvey A. Beffa, executive vice president and general manager of the firm, said.

The building will contain 60,000 square feet of floor space, and parking for 300 automobiles will be provided, Beffa said. It will be of modern architectural style, but Beffa could not estimate its cost or number of stories. Plans are being prepared now, he said.

The 26-year-old sports arena and adjoining property were sold in separate parcels to the Dubinsky firm, Falstaff and the Merchants' Exchange. The property is to be delivered Oct. 1 when the university's lease with Thomas Packs Amusements expires.

The stadium, built at a cost of $350,000, has a seating capacity of about 10,000.

RISING REPORTS OF RACING BY TEEN-AGERS RECEIVED

Increasing reports that teenage drivers are participating in "drag" racing and other types of racing in St. Louis county and surrounding counties have been received by the Missouri State Highway Patrol, Capt. Chester R. Oliver, commander of Troop C at Kirkwood, said yesterday.

The patrol is having "considerable difficulty" with teen-age drivers because of these races, Oliver said. It was at a "drag" race last Sunday that a youth "bombed" a patrol car with a piece of firewood that smashed the windshield.

Opposing proposals for supervised and "drag" races, Oliver said racing of any kind does not train a person for safe driving, but carries one purpose: "To get there first in any manner." High speed has caused many of the 80 traffic deaths in this area so far this year, Oliver said. Only 40 deaths were reported in the corresponding period last year.

R. FULLERTON PLACE IS GIVEN SERVICE AWARD BY DRAKE U.

R. Fullerton Place, public relations director for the United Fund, was presented with a distinguished service award by Drake University, Des Moines, Ia., at the university's seventy-fifth anniversary ceremonies yesterday. The award was one of a number made to honor alumni of the university.

"Your long years of service to the advertising and public relations and organized charity fields, and your efforts for civic betterment in the St. Louis area, are sources of great pride to all Drake alumni everywhere," George C. Huff, vice president of the university, said in notifying Place of the award.

Before coming to St. Louis to engage in public relations work, Place was a member of the editorial staff of the Des Moines Capital.

Reds Seize Third Japanese Boat.

OTARU, Japan, June 2 (AP) — Another Japanese fishing boat, the third in two days, was seized by a Russian patrol boat yesterday and two others ran aground off Soviet-held islands in the northern Pacific today, Kyodo news service said.

SIX PATROLMEN GETTING COLLEGE RADIO TRAINING

The St. Louis police department is sending six patrolmen to Washington University for special training in radio work.

The men whose tuition is paid by the city, are studying Morse code, radio repair and other subjects to qualify as licensed radio operators, Chief Jeremiah O'Connell said yesterday explaining that the department wishes to build up a reserve of men with technical training.

On completing their studies and passing Government licensing tests, the patrolmen will return to regular police work, but will be available for service in the police radio division should they be needed, O'Connell said.

William Armstrong, a detective attached to the police laboratory, has just returned from Chicago, where he took a course at the Keeler Polygraph Institute. He will operate a lie detector when the police department, which has one polygraph, acquires a second machine.

HEARING SET ON NON-STOP AIR SERVICE TO NEW YORK

A hearing by the Civil Aeronautics Board on non-stop airline service between St. Louis and New York is scheduled to begin at Washington, D.C., (Tuesday), with Aloys P. Kaufman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis, to make an oral statement on behalf of the Chamber and the city.

American and Eastern Airlines have submitted plans for approval.

The city and Chamber of Commerce jointly asked for approval of the American application April 27, and Eastern requested a postponement of the hearing.

SESSIONS ON TRAFFIC IN COUNTY TO START

52 Mayors Invited to C. of C. Meeting Tuesday, First of Four.

Mayors of 52 municipalities in St. Louis county have been invited to the first of four dinner meetings with a subcommittee of the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday at 6 p.m. at Hotel Chase to discuss a proposed master traffic plan for the county.

Mayors whose communities would be directly affected by the proposed plan have been invited to provide information and make recommendations to the Chamber's subcommittee on county problems. Mayor Sterling P. Davidson of Maplewood will preside. Subsequent meetings, all at the Chase, will be held Thursday and on June 12 and June 14.

Police chiefs of all 96 county municipalities will be invited to the Thursday meeting and city attorneys and engineers will attend the third meeting. Business men from the communities will be asked to send commercial driver representatives to the June 14 meeting.

Members of the subcommittee have been gathering data on traffic problems in the county for the last four months.

HARRIMAN TO BE ACTIVE CANDIDATE, DE SAPIO SAYS

ROCHESTER, N.Y., June 2 (AP)—Gov. Averell Harriman soon will activate his "not active" candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, Tammany leader Carmine De Sapio predicted last night.

De Sapio told reporters "the manifestations of powerful people outside the state will leave the Governor no choice." He did not identify the "powerful people."

"People all over the country have told me of their preference for the Governor," he said. "They want a man of proven experience and executive ability and they feel Harriman's wide experience in government . . . is the answer to their needs."

De Sapio is a member of the Democratic National Committee as well as leader of the Manhattan Democratic organization known as Tammany Hall and New York Secretary of State. He has been one of the prime movers in the campaign to win Harriman the nomination.

WATCHDOG UNIT FINDS FAULT WITH U.S. AID TO EGYPT

General Accounting Office Reports on 'Deficiencies' and 'Inordinate Delays.'

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) —Federal investigators say the United States has financed farm projects in Egypt that failed of their goals, paid for still-unused industrial surveys there, and put a bigger program on its foreign aid officials than they were prepared for.

This report by the watchdog General Accounting Office also had some kind words for the United States aid program for Egypt in the 1952-55 period, which totaled nearly $60,000,000.

It said there have been "noticeable improvements" in efficiency in the last two years.

The bulk of the 73-page report was devoted to what it termed "deficiencies" such as unrealistic planning, conflicting policy decisions and "inordinate delays" by United States officials. In some cases the Egyptians "have shown reluctance in their co-operation," it said.

The report covered a period prior to Egypt's arms deal with the Communists, its recognition of Red China and reported coolness toward a United States-British offer to help finance the big Aswan dam on the Nile.

The GAO study has been sent to Congress as a sequel to a similar report on United States aid to Iran. A House subcommittee headed by Representative Hardy (Dem.), Virginia, which is now investigating the Iran program, received a copy of the report on Egypt.

Both Egypt and Iran are slated for further American assistance in President Eisenhower's $4,900,000,000 aid program for the year starting July 1.

Among the GAO's findings on aid to Egypt:

1. In 1954 the United States sent 12 bulls and 30 rams to Egypt for breeding purpose, at a cost of $19,000. The bulls arrived underweight, and some were diseased. It was decided they could not be used for breeding, so they were transferred to another project. Half of the rams developed a disease previously unknown in Egypt, so all were destroyed. The International Co-Operation Administration paid the supplier of the animals anyway after federal veterinarians said the livestock were in good condition before being shipped from New York.

Order Cancelled.

2. ICA had to cancel a $100,000 order for baby chicks from the United States because of disease.

3. Starting in 1953, ICA financed a $535,000 survey by an American firm of Egypt's industrial potential. The firm's findings were yet to be acted on. ICA said the survey was well received by the Egyptians, but it was up to the Egyptians to act on the recommendations and until last June the United States aid mission in Europe had no staff to help the Egyptians do this.

4. In fiscal 1954 ICA signed three project agreements for research and investigation in mining, totaling $175,000. Expenditures by last June 30 had totaled only $400 and the projects "have been at a standstill" because of difficulties in getting technicians for the job.

5. In fiscal 1955, the planned program of $20,000,000 to help Egypt's economic development was later hiked to $40,000,000 "because of foreign policy considerations."

"It appears that the (United States aid) mission was not fully prepared to handle the enlarged program," GAO said.

BLACKBURN GIVES HONORARY DEGREE TO JOHN M. OLIN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARLINVILLE, Ill., June 2 —John M. Olin, Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp. board chairman, was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree today at the eighty-seventh annual commencement exercises of Blackburn College here.

An honorary doctor of humane-letters degree was given George W. Bunn, Springfield (Ill.) Marine Bank president. Fifty-five degrees were awarded to graduates in the class of 1956.

Olin, the commencement speaker, declared the greatest threat to the continued growth of America's economy was the fact that it has "developed, matured and improved with such speed that public understanding of it lags further and further behind." To promote clearer public understanding of the country's basic economic principles, he called for an educational campaign in which schools, labor, management and agriculture should collaborate.

Of the total work authorized in May, $2,799,463 was for new construction, including $494,900 for residential purposes and $2,304,563 for commercial and industrial buildings, and $715,962 was for alteration of existing buildings.

SOUTHERN BAPTISTS WIND UP CONVENTION

Closing Address by Ex-St. Louis Pastor on 'Why Homes Succeed.'

By JOHN T. STEWART
Church Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, June 2 — The Southern Gaptist Convention adjourned today after voting to hold its 1959 session in Louisville, Ky. The convention will meet next year in Chicago and in 1958 in Houston, Tex.

Louisville was selected for 1959 because that will be the centennial year of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary there.

Total registration of Messengers (delegates) to this convention was 12,232, second highest in the denomination's history. The record is held by the 1953 Houston meeting—12,960 registered.

The closing address of this convention, "Why Homes Succeed," was delivered by the Rev. H. Guy Moore of Fort Worth, Tex., a former St. Louis Baptist pastor. A native of Du-Quoin, Ill., and a graduate of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., the Rev. Mr. Moore has been pastor of Broadway Baptist Church, Fort Worth, since 1947.

"It takes maturity and bigness of mind and spirit to make homes succeed," the Rev. Mr. Moore said.

"There is one failure for every four marriages. That's one way of saying it. There are millions of homes that have succeeded.

"The pressure of social pattern, which is almost impossible for any of us to resist, is making the home more and more a place to eat and sleep and less a place to live. It seems as though increasingly the family were becoming merely a means of identification, a legal arrangement, an economic coalition, instead of soil to nourish all the rest of life.

"Marriage as well as salvation belongs in the realm of 'obedience to the unenforcible.' It is of the spirit; it must spring from the inner life."

Southern Baptists were urged today to support the denomination's "Crusade for Christian Morality," which was inaugurated last year at the Miami (Fla.) session.

"Crime is costing each American family $500 a year, which is 10 times the amount given to the churches," the convention was told by the Rev. Clifton J. Allen of Nashville, Tenn., editorial secretary of the Baptist Sunday School Board. "The crime rate is increasing four times as fast as the population rate. Fifty million Americans each year wager 30 billion dollars, six billion dollars of which the operators take. Their profit is more than the combined profits of 100 of the largest manufacturing concerns in the country.

"Moral responsibility is personal. Moral excellence is the result of personal discipline and devotion. Moral character is a personal achievement."

Southern Baptist leaders agreed today that the most important act of this convention was the creation of a commission of pastors and laymen to study the structural organization of the denomination—Baptists call it their "Hoover Commission." This commission will study, with professional aid, the functions of all national boards and agencies, with the aim of eliminating overlapping operations and streamlining others. No member of any church board or agency may serve on the commission, which was ordered to make its report two months before the Chicago meeting next May.

"We are suffering from growing pains," a national officer of the Southern Baptist Convention said today. "Our boards have grown up like Topsy. Now we're going to get a professional, unbiased opinion of how we do things. It's about time."

CUBA LIFTING CENSORSHIP FROM NEWSPAPERS TODAY

HAVANA, June 2 (UP)— Cuban newspapers will publish without censorship tomorrow for the first time since President Fulgencio Batista imposed the restrictions after an attempted revolt late in April.

Batista tolo press and radio representatives he had instructed the minister of government (interior) to lift censorship restrictions immediately. They had been imposed for a 45-day period ending June 13.

JOHN L. LEWIS TELLS MINERS NOT TO VIOLATE CONTRACTS

BECKLEY, W. Va., June 2 (UP)—John L. Lewis called the attention of coal miners today to their "obligation" not to violate union contracts with coal operators else they risk a chance of losing gains made in recent years.

Speaking at ceremonies dedicating a chain of 10 hospitals built through the miners' welfare fund, the United Mine Workers' president said the hospitals represented the tremendous improvement in working conditions of the miner since the infant days of the industry.

He dedicated the modern hospitals "in memory of those men who died without hospitals, and without proper medical attention" years ago.

UMW members should "discharge their obligation by living up to the terms of their industry contracts" in order to retain achievements the union has won for them, he said. It apparently was an oblique reference to a strike of some 7000 northern West Virginia miners, who have ignored his directive to return to work. He and other UMW leaders have called the 10-day-old strike, over roof-bolting operations in a mine, "unauthorized."

ISADORE LONDE ARRESTED, HELD FOR INVESTIGATION

Isadore Londe, former convict, was arrested yesterday by Detective Sgt. Lyman Price and Detective Walter Bauer of the hoodlum squad at North Spring avenue and Dodier street. The officers said Londe, who was in his automobile, told them he had just visited Anthony Giardano, another gangster, and was on his way to the baseball game.

Londe had $491 in his possession, police reported. In response to questions, he said he had recently been touring Missouri but was not working at this time. Londe was booked for investigation and put in jail. He and Giardano were picked up early last month by the hoodlum squad for questioning in connection with a $12,000 robbery.

In March Londe filed suit in United States District Court against St. Louis police officials, seeking $5200 damages and asking the court to enjoin police from arresting him without cause. Londe said in his petition that he had been arrested five times since he had been released from the Missouri State Penitentiary last Dec. 9.

PROVOO SLUGGED, ROBBED OF WALLET, HE REPORTS

BALTIMORE, June 2 (UP)— John David Provoo, ex-G.I. who beat a World War II treason charge, reported to police today that a strange man he invited to his apartment slugged and robbed him of $20.

Provoo, who was treated for head cuts, told police the man attacked him with a beer bottle and then struck him with a chair before taking his wallet. Provoo said the stranger had asked to see his apartment after they met at a bus station. He said the attack occurred about 4 a.m.

Provoo, a one-time San Francisco bank clerk, was charged with treason because of his activities while a prisoner of war of the Japanese. A United States district judge in New York sentenced him to life imprisonment in 1953. The United States Court of Appeals in New York reversed the conviction Aug. 27, 1954, on the ground irrelevant testimony had been introduced at the trial regarding homosexuality and that the trial should have been held in Maryland where Provoo was arrested.

BLASSIE OPPOSES MEAT UNION MERGER

His Local Is Against Amalgamation With Packinghouse Workers.

Nicholas Blassie, president of Local 88, AFL-CIO Meat Cutters, told the Post-Dispatch yesterday that the local had instructed its delegates to oppose merger of the international union with the old CIO United Packinghouse Workers.

The merger is to be discussed at the national convention of the meat cutters, opening June 11 in Cincinnati.

Blassie, whose local has 8000 members, said that opposition to the merger, one of several contemplated since unification of the AFL and CIO, was based on a contention that "Communism" existed within the packing house workers.

"We also feel that the packing house workers are financially bankrupt," Blassie said, "and that amalgamation with them would only increase our pension load."

Blassie, whose local became 100 years old last Friday after 56 years with the international, said that he also opposed the general policy of the international officers—Earl W. Jimerson, president, of East St. Louis, and Patrick E. Gorman, of Chicago, secretary-treasurer. He accused them of interfering with local contract negotiations and attempting to "take away the autonomy of our local."

PRIEST BAILS OUT, TRAMPS MILES TO GET TO WEDDING

PHILADELPHIA, June 2 (AP) —A Philadelphia priest, who parachuted from a jet plane just before it crashed, tramped through the woods all night to a wedding he was scheduled to officiate today. He made it although 45 minutes late.

The Rev. Cornelius F. McLaughlin, bailed out last night just before the T-33 jet trainer cracked up in a field, near Pine Bush, N.Y. The pilot, Lt. Charles B. Henk, radioed he was running out of fuel and then also parachuted. Neither was injured. They had flown from Sioux City, Ia.

Father McLaughlin reached Philadelphia at 10:04 a.m. He went immediately to St. Alice's Catholic Church where Miss Barbara Anna Coyle was being married to Norbert Dooling of nearby Havertown.

MAYOR ATTACKS PUBLIC DISTRUST OF OFFICIALS

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker strongly criticized the popular belief that public officials are dishonest or incompetent, in a speech delivered yesterday at Kiel Auditorium at commencement exercises for the 1956 graduating class of St. Louis University.

"It seems impossible for the average citizen to believe that a man in public life might really be sincere and honest," he asserted, adding: "They will not believe that he is impartially enforcing the law and not showing favoritism. They want him to be honest—but become angry when he won't be dishonest in their favor."

At present, the Mayor said, "it is extremely difficult to persuade competent citizens to seek public office. The price they pay in public esteem and personal abuse appears to be too great a sacrifice to make."

He told the graduating seniors, faculty members and guests that he felt every official should be considered honest until proved otherwise.

"This is contrary to the popular conception," he went on, "according to which he is considered dishonest, incompetent and feeding at the public trough."

The Mayor cited his own experience in public life in his talk at the commencement exercises, at which degrees were conferred on 1083 students, with honors being awarded to 79 of the candidates.

Approached for Favors.

He said he had frequently been approached by persons who asked for favors that actually involved violations of the law. When he pointed this out, and refused the requests, he said, he was told, "Oh, you could do it if you wanted to."

Often, he said, "the very individual who asked for this consideration would be the first to condemn this act had it been performed on behalf of someone else.

"I have heard citizens publicly criticize the fixing of traffic tickets and these selfsame citizens privately ask to have their own tickets fixed.

"Why was this done? Because certain elements of the American public believe the worst about any public official."

Mayor Tucker, a 1917 graduate of the university, urged the students to take a more sympathetic view of public officials, who, he said, are "condemned, abused and castigated" because they cannot satisfy the desires of the individual pressure groups.

Fr. Reinert's Remarks.

The Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert S.J., president of the university, said that the institution's determination to teach larger numbers of students in the future does not mean that the quality of its education will decline.

The faculty has been increasing in size, he said, so that the ratio of teachers to students now is one to 10, compared to one to 16 eight years ago.

"Our student body will grow in numbers—it will also grow in its quality and its capability to make the most of its opportunities," he said.

One of the students who received degrees yesterday was Mrs. Agnes Waldhausen, 3730 Lindell boulevard, a grandmother who became interested in welfare work in Germany after World War II. She received the degree of master of social work.

Mrs. Waldhausen, a native of Germany, came to the United States in 1949 with the aid of an American priest. Her work at the university was financed by a Montana State Welfare Department scholarship.

Another graduate was George H. Hyram, a St. Louis public school teacher, whose project for his Ph.D. degree in education was a study to determine whether special courses could improve the reasoning skill of elementary pupils. He worked with pupils in three city schools and reported favorable results.

INDIA OBJECTS TO ANTI-RED LABOR FILM, U.S. REMOVES IT

NEW DELHI, June 2 — The United States has withdrawn a popular labor film from India because of censors' orders to cut out the story of a union's fight against Communism.

The film, "With these Hands," was produced by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Through life of one dressmaker it traces the fight against sweatshops and records the growth of the union.

The United States Information Agency decided to show the film in India. It was approved by Indian censors and since then has been shown to schools and unions, at conventions and exhibitions and in towns and villages throughout the country. The censors' orders came when the license for the film came up for renewal.

RADIOACTIVE DUST FOUND 1400 MILES FROM BIKINI

TOKYO, June 2 (UP) — A Japanese Government survey ship reported today it has discovered radioactive dust approximately 1400 miles from the United States Bikini hydrogen bomb testing area.

The vessel Shunkotsu Maru radioed that it had detected the dust in the area of the Mariana Islands, northwest of the mid-Pacific test grounds.

The radio message said the degree of radioactivity was about 30 per cent below the maximum safety limit set by the Japanese Government.

MEDIAN FAMILY INCOME FOR 1954 IS PUT AT $4173

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP) —The Census Bureau reported today that median family income in 1954 was $4173. This was $60 below the record reached in 1953, but $300 above 1952.

The bureau also found that 13,000,000 of the 42,000,000 families in the nation had annual incomes of at least $5000 in 1954. About 8,000,000 families had such incomes in 1948, it said.

The Census Bureau uses the median or mid-point. This means that half the nation's families made more than $4173 and half received less.)

The bureau said the "average purchasing power of non-farm families" in 1954 appears to have "regained the World War II level" for the first time. This occurred, it said, because income, wages and salaries in particular, rose while the price level remained stable.

The bureau said the average cash income of farm families dropped from $2131 in 1953 to $1973 in 1954.

O'MAHONEY DIGS PRESIDENT FOR NOT INDORSING WILEY

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP) —Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, gibed at President Eisenhower today for not indorsing Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep.), Wisconsin, for re-election.

The Wisconsin State Republican Convention last week gave its indorsement to Representative Glenn R. Davis for Wiley's seat. Wiley said he would continue to run without the backing of the party organization.

O'Mahoney said in a statement that "now that the President in his first campaign speech has urged election of a Republican Congress, G.O.P. observers in Washington are wondering why he has not as yet indorsed Senator Alexander Wiley who is in serious trouble from Republicans who have not supported the President."

Wiley, senior Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has supported Mr. Eisenhower, O'Mahoney said.

CARRIER SARATOGA HEADS FOR ITS FIRST SEA TRIALS

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, June 2 — The aircraft carrier Saratoga, largest and most powerful warship in the world, headed seaward for the first time today.

Dominating the harbor and spectacular against the skyline, the giant ship moved slowly under two East river bridges with both of its hinged masts down for clearance.

In gray, wet weather, it started its first builder's sea trial from the New York Naval Shipyard in Brooklyn at 10:45 a.m. Two hours and 10 minutes later, it tied up at Buoy No. 1, Gravesend Bay. There, riding easily between Fort Hamilton and the tip of Coney Island, it will remain until Monday morning.

The Saratoga will then cruise into the Atlantic, operating off New Jersey throughout the week.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 2 (AP)—Three young men who were Navy midshipmen Thursday and won their officers' stripes yesterday became brothers-in-law today by marrying the Dougherty sisters of Annapolis.

The three couples were united in a single ceremony in St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Pronounced men and wives by the Rev. Bernard Powers were Ens. Jack P. Janetatos of Moosup, Conn., and Mary Theresa Dougherty; Ens. Douglas C. Osgood of Fallon, Nev., and Ann Louise Dougherty, and Air Force Second Lt. John F. Nelson of Great Falls, Mont., and Martha Dougherty.

The brides, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Dougherty, are school teachers. The bridegrooms were graduated from the Naval Academy yesterday.

FIREMEN RESCUE 2 BOYS MAROONED ON RIVER BLUFF

A city fireman, lowered on a rope from the top of a 100-foot bluff in the rear of 4738 South Broadway, yesterday rescued two 13-year-old "mountain climbers" who were stuck on a ledge 30 feet from the top.

Jack Tyra, son of Mrs. Rita Tyra, 2023 Utah street, and Paul Crook Jr., 3613 South Broadway, were walking with friends along the railroad tracks on the edge of the Mississippi River when they decided to climb the cliff.

Upon reaching a ledge 70 feet up the face of the bluff, they found themselves unable to advance and too frightened to attempt to get back down. Their companions summoned the Fire Department. The boys were taken to City Hospital for a check-up before being released.

SENATE GROUP RECOMMENDS BOOSTING HEALTH RESEARCH

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) —Adding more money for cancer, heart and other health research programs, the Senate Appropriations Committee has recommended $2,372,023,281 for the Labor and Welfare departments.

The total, for the year starting July 1, is $8,137,881 more than President Eisenhower asked for in his budget requests, and $76,042,500 more than the House had voted. The Senate still must act, and differences will be worked out by a conference committee.

The Senate committee, while cutting some items, added, $57,912,000 to the amount Mr. Eisenhower had asked for health research.

BANDUNG STUDENT PARLEY ADMITS 17 RED GROUPS

BANDUNG, Indonesia, June 2 (AP)—Red China, Egypt and Indonesia teamed today to admit 17 Communist-affiliated delegations to the Asian-African student conference.

The decision means the Communists are in a position to dominate the 27-nation conference. The conference had been deadlocked since its opening Wednesday by the delegation dispute.

The Philippines and Japan led the fight against the admission of the 17 delegations in the five-member credentials committee. Red China and Egypt fought for their admission. It was believed here Indonesia sided with Red China and Egypt because as host it was embarrassed by the deadlock holding up the conference.

The delegates admitted claimed to represent Afghanistan, Algeria, the Cameroons, Ceylon, Iran, Jordan, Lebanon, Madagascar, Malaya, Morocco, North Korea, Pakistan, Senegal, Sudan, Syria, Togoland and Tunisia.

Nine delegations were admitted earlier this week. Only India is still not officially admitted. There are two Indian student delegations here arguing bitterly over which is bona fide.

DUBLIN, June 2 (UP)—The population of Ireland dipped to a new low this year, the Central Statistics Office reported today. The office said the April 8-9 national census recorded a population of 2,894,822—2.2 per cent below the 1951 figure. In 1845, the population of Ireland was estimated at 8,000,000.

FIRM, UNION SET UP WELFARE FOUNDATION

Aim Is to Expand Present Programs, Eliminate Racketeering.

Creation of a labor-management research foundation to explore health and welfare plans, ultimately affecting 15,000 St. Louis members of the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists, was announced yesterday.

Details of establishment of the foundation, the first of its kind, were announced in Washington by Al Hayes, president of the machinists and a member of the Ethical Practices Committee of the AFL-CIO, and John I. Snyder Jr., president of U.S. Industries, Inc.

Principal objectives of the foundation, as announced by Hayes and Snyder, include determination of how to run a welfare program efficiently and economically, keeping it free "from any taint or suspicion of racketeering, profiteering, or any other improper practices."

The union and company have agreed to open foundation offices in New York and Washington. Staffs and consultants will maintain close association with industrial and labor leaders, government officials, and specialists in medical groups and in the field of finance.

Plans are to be developed for a wider range of health and welfare benefits. The expansion of services would include development of preventive medicine, psychiatric care, opthalmic treatment and other services within the practical limits of labor-management contracts.

While the immediate goal of the foundation will be to guide the collective bargaining of the machinists' and U.S. Industries for 5000 employes in Missouri, Illinois, California and Wisconsin, studies are to be made available to other companies as a public service.

U. S. Industries, which expanded from the Pressed Steel Car Co. Inc. into oil field production equipment and other industrial machinery, has 12 plants, including one in St. Louis. It operates for the government an ordnance plant at Rockford, Ill. The company has more than 6000 employes.

In the St. Louis area the machinists hold health and welfare plan contracts with U. S. Industries and 848 other firms, involving 15,000 union members, all of whom will benefit as the new foundation program expands, extending its services to all.

Currently welfare benefits in this area average more then $100,000 monthly. The St. Louis machinists are a part of the fourth largest union in the country, representing 1,000,000 workers in bargaining with 14,000 employers.

'FAMILY OF MAN' PREVIEW FOR RED CROSS DELEGATES

A preview of the "Family of Man" photographic exhibit at City Art Museum will be held from 3 to 6 p.m. today for delegates attending the national American Red Cross convention.

The display, sponsored by the Museum of Modern Art in New York and selected by Edward Steichen, noted artist and photographer, will go on public view tomorrow. The St. Louis exhibit was arranged by the Post-Dispatch as a public service.

The preview for Red Cross delegates, whose convention will be held next week, is being given by the Friends of the Museum.

WINS 4-YEAR SCHOLARSHIP

A four-year scholarship to Massachusetts Institute of Technology has been awarded to Robert Sprich, a senior at St. Louis Country Day School, it was announced yesterday. Sprich is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto F. Sprich, 1038 Wall street.

'THUNDERBIRDS,' AIR FORCE TEAM, GOING SUPERSONIC

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) —The Air Force's "Thunderbird" team of flyers, who have thrilled millions of spectators with their precision flying demonstrations, are stepping up to supersonic speed.

They are being equipped with North American F100 jets, capable of faster-than-sound speed in level flight. The new equipment will replace the subsonic F84 aircraft which the team has used since 1953 in putting on 223 demonstrations before spectators estimated to total more than 10,000,000.

Team commander is Maj. Jacksel Broughton of Rochester, N.Y. Those who fly with him are Capt. Billy J. Ellis, De Quincy, La.; First Lt. Robert D. Anderson, Tulsa, Okla.; Capt. Edwin D. Palmgren, Winston-Salem, N.C., and First Lt. William R. Pogue, Sand Springs, Okla. The team narrator and spare pilot is Maj. Donald J. Ferris, Tacoma, Wash.

Usual show of the team covers a 17-minute period during which the planes fly with wings overlapping and with only five feet separating them, in a series of loops, rolls, clover leaf turns and a final "bomb burst." In that maneuver, the jet fighters point their noses at the sky, climb vertically, then "burst" out with each plane flying in a different direction.

MOLOTOV IN HAPPY MOOD AT ITALIAN EMBASSY PARTY

MOSCOW, June 2 (AP) — V. M. Molotov, who resigned yesterday as Soviet Foreign Minister, attended an Italian embassy reception tonight. He appeared not to have a care in the world.

"Molotov looked like a great weight had been lifted from his shoulders," one Western diplomat said.

An old Bolshevik journalist who edited Pravda before the revolution, Molotov drank a toast to newsmen present and past. He told correspondents he used to battle Czarist censorship and sympathized with their problem.

"It was much more difficult then," he said. "In those days if we had trouble with the censor, it meant our necks."

Molotov told of an incident in 1913 when Pravda was practicing self-censorship to avoid confiscation.

"One day," he said, "an item slipped through saying 'We must take up arms against the Czars'. We were petrified. We stopped the presses, but some of the papers got out to the workers' districts. Happily the censor didn't catch it, and nothing happened."

HAMMARSKJOLD TO LEAVE ON TOUR OF RED CAPITALS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., June 2 (INS)—United Nations sources disclosed today that Dag Hammarskjold will start on a "good-will" tour of Iron Curtain countries, beginning with Moscow, on June 24.

The U.N. Secretary-General will meet in the Soviet capital with Premier Bulganin and Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev to discuss the maintenance of peace.

The Swedish diplomat, who traveled to Peiping in 1955 as emissary of the U.N. General Assembly to gain freedom for 15 American flyers held captive by the Reds and only last month as Security Council envoy persuaded Israel and the four Arab neighbors to agree to a cease-fire, will follow up his Moscow visit with calls on the government heads in Warsaw, Prague, Budapest and possibly Bucharest and Sofia.

Progress of Work on Man-Made Island

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Aerial view of construction on a man-made island surrounded by moat in Bethel Church area, near Collinsville, in which Frank (Buster) Wortman, East Side hoodlum and gambling boss, has shown interest. Residents of the area are fearful that Wortman may be building a gambling casino. Others believe it may be a well-guarded home for the gangster. Sam Magin, a Wortman employe, has said he is building a boys' club there. "The island and the building are my personal projects and Buster Wortman has nothing to do with them," Magin has said. The moat, visible at top and left, is filling with water. The bridge in the foreground apparently will be the only access to the area. Road to left of the bridge is temporary. Basement and foundations are shown at upper left.

FUNERAL TOMORROW FOR JESSE H. JONES

HOUSTON, Tex., June 2 (AP)—Funeral services for Jesse H. Jones will be at 4 p.m. Monday at St. Paul's Methodist Church. The body will lie in state at the church from 9 a.m. until time for the services.

Private graveside services will be held at Houston's Forest Park Cemetery.

Many tributes to his memory were paid today.

President Eisenhower issued a statement saying "Jesse H. Jones's life is a record of extraordinary achievement, both as private citizen and public official."

"He will be long remembered as one of the great builders and philanthropists of the South and as a loyal and effective public servant of the nation," Mr. Eisenhower said.

"From conditions of poverty he rose to be one of the truly powerful men of this country," Nixon said. "His lending of $50,000,000,000 when he was chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation without a breath of scandal is an epitaph in itself."

Herbert Hoover, one of the three Presidents under whom Jones served in a high post, said at New York:

"Jesse Jones was a great American. He gave nearly a quarter of a century to public service. He was so devoted and objective that he was appointed to high responsibilities in both Republican and Democratic Administrations. I greatly grieve the loss of a personal friend of so many years."

In Salzburg, Austria, former President Harry S. Truman said, "I am very sorry to hear of his death. I knew Mr. Jones well and liked him very much. He did an outstanding job as head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation."

DAM BURSTS, TWO KILLED

PORTLAND, Ore., June 2 (AP)—A dam burst, killing two persons in Idaho, and troops were called out in British Columbia as the sprawling Columbia basin fought floods today.

The situation was critical for thousands of residents of the Pacific Northwest as the Columbia and its tributaries crept higher up the sides of dikes, but there was encouraging word from the river forecast center at Portland.

Progress on Riverfront Memorial And a Look at the Long Road Ahead

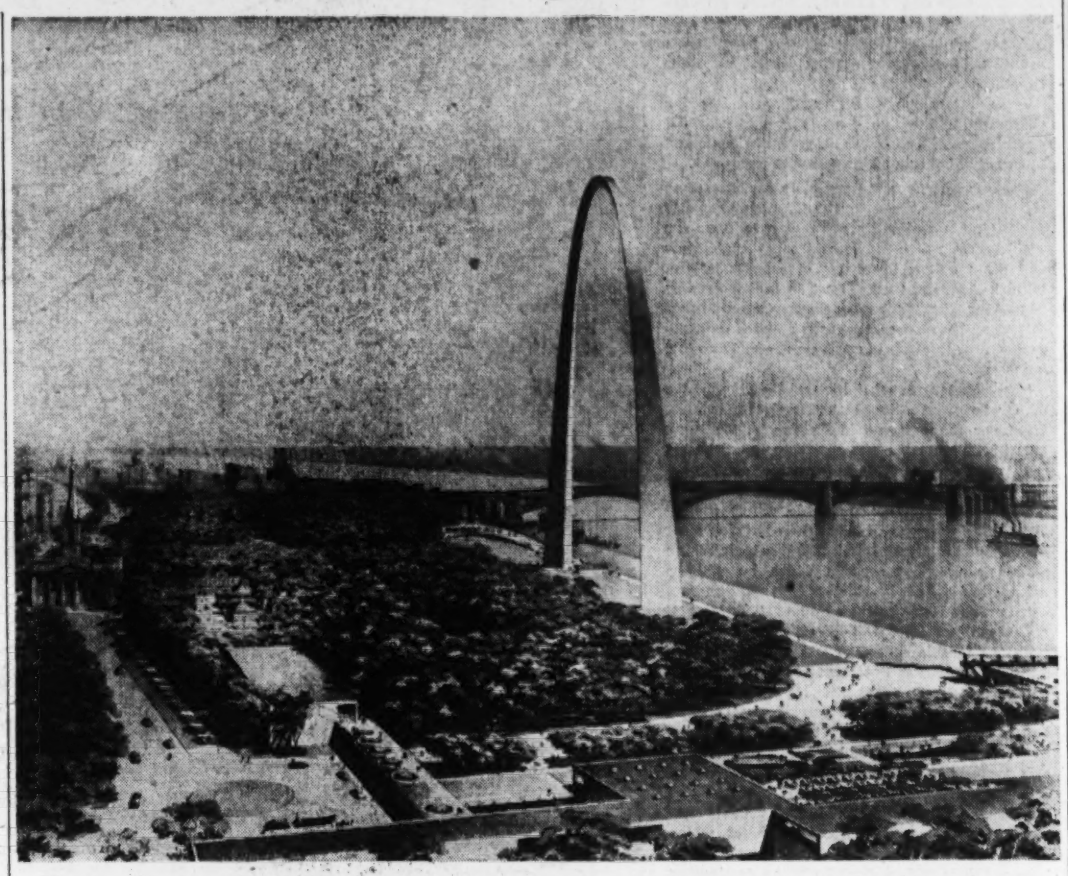
Negotiations to Get Railroads to Help Pay for Tunnel for Tracks Begin This Month — Development Priorities.

By HARRY WILENSKY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

AFTER years of marking time, progress toward development of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial at last has been resumed. Congress has appropriated $2,640,000 for a start on the project, and the city is ready to add $880,000 in local funds.

This does not mean that the 82-acre tract on the Mississippi riverfront just east of the downtown area will shortly be transformed from a barren parking lot and weed patch into a beautiful park. It will be years before the memorial takes form.

No one can say how much time it will take or just what the cost will be. Sponsors have been thinking in terms of a $30,000,000 park to commemorate the westward expansion of the nation. The official plan is subject to modification, however, and its principal feature, a mammoth arch of stainless steel, is the subject of controversy and may be eliminated.



Drawing based on the official accepted plan showing how the riverfront memorial development will look when completed, with Old Cathedral at left, Saarinen arch center and Eads bridge in background.

Elastic Stage-by-Stage Plan.

The memorial is to be developed stage by stage as Government funds are made available, and its final shape will be determined in the years to come.

The biggest obstacle remaining in the path of the project will be tackled this month when the Federal Government calls upon the St. Louis railroads to help finance relocation of their tracks on the levee. Once the National Park Service obtains a firm agreement from the railroads to pay the major portion of the cost of constructing a tunnel to hide the unsightly tracks, the way will be cleared for the long-awaited start on the memorial.

The Park Service has divided the plan of development into nine steps. In the priority table being followed by Congress, Step No. 1 is relocation of the tracks, which must precede everything else.

It has been estimated that it will cost between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 to build a tunnel 3000 feet long with an 18-foot clearance. Congress has fixed $1,875,000 as the federal contribution for track relocation. Under a formula calling for $1 in municipal funds for every $3 of federal aid, the city will pay $625,000 of the tunnel cost. This leaves $3,500,000 or more yet to be raised.

The federal contribution was included in the recent appropriation by Congress, and the city's share is available from a 1935 bond issue. If the railroads agree to foot the remainder of the bill, the Park Service will give the go-ahead signal.

In a memorandum of understanding drawn up in 1949, the Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis and the Missouri Pacific Railroad indicated they would help move the tracks, but how the cost would be divided was not spelled out.

When Congress on May 16 appropriated funds for a start on the memorial, Armstrong Chinn, head of the Terminal, and Paul J. Neff, president of the Missouri Pacific, announced their readiness to negotiate. A conference between the railroads and the Park Service, with the city sitting in as an interested party, is to be called soon.

Following an agreement on distribution of costs, engineers will draft plans for the tunnel. The next step will be letting a contract for construction, which will take one to two years.

There are five sets of tracks to be disposed of, two elevated and three at ground level. The Terminal, an association of 15 railroads, owns the elevated tracks and leases a third track from the city. The other two are owned by the Missouri Pacific and the Wabash.

There will be three sets of tracks in the tunnel. Two will be owned by the Terminal and the third by the Missouri Pacific, which wants a track of its own for interchange between north and south St. Louis. After the tunnel is built, ground will be filled in at the southern and northern ends of the memorial tract to hide the tunnel approaches.

Government Priority Schedule.

1. Track relocation—federal contribution, $1,875,000; city's share, $625,000.
2. Grading and filling—$1,125,000 and $375,000.
3. Landscaping—$510,000 and $170,000.
4. Paved areas, utilities, etc.—$900,000 and $300,000.
5. Restoration of Old Courthouse—$600,000 and $200,000.
6. Arch—$5,625,000 and $1,875,000.
7. Museum building and exhibits—$3,300,000 and $1,100,000.
8. Restaurants—$675,000 and $225,000.
9. Historic reconstruction — $525,000 and $175,000.

Contingencies—$615,000 and $205,000.
Totals — $15,750,000 in federal and $5,250,000 in city funds.

This $21,000,000 in estimated future expenditures plus $9,000,000 already spent adds up to a $30,000,000 government outlay for the memorial, not counting what the railroads will contribute for track relocation. The previous outlay—$6,750,000 by the Federal Government and $2,250,000 by the city—was for buying up 37 blocks on the riverfront, wrecking the buildings, compensating business firms forced to find new locations, grading and filling the memorial site, and doing rehabilitation work on the Old Cathedral and Old Courthouse.

A design for the memorial was obtained through a $200,000 competition held in 1948. More than 150 teams of architects submitted plans, and by unanimous vote of the judges the $40,000 first prize was awarded to the team headed by Eero Saarinen, noted Finnish-born architect.

Arch Part of Official Plan.

Saarinen's design has been accepted by the United States Territorial Expansion Commission as the official plan. It is dominated by an arch 590 feet high marking St. Louis as a gateway to the West. An elevator would carry spectators to the top of the span for a panoramic view.

The arch would be in the center of a large plaza. At the western edge of this open space the plan calls for an elevated promenade over an arcade. Here sculptured scenes will depict events connected with the Louisiana Purchase and other historic events.

A heavily wooded area north and south of the plaza will recall the appearance of the land in earlier days. There will be two museums at the south end of the park. One will present an interpretation of national expansion through dioramas. The other will be an architectural museum showing varied types of design. Many gargoyles, cast-iron columns and picturesque facades were saved for this museum when the old buildings on the riverfront were torn down.

The memorial will include a pioneer village and exhibits of early St. Louis.

Although the Saarinen design is the official plan, there is no assurance that all of its features will be carried out. The arch has been a center of controversy. Some contend that it is not sufficiently "utilitarian" and argue that a sports stadium would be preferable. Others defend the arch as an inspiring concept which could be for St. Louis what the Eiffel Tower is for Paris.

The Saarinen memorial could be built without the arch. As a matter of fact, other features could be held up or even discarded without crippling the project. Cost figures now are merely estimates which, prepared in 1953, may be out of date by the time for construction of later stages.

Recognizing that there may not be enough Government funds to pay for everything, sponsors prefer to proceed with one stage at a time.

In 1954 Congress authorized Government participation in construction of the memorial, but limited federal aid at this point to the first five steps in the priority table. It said the Government could contribute $5,000,000 for these five phases after the federal budget was balanced, and specified that none of the money was to be used for Stage No. 6, the controversial arch.

The city could not use funds from the 1935 bond issue for the arch unless federal funds for it were appropriated. A future Congress might decide to do this. The Territorial Commission is empowered to receive donations for the memorial, however, and private funds for the arch might be raised.

As things stand, a decision on the arch probably will be deferred for years—in any event, until earlier stages of the project have been completed.

Now that a balanced budget has been submitted, Congress has appropriated $2,640,000 for track relocation and grading. As the time comes for carrying out other steps, additional appropriations will be sought.

Ultimately No Parking There.

Construction of the tunnel, which will parallel the eastern edge of the memorial tract, will not interfere with current use of the levee as a municipal parking lot. Ultimately, however, development of the memorial would force 3500 motorists to seek parking space elsewhere.

The city leases the parking area from the National Park Service, and profits are used for site improvements. Under an agreement with the Park Service, the city could build a garage under the memorial tract, as has been suggested, but this is not a part of the federal aid plan.

The Mid-American Jubilee, to be held in the southern part of the memorial tract, was conceived as an annual 30-day event, but it will not be permitted to conflict with development of the memorial. The Park Service has authorized use of the riverfront for the exposition only on a temporary basis.

The City Plan Commission has objected to certain features of the memorial plan on the ground that public docks would be eliminated. The city has entered into an agreement accepting the Saarinen design, but the commission contends that a public facility cannot be abolished simply by an agreement. It is believed that the problem presents no major difficulty and can be settled by conference.

Twenty Years of Problems.

The Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Association and other civic interests have been working on the riverfront project for more than 20 years, during which time they have faced and overcome disheartening obstacles which would have proved too much for less determined souls.

In the early 1930s, sponsors were convinced that the Federal Government was ready to contribute $22,500,000 for a memorial if the city would put up $7,500,000. Accordingly, St. Louis voters went to the polls in 1935 and passed a bond issue underwriting the city's share. They were assured that the municipal money would be spent only at the rate of $1 for every $3 in federal aid.

When the sponsors went to Washington to get the federal money, they were blocked by a ruling that President Franklin D. Roosevelt lacked authority to provide the funds by executive order. A congressional appropriation was necessary, the United States Attorney General held.

The President did sign an order providing $6,750,000 under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935. The city matched this with $2,250,000, leaving $5,250,000 in its bond issue fund.

The memorial site was acquired and cleared, but World War II forced suspension of all work on the memorial. Meanwhile, another obstacle developed when Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes decided that the railroad tracks on the levee would mar the view and would have to be removed. This added millions to the cost of development.

After the war there was still another obstacle in unwillingness of Congress to appropriate any money for the project as long as the federal budget was unbalanced.

GEN. PHILLIPS

Dangerous Situation: Armed Services' Feud Hushed, Not Settled

Wasteful and Costly Rivalry Among Army, Navy and Air Force Over New Weapons Bound to Continue and Increase as Long as Secretary Wilson and Civilian Assistants Refuse to Redefine Their Respective Roles and Missions.

Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 2.

THE open row between the armed services has been pushed under the rug again. The pressure is on to pretend that all is sweetness and light in the Pentagon. It is not, of course. The violence of feeling and partisanship that came to the surface last month still boils under cover.

Service differences, which have been mounting for some years as new weapons adopted by all three services have overlapped each other's field of action, have been serious for some time.

They have led to costly duplications, to an intensification of the hidden suspicions of each other in all the services and to the development of feudal military empires. The three services have become, not unified, but, as Field Marshal Montgomery once said, "not much more than a federation of powerful states."

Not only has service fighting been costly, not only has it led to separatism rather than unification, but also it has diminished our military prestige with our allies.

Blame Rests With Wilson.

It has been obvious for several years that the roles and missions assigned to the three services by the Key West agreement would have to be modified to provide for the division of service responsibilities for the use of new weapons, such as guided missiles, and to redefine the distinctions between the Air Force and the Navy over strategic bombing.

However, the minute any of these issues was opened up a fight started between the interested services, each claiming jurisdiction over new fields opened up by new weapons. It was easier to go along, putting off the hard decisions.

As Wilson expressed it: "I have been taking what I think is a sound realistic position and that is to develop the missiles and then let's see how we ought to use them and who ought to be responsible for using them." It was this attitude that brought into the open the conflict between the Air Force and the Army over anti-aircraft missiles.

Under the Key West agreement on roles and missions, the Air Force was made responsible for the air defense of the United States while the Army was given responsibility to "organize, train and equip anti-aircraft artillery units." Accordingly, the Army continental anti-aircraft command was placed under the commander of the Air Force's continental air defense command.

No Missiles to Agree About Then.

At the time of the Key West agreement there were no guided anti-aircraft missiles to make an agreement about. The Army went ahead to develop them to replace anti-aircraft artillery which obviously would soon be incapable of providing defense against supersonic high-flying aircraft.

The Air Force started the development of pilotless bombers and fighters, such as the Snark and Navaho long-range uninhabited bombers, the Matador short-range uninhabited bomber and the Bomarc uninhabited fighter.

The Army was first in the field of anti-aircraft missiles and surface-to-surface missiles, and these have been operational in the Army for some years.

The generally understood, although not officially pronounced, distinction between the Army and the Air Force in the missile field was that the Air Force developed winged missiles while the Army developed rockets as an extension of its long-time artillery function.

The Air Force has disputed the effectiveness of the Nike anti-aircraft missile, as it has the right to do under its responsibility for air defense. Initially this appears to have emanated from fear that if the missile's effectiveness were admitted, it would be an argument against the bomber.

Nike has been compared, unfairly, with later missiles still in the development and testing stage. The Air Force was impressed with the Navy's Talos, a ram-jet anti-aircraft rocket of considerable promise, but at the same time a vastly improved Nike, with range equal to Talos, and eminently satisfactory other characteristics, was being developed.

The Air Force obtained an agreement in the Joint Chiefs of Staff to acquire two batteries of long-range Talos missiles to be used for testing at Patrick Air Force Base and Eglin Air Force Base. The argument used was that these missiles had considerable range, about 100 miles, and would permit the Air Force to experiment with long-range anti-aircraft missiles until the 300-mile Bomarc became available.

Air Force Pulled Fast One?

Then, without further consultation within the Joint Chiefs of Staff, a Defense Department press release in March announced that the Air Force was going to install and operate Talos missiles for the defense of four Midwestern Strategic Air Command bases.

The general opinion in the Pentagon was that the Air Force had pulled a fast one by working through the civilian assistant secretaries who had little knowledge of the jurisdictional dispute between the Army and the Air Force on the subject.

It was this particular incident, covering only one item of the many important services differences, that has led to the leak of unofficial papers by the Army and the Air Force attempting to present their positions.

Something like this inevitably would happer, sooner or later, as a result of the restrictions placed by the President and the Secretary of Defense on the freedom of the service chiefs to express their views freely to the Congress. Senior and junior officers both felt that they were being sold down the river without a chance to be heard.

The Army-Air Force disagreement over anti-aircraft missiles is only one—and probably not the most important—of many violent service disputes.

Others are:

Army-Air Force: Who should use surface-to-surface missiles, such as the 200-mile Redstone and the longer-range intermediate ballistic missile? The Army considers these missiles merely extensions of artillery while the Air Force claims that they operate in its strategic bombing area. What should be the extent or limitation on Army aviation? The Army wants reconnaissance aviation to find targets for its missiles, transport aviation to move its troops and slow tactical aviation for close support. The Army claims the Air Force fails to fulfill its obligations in these fields, preferring to spend its funds on its major responsibilities of strategic bombing and air defense.

Army-Navy: The Army can see no real need for the Navy's army, the Marine Corps. Here are three divisions and the Marine Air Force, sequestered usually under the control of the Navy and often not available for vital ground missions.

Big Carriers Deemed Wasteful.

Air Force-Navy: Unofficial opinion in the Air Force considers the Forrestal type of carrier a vast waste of funds since there is no enemy in the world with a surface fleet and also considers it an effort by the Navy to take over a part of the Air Force's strategic bombing mission by relatively ineffective means. The Navy's long-range jet flying boat, the Seamaster, appears to the Air Force as another Navy effort to get into the strategic bombing field. Should the Navy operate the intermediate (1500 miles) ballistic missile? The Air Force sees this as an invasion of the Air Force's strategic bombing mission while the Navy contends it is only an extension of its artillery or a replacement of its aircraft. Who should have responsibility for air surveillance and control of the sea lanes from land? In the not distant future, as the endurance and range of aircraft increase, control of the sea will probably be exercised increasingly from the air. Both the Navy and Air Force are operating Constellations carrying six tons of radar equipment for this purpose. Each service believes that this function belongs to it.

Air Force-Marine Corps: Is Marine aviation justified? Unofficial Air Force opinion holds that Marine aviation is largely wasted due to its narrow assignment to small Marine units. The Marines like it this way and have no intention of losing control of their own aviation support.

Russia's Intentions Seen as Key to Any Safe Reduction in Arms

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 2.

THE KEY to any significant and safe reduction in armaments probably is to be found only in a real change in the aims of Soviet Communism—this is the conclusion of a group of experts who studied the various problems of Russian-American relations for two years. Their findings were published recently in a book sponsored by the Council on Foreign Relations.

The book, titled "Russia and America: Dangers and Prospects," was written by Henry L. Roberts, director of the Russian Institute at Columbia University, and contains a foreword by John J. McCloy, former United States High Commissioner for Germany. The project was financed by the Ford Foundation.

The experts appear to be pessimistic, on the whole, about the prospects for disarmament, but they express the conviction that the United States should continue to explore ways and means of achieving a reduction in armed forces to a point at which no nation would be tempted to become an aggressor.

The presentation of the United States position, it is said, should not fail to emphasize that the undertaking is of the utmost difficulty and that if the parties fail to reach agreement, failure proves nothing and should not disrupt the pattern of action already under way.

The book makes the point that although nuclear weapons now threaten to blast out of existence a large part of the human race, they still are instruments and cannot be considered apart from the will and intentions of their creators.

"Admittedly the instruments of power may on occasion get out of hand and influence nations' intentions and policies," Roberts states. "This fear of the instruments becoming masters of the situation has greatly increased since the advent of thermonuclear weapons and the vision of a 'push button' war with some madman or fanatic at the controls."

But the possibility is raised that if the first atomic bomb exploded in 1945 had been a "damp squib" and had never been perfected, the United States might be even unhappier today about the existence of Russian and Chinese "hordes" than it is over Soviet possession of atomic bombs.

In other words, the difficulty lies not so much in the possession of weapons as in the intentions of the possessor. It is implied that if, for example, Britain was the only nation besides the United States having nuclear bombs, there would be little fear of atomic warfare because British-American relations are good.

In answer to the argument that it might be better from the viewpoint of easing Soviet-American relations to try to compose outstanding disputes before attempting to reach an agreement on disarmament, the book notes that the Soviet-American conflict adds up to more than the sum of specific disputes.

"From our point of view the nature of Communist totalitarianism is such that it keeps creating issues and may be expected to do so" as long as the Soviet outlook remains the same, Roberts states. "If this is true, we should not have undue expectations that the resolution of particular issues, while beneficial in itself, would greatly ease the path to arms reduction.

The theory is presented as an argument, but not indorsed, that even if the Soviet Union was not Communist but was as powerful as the Russian nation actually is today, the mere aggregation of Russian force when juxtaposed with that of the United States would create suspicion and fear and would bring about an arms race.

Some doubt is cast on the validity of this argument, Roberts says, by the "simple but extraordinary fact that in the space of 50 years the United States has moved from being a small factor in the international power picture to being a dominant one without producing the consternation, adjustments, diplomatic realignments and opposing coalitions among other states that would necessarily follow if power and capabilities were the only determining factors."

In any armaments negotiation with the Soviet Union the United States "would do well to assume a hostile intent" on the part of Russia, apart from specific issues considered, Roberts asserts. It is the element of antagonism that converts the difficult but not impossible problem of mutual security during disarmament into a problem for which there may be no negotiable solution, he says.

The book takes a cautious view of the principles underlying President Eisenhower's "open skies" proposal for the exchange of military blueprints and mutual aerial inspection. It points out that while the objective of bringing into the open information on arms and military establishments is of potential value in reducing the elements of secrecy and uncertainty, the process does not necessarily pave the way for disarmament or even for reducing international tension.

Acceptance of the President's plan by Russia and the United States would be evidence that neither country was planning a surprise attack, it is noted, but Russian flights over the United States could be used for propaganda purposes and might provide an aggressor with "new, or more refined, target data, which he might use later on."

"Beyond that," Roberts states, "mutual inspection does not really deal with the problem of local conflicts, peripheral fights, in which the main forces of the great powers, initially at least, are not involved. And yet wars can start in this way and they might expand and intensify."

It is difficult to believe, Roberts says, that real and lasting stability is to be found in "an endless piling up of thermonuclear weapons and means of delivery among an ever-increasing number of nations."

On the other hand, he adds, a reduction from full capabilities to partial capabilities, or half-strength, might only "reintroduce a perilously unstable element of uncertainty," and stopping at half-capabilities in the absence of a political resolution of the international crisis might be the worst of all answers, Roberts thinks.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The City's Opportunity

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Instead of acquiring sites for parking garages downtown, as now contemplated, why doesn't the City of St. Louis take advantage of the easements granted it in the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial on the riverfront for such purposes?

H.R. 6549 of the Eighty-third Congress, which authorized the Memorial, sets up these easements to the city, and Report No. 1040, accompanying H.R. 6549, contained a Memorandum of Understanding, in which the City of St. Louis was a party, which stated:

"It is understood and agreed that an easement will be granted for underground parking in the memorial area to the City of St. Louis; that the city will prepare a design and finance the parking project . . ."

This was to be done in connection with the relocating of the elevated tracks, which portion of the Memorial has now been activated.

With some action by St. Louis now necessary to take advantage of this certainly valuable right, it seems to me that here is an opportunity to make permanent the present temporary parking on the riverfront, and at the same time take care of the parking to be served by the contemplated garages.

This can be done with a movable sidewalk in a tunnel to Sixth or Seventh streets, which is not too expensive and which has tremendous possibilities for revenue from advertising along its route.

Surely, parking rates in a facility where the ground is free would be considerably less than where valuable ground has to be bought and the cost included in arriving at the rates.

Proof of the Pudding

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I was much amused by Reader Frederick P. Bornstein's recent letter asserting you know little of Texas.

While Mr. Bornstein may know his onions about cacti or cactuses as we ignoramuses prefer to call them—nevertheless, the fact that he saw the article in question in the Post-Dispatch proves exactly what the author was saying: If Texans want to read a really good newspaper, they'll have to buy one from out-of-state.

A Unity of Spirit

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The fine editorial on Elihu Shepard and the origin of the Missouri Historical Society called attention in an undertone to the unity of spirit that makes any community great. This unity is sounded more clearly in Shepard's autobiography.

A large part of the volume tells of his professorship in Bishop DuBourg's College down on Second street which, when it moved to Ninth street, became St. Louis University. The bishop's faculty was largly French and Italian priests, consequently not to be advertised as "professors of English," which was rapidly becoming the dominant langauge of the once-French city. It seems the very first to occupy the chair of English was James Welsh, a Baptist minister of whom little is known and who remained only until Elihu Shepard arrived on the scene.

Shepard was a very earnest Free Mason, yet his book recites with genuine enthusiasm the fellowship he enjoyed with the priests of the faculty. Thus early it is conspicuous in our city's history that this spirit of harmony has through storm and stress been fostered and upheld by our university.

It may be added that a grandson of Shepard, Judge Shepard Barclay, was for years until his death an outstanding member of the St. Louis University Law School faculty.

One View of the 'Team'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In 1953 the Eisenhower Administration put William Mitchell in charge of the Small Business Administration, and Mitchell took office with this statement: "Let's face it. Big business is going to get bigger and small business is going to get smaller and there is nothing we can do about it. Why get excited?"

On May 8, 1956, the Eisenhower Administration showed its true colors when investigators came to St. Louis to investigate monopolistic tendencies among the rag pickers. What next?

Any small business man would have to be out of his mind to vote for Eisenhower in 1956.

As to Richard Smith Elliott

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

When Richard Smith Elliott issued his "Notes Taken in Sixty Years" in 1883 at St. Louis he sent my father, the late Federal Judge John R. Thomas, a copy of the book which he inscribed.

I am eager to learn if there are any descendants of the author living. This work was printed by R. P. Studley & Co., printers, lithographers and stationers. If this firm is still in business someone in St. Louis may know of the family of Mr. Elliott.

The Man Who Can't Get In

An important witness is scheduled to appear before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee tomorrow. He is Harry P. Cain, member of the Subversive Activities Control Board, and the subcommittee is that on constitutional rights headed by Senator Hennings of Missouri.

Mr. Cain is the former Republican Senator from the State of Washington who received federal appointment from President Eisenhower more than three years ago. After about two years of first-hand study of the internal security program in specific cases, he came to the conclusion that the program probably was doing more harm than good. In the interests of justice to many loyal government employes he recommended changes in the loyalty procedures.

When efforts "inside channels" were unavailing, Mr. Cain was patriot enough to carry his case to the American people. He did so through a series of public addresses on the faults of the security program and his ideas for improving it. That brought him sharp White House staff criticism for not being a "team" player.

This experience has been far from pleasant for Mr. Cain. He served on Gen. Eisenhower's staff at SHAEF in World War II. He admires his chief and has felt that the trouble was that the ugly facts about the security program were being kept from the President by those around him. After his last major address—the one which brought to the fore the Air Force's patent injustice to Sidney Hatkin—President Eisenhower was asked if he would see Mr. Cain. His press conference reply was a tart: "Yes," which dismissed the subject.

Harry Cain deserves better treatment than he has had from the White House. Here is what Roscoe Drummond of the stanchly Republican New York Herald Tribune has written:

> The truth is that needed corrections in the employe security program have been very slow in coming. There are important reforms which still need to be made, and it is my considered judgment that Senator Cain's earnest, able, documented, respected advocacy has been indispensable to much of the progress that has been made.
> Senator Cain, I believe, has been a faithful, loyal, intelligent, worthy ally of exactly the way President Eisenhower would like to see his security program conducted. I am convinced that if the President lends an open mind to Senator Cain—putting aside some of the prejudiced things which have been said to him—the interview will clear away the misunderstanding.

William H. Stringer, Chief of the Washington bureau of The Christian Science Monitor, also strongly pro-Eisenhower, puts it this way:

> From the available evidence it would seem that Mr. Eisenhower believes the nation has a well-working "security risk" program and that the periodic reports to him, in terms of numbers rather than names, do not show otherwise. But when you boil it all down, here is an Eisenhower appointee who has shown otherwise, and the Administration has closed ranks against him.

Ernest K. Lindley, one of the ablest and fairest of Washington correspondents, goes so far as to write in Newsweek as follows:

> Over a period of three years there has been recurrent evidence that the President has been both badly advised and factually misinformed about the loyalty-security system. Sixteen months have elapsed since Cain uttered his first public criticism of the operation of the system. Not once has he been invited to the White House to see the President. He has repeatedly written to the Attorney General and not even been given the courtesy of a reply.
> Cain is a responsible Republican official whose record in the Senate repudiates any suggestion that he is "soft" in his attitude toward Communism. The figures (on dismissals) which he has denounced as fraudulent are being distributed by the Republican National Committee for campaign use. This is a matter far too serious to be brushed aside with a frosty "No comment" from this or that presidential aid. It involves the integrity of the Administration and of the President himself.

These quotations are not Democratic criticism. They do not reflect in the slightest degree partisan opposition to President Eisenhower. On the contrary, they are sympathetic to the President and his success. But they do emphasize how regrettable it is that Dwight D. Eisenhower has not had time to squeeze in even a few minutes for the urgent and important mission of Harry P. Cain, his own appointee.

Thanks to the invitation from Senator Hennings, this "responsible Republican official" will now have a welcome opportunity to present his views to the most appropriate subcommittee in Congress—that on the erosion of the rights of American citizens.

Opportunity in St. Louis County

The intermediate registration in St. Louis county June 7 offers new residents a simple and convenient way to qualify as voters in this presidential year. Every one of the county's 360 precincts will be open that day from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. to accept new registrations.

Newcomers may register in any precinct. This means that a man living say in the south part of the county and working in the north may register in the precinct nearest his job. His wife may register in her home precinct, or even in another if that is more convenient.

Usually the only place where prospective voters may register is at the Courthouse in Clayton. But for June 7 only, the Election Board has made it so simple and convenient that everyone who is not registered ought to be able to do so. The Election Board is to be commended in advance for a useful and important public service.

Deep in the Heart of Editors

Texas editors are doing a fast burn over a recent Harper's magazine article. We might say they were doing a slow burn but everybody knows there is nothing slow about Texas.

In the article Hugh Russell Fraser, journalist and historian, used a ruler to determine that Texas daily newspapers print relatively less foreign and national news, by volume, than papers in other states. He said Texans were ill-informed because "their daily papers are the worst in America."

Texas editors have now been heard from in replies to The Bulletin of the American Society of Newspaper Editors. Editors from Dallas and Houston and El Paso and other cities ask if you can really measure greatness with calipers, and tell Mr. Fraser that "a lot goes on in Texas."

Essentially their defense is that Texas news deserves fair coverage along with outside news. This is an old argument over proper news balance and we leave it to the disputants. The Texas editors, however, do not exactly disprove Mr. Fraser's conclusion about Texas provinciality when they proclaim, in answer, the importance of the vast province of Texas.

Robert W. Akers, editor of the Beaumont Enterprise, makes this point too. The Enterprise is one of the few Texas papers which Mr. Fraser praised. Editor Akers writes, however, that he was ready to defend his Texas colleagues until one of them in Houston replied to criticism with "Form 36-A" suggested that Hugh Fraser had reserved his praise for "left-wing sheets." The Beaumont Enterprise, as a non-left-wing daily, has backed Republican presidential candidates since 1936. Maybe this is subversive in Texas, but we doubt it. Editor Akers wonders if some Texas editors are even certain about what goes on in Texas.

As a neutral observer in this controversy, the Post-Dispatch merely reprinted the Harper's article. The only Texan who seemed angry about this said the cactus used to illustrate the article was not a Texas cactus. You just can't be too careful with Texas.

Windup in California

In California on Tuesday the long and bruising contest between Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver will come to an end. Whether a Democratic presidential nominee has been made or broken by the series of primaries now closing cannot yet be known. But the contest has done two things.

It has given the country an insight into the character of the two candidates under trying circumstances. And it has raised questions about the present system of presidential primaries.

Senator Kefauver, we regret to say, has come off badly in the character test. As his prospects declined, his amiability gave way to a savage recklessness which led him into personal abuse and gross distortion of his opponent's record. What had earlier seemed just an ingenuous way of making direct appeals to every special-interest voting bloc emerged now as a fierce determination to tear down his opponent at any cost if necessary.

The Senator revealed himself, in short, as a man who would do almost anything to win. Whatever the outcome in California, we think he will find that he has seriously impaired his reputation and his chances for preferment in national Democratic politics.

Former Gov. Stevenson made minor concessions to this group or that as the campaign went along. But he never sacrificed his principles. He made no vote-bait appeals which he will be ashamed of after it is all over. Above all, he kept constantly before him the rule he set for himself at Fresno last Feb. 4: "I don't intend to take positions in this campaign which would reduce my effectiveness as President—regardless of the cost in votes."

Here is the difference between responsible and reckless campaigning. It is the difference between winning as an end in itself, and winning as a means to an end.

The contest has been of a sort to emphasize the shortcomings of a presidential primary system which covers only part of the states, which is subject to manipulation for personal advantage, which is seldom decisive in the nominating process. The primaries alone cannot make a candidate; but they can break one. They often bring to the polls only a fraction of the voters in each party. And as now constituted, they are too easily circumvented by "inactive" candidates hoping to climb to power over the exhausted forms of the competitors.

This is why so many citizens are thinking these days that serious consideration should be given, either to a national presidential primary, or to radical modifications of the present system.

How It Works Is the Test

John M. Hightower, the diplomatic correspondent of the Associated Press in Washington, writes that the implications of the breakdown of the arms inspection system in Korea extend far beyond the immediately affected area. Mr. Hightower reports that "many Western officials" view the Korean truce as "a limited practical test of one kind of arms control inspection system."

This view, in our opinion, is entirely sound. Here was the first major effort at keeping the peace through international agreement for arms inspection on both sides of a neutral buffer zone following a war. Both sides accepted the plan of mutual inspection. A commission, with representatives from Sweden, Switzerland, Poland and Czechoslovakia, was intrusted by the U.N. with responsibility for carrying out the inspections in North Korea as well as South Korea.

What happened is only too well known. Inspection on the south side of the buffer zone was a reality. Inspection to the north never became effective. The U.N. command says 400 to 500 combat planes have been concentrated in North Korea by the Communists, mostly during the first six months after the truce was signed in 1953.

The lesson from this pilot operation is plain as a pikestaff. The test of any arms inspection plan in the future will not be what it says on paper but how it works in practice. So-called "open sky" inspection would serve as a start. But aerial reconnaissance would achieve its full value only if it led to complete ground inspection.

When and if the United States finds it can plan an arms inspection system with the Soviets, our diplomats surely will have the Korean experience in mind. Either the system will be iron-clad or it will be no good.

Note to Chas. Grimm, Esq.

It already may be too late to pass the word to the Cardinals. Yet since Charlie Grimm, the boss-man of the Milwaukee Braves, is a fellow-Missourian, we whisper it to him in the language of the immortal—well, almost immortal—Satch Paige: "Don't look around. Somebody may be catching up on you!"

Charlie, it's true. You do have cause for concern—not about the aging Brooklyns, but about the aging Pirates. The Dodgers have passed the point at which aging ceases to improve the vintage and starts it on the process of turning into vinegar. But the Pirates have reached the stage at which aging brings out the fine bouquet, the subtle richness and the full body of a wine made of promising grapes. In other words, Old Vintner Rickey's product is reaching maturity.

The babies of the National League are now registered voters. Youth has lost enough of its innocent bloom to turn triumphant. Don't look back, Charlie; but look at the standings. Before starting last night's game, the Pirates already had taken three out of four games from your pennant-chasers. They have an edge on the Brooklyns and the Cincinnati Reds, too.

Of course, you cannot be sure about a relatively young wine. It may turn out disappointing in the end. But under the care of a Long and a Friend, you cannot count on spoilage. As for that faint thunder rolling westward across Lake Michigan, that is just old Branch Rickey chuckling "Judas Priest!"

There is no doubt it was a red carpet they rolled out for Tito in Moscow, but it was a distinctly different shade of red from the one Stalin tried to pull from under the same comrade in 1948.

"JUST IMAGINE HAVING TO RUN IN ALL OF 'EM"

A Crisis on the Campus

The Mirror of Public Opinion

From The Kansas City Star

With colleges already burdened and teacher salaries too low, higher education faces greater problem beginning in 1958; then will begin 'deluge of war babies'; money is first problem; beyond that is whole question of maintaining 'quality in volume'.

The administrators of America's universities and colleges are men haunted by the future.

Today, they look from their windows on campuses already teeming with students. They see crowded, obsolete buildings. They watch their teachers leaving for the financial rewards of industry. And in the distance they hear the rumble of an approaching throng that will soon begin to engulf them.

Looking into the next two decades, the problems facing higher education in the United States appear to be overwhelming. This year and next, the youngest of the depression-born babies of the low birth rate years will enter college. That big enrollments have risen from these thin ranks is proof that a higher percentage of young persons seek higher education. But in 1958 the real deluge begins and it will continue for years.

5,000,000 Enrollments by 1970

In 1940 the birth rate began to climb. By 1942 it had reached 2,800,000. By 1954 it had jumped to 4,000,000. In just two years those children born in 1940 will become the freshman class of 1958 and their younger brothers and sisters will present themselves in succeeding waves of millions.

Today's college enrollments total 2,379,000. By 1970, conservatively estimated they will approach 5,000,000.

These are the statistics which make nightmares for college presidents. They are statistics asking questions which must be answered. Can enough classrooms, dormitories and laboratories be built? Can enough teachers be trained and persuaded that they can make a living out of teaching?

Should the schools be expanded unendingly or should new, smaller units be created? Can we hope to maintain quality or will the schools become gigantic assembly lines, manufacturing conformed brains? Will liberal arts be lost in the shuffle for more engineers and technologists? Can we even train enough engineers and technologists?

Much more money is a big and painful part of the answer. A clear and present danger such as World War II or Russian imperialism is the signal for the outpouring of billions. The crisis in higher education is not so clear a danger but it is very nearly present. Billions will have to be spent if we are to meet the challenge.

Of all the problems ahead, physical expansion may be the most easily solved but it also is one of the most expensive. Simply on the basis of present enrollments and the huge high school classes of today, the administrators can make a good case for more dormitories and classrooms.

Problem at Missouri University

But there are different ways of getting the money. Some examples in this area offer an illustration: The University of Missouri, which is in the midst of a dormitory program, expects to build units for 3000 more students by 1959. However, much of the progress will depend on M.U.'s allocation from the state bond issue. Under such circumstances planning is difficult.

In Kansas, 10 cents per $100 valuation of the state property tax is set aside each year for buildings at the state schools. One quarter of the mill tax is for dormitories and the schools must match that amount with outside funds such as gifts or revenue bonds. This doesn't take care of all the building needs. But each year K.U. and K-State can count on $1,000,000 apiece for buildings. With this kind of orderly development, the schools so far have been able to keep pace with demand.

This leads to the question of optimum size. In this area and over the nation, schools are expecting enrollments to double by 1970. For M.U. this will mean a student body of more than 17,000. Kansas State and K.U. can look for a combined enrollment of 30,000. How big should a school be?

More and more educators are coming around to the belief that the cheapest and most efficient expansion is to offer facilities where students can live at home. In California, where the population crisis is an old story, this has led to emphasis on the junior college.

Low Salaries—the Big Handicap

The faculty problem can be reduced enormously with more money but that isn't the complete answer. A doctor of philosophy can't be turned out as quickly as the biggest dormitory and even then you must convince the Ph.D. that his best bet is in education. Today this is a difficult task when the graduate with a bachelor's degree may step out of school to a better salary than is earned by the Ph.D. who taught him.

At the moment some of the foundations are considering the idea of offering spectacular salary grants to outstanding teachers in an effort to encourage higher pay and raise the sights everywhere. It might jar the public into realization of the inadequacies of present salary schedules.

But realistic salaries won't create the teachers overnight that will be needed tomorrow. A higher ratio of students per teacher is inevitable. Today, some schools are using closed-circuit television with the lecturer addressing several classrooms at once. The vast halls and the teacher with a microphone that typified the veteran boom after the war are returning.

The Area of Compromise

Whether this is bad is a matter of opinion. Some courses obviously call for small groups and class participation. Others can be conducted in an auditorium, if necessary. At any rate, bigger classes are certain. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, offers this thought:

"Keeping classes small by hiring poor teachers simply enables the teacher to communicate his mediocrity in an intimate environment."

The quality of teaching is a large factor in the fate of liberal arts and the humanities in the growing structure of American education. An even larger factor is the emphasis such studies receive. These are days when we read that the Russians are producing twice as many engineers as the United States. There is increasing demand for professional training.

But history, literature, economics and the fine arts are important, too. American universities tend to produce two types in large numbers. There is the graduate who has learned nothing except how to make a living and there is the student who has learned a little of everything except how to make a living. A better compromise between liberal arts and technology is necessary.

The task of the educator is to find the short-cuts, maintain quality in volume and persuasively present the case for education to society. But the decision must be made by society itself.

June

From the Prelude to
"The Vision of Sir Launfal"

By James Russell Lowell (1819-1891).

Earth gets its price for what Earth gives us;
The beggar is taxed for a corner to die in,
The priest hath his fee who comes and shrives us,
We bargain for the graves we lie in;
At the devil's booth are all things sold,
Each ounce of dross costs its ounce of gold;
For a cap and bells our lives we pay,
Bubbles we buy with a whole soul's tasking:
'Tis Heaven alone that is given away,
'Tis only God may be had for the asking;
No price is set on the lavish summer;
June may be had by the poorest comer.

And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays;
Whether we look, or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur, or see it glisten;
Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and towers,
And, groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers;
The flush of life may well be seen
Thrilling back over hills and valleys;
The cowslip startles in meadows green,
The buttercup catches its sun in its chalice,
And there's never a leaf nor a blade too mean
To be some happy creature's palace;
The little bird sits at his door in the sun,
Atilt like a blossom among the leaves,
And lets his illumined being o'errun
With the deluge of summer it receives;
His mate feels the eggs beneath her wings,
And the heart in her dumb breast flutters and sings;
He sings to the wide world and she to her nest,—
In the nice ear of Nature which song is the best?

Now is the high-tide of the year,
And whatever of life hath ebbed away
Comes flooding back with a ripply cheer,
Into every bare inlet and creek and bay;
Now the heart is so full that a drop overfills it,
We are happy now because God wills it;
No matter how barren the past may have been,
'Tis enough for us now that the leaves are green;
We sit in the warm shade and feel right well
How the sap creeps up and the blossoms swell;
We may shut our eyes, but we cannot help knowing
That skies are clear and grass is growing;
The breeze comes whispering in our ear,
That dandelions are blossoming near,
That maize has sprouted, that streams are flowing,
That the river is bluer than the sky,
That the robin is plastering his house hard by;
And if the breeze kept the good news back,
For other couriers we should not lack;
We could guess it all by yon heifer's lowing,
And hark! how clear bold chanticleer,
Warmed with the new wine of the year
Tells all in his lusty crowing!

Force Sought to Revive NATO As Political-Economic Factor And End U.S. Foreign Aid Apathy

Ministers' Committee of 'Three Wise Men' Is to Report in December—Lester Pearson Seems to Have Ideas, but Faces Most Difficult Task.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 2.

OVERSHADOWING the controversy over foreign aid is an unanswered question: How can the United States exercise world leadership in a time when the emphasis is rapidly shifting from military to economic competition?

So long as there is no satisfactory answer to that question the issue of foreign aid will seem irrelevant and outdated. The Senate may restore part of the billion dollars cut out by the House, but it will not seem to matter too much to anyone, and certainly not to the Administration which has been going through the motions, but scarcely more than that.

The answer can be found only through some hard thinking that takes into account the vast change in the world situation that has come about with the new Soviet look.

It is vital to move ahead into the new era. This can be done either in a giant stride calling for the utmost courage and candor or, if that is too much to ask, then it can be done by the piecemeal acceptance of new ideas and concepts.

Plague of Indecision.

The same palsy of indecision applies to the North Atlantic Alliance which today straddles the old world of military defense prepared against Soviet aggression and the new world of economic and ideological competition. It was to try to bridge the gap that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles came up with the proposal to develop the political side of NATO.

Translating the Secretary's words into deeds promises to be difficult.

The NATO Council meeting in Paris responded by naming a committee of three foreign ministers, Lester Pearson of Canada, Gaetano Martino of Italy and Halvard Lange of Norway, to discover ways and means for political and perhaps economic co-operation to give the alliance new and broader meaning. They are to report their findings to the Council in December.

Next week Pearson will come to Washington to talk with Dulles. He is already discovering, according to reports from Canada, that it is going to be hard to get agreement in the fields—politics, economics and propaganda — in which he is convinced NATO must expand if it is to survive.

Yet he is a fortunate choice for this assignment since again and again he has come up with ideas that look to a broad new concept of co-operation in the West. He has served as a kind of broker between Western Europe and the United States, mitigating the impatience of the Europeans to move on to much wider co-operation and prodding Washington to move off dead center.

Aware of Obstacles.

In several recent speeches Pearson has pointed the way to new channels of economic co-operation between the have and the have-not nations. While he has urged much greater use of the United Nations as a means for distributing economic assistance on a fair and impartial basis, he has at the same time been aware that domestic political considerations stand in the way of channeling all such assistance through the U.N.

Not long ago he came up with a compromise proposal that deserves far more consideration than it has received. This was for the establishment in the U.N. of a clearing house to which each nation would submit its plans and policies in the field of international assistance. There they could be, in Pearson's words, "examined, made public and co-ordinated" and "any suspicion that they were being used for political purposes could be challenged and exposed as true or false."

"This procedure," he went on to say, "would have the advantage of letting the world know what was being done and by whom. It would separate the propaganda chaff from the wheat. It would also expose the motives of any nation which refused to co-operate with the United Nations in this way."

Even those members of Congress most adamant against turning American-aid dollars over to the U.N. could scarcely object to such a plan. Administered by competent and objective international civil servants, it would put in proper perspective all the aid programs.

Would Dim Russia Tinsel.

One complaint in this country has been that American aid programs of great scope and generosity are obscured by the cheap and fast gestures of Soviet Russia, a johnny-come-lately in the field of foreign aid. An official U.N. appraisal would show the world on which side the balance lay.

Another of Pearson's ideas is for establishment of an international professional and technical civil service under the U.N. with experts specially trained for work in underdeveloped areas. There is, of course, an urgent need for such specialists who are in short supply.

Unless some such training center is established, the shortage will grow more acute. President Eisenhower in his Waco speech proposed that private American universities and philanthropic foundations combine to establish colleges in underdeveloped countries where local leaders could be taught modern techniques. But American universities are themselves faced with acute problems of financial support and inadequate teaching staffs. Recently the Ford Foundation made a large grant to raise academic salaries. In view of these circumstances, the President's idea is not likely to take hold.

Such a suggestion risked nothing since it involved no action by government nor any alteration of policy that could bring recriminations in an election year.

If American policy on foreign aid and NATO is to be moved off of dead center, it will take a powerful and effective challenge aimed at the inertia, the prejudices, the fears which contribute to what is hardly less than a paralysis of policy. Such a challenge could come only from the President and there is not the slightest sign that it is in the making.

Gruenther's Testimony.

Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Supreme Commander in Europe of NATO, has just testified before the Senate committee considering foreign aid, but his testimony was for the most part a re-play of the old record about the military strength that will be forged when the 12 German divisions come into being.

As he has testified so often before, Gruenther told the Senators that when the 12 German divisions are in existence there would be a "reasonable guarantee" that NATO forces can "defeat an act of aggression." Appropriation of the full $4,900,000,000 requested by the President for military and economic aid—most of it on the military side—is essential to build this strength, Gruenther said.

But this ignores two profound changes now taking place. The first is the pull of neutralism being exerted throughout Western Europe. The Germans have have moved with extreme reluctance to put the promised divisions together. In West Germany the trend is increasingly toward direct negotiations either with Moscow or East Germany, or both, looking to re-unification of the two halves of that divided country.

The second factor making for change is the radical alteration in strategic concepts brought about by the ever-growing range of nuclear weapons. This has raised serious doubts as to the need for keeping NATO divisions under arms for the indefinite future. The Eden government in London is proposing to end conscription by 1960 and depend for security on a small, highly trained professional force.

Gruenther, in his testimony, said that military aid for Western Europe, eliminated from the measure by the House, was essential to build up NATO's air strength. That, he added, was the weakest point of the alliance.

Cohesive Forces Lacking.

No one would dispute this statement, but what the Gruenther testimony overlooks is the urgent need to supply a new cohesive force that will give NATO a powerful reason for being and developing. Fear of armed aggression in Europe by the Soviet Union at the time of the Korean attack was a motivating force in the first instance, but it has steadily diminished in importance since the death of Stalin.

This is the component for which Pearson, along with the other two members of the committee known as "The Three Wise Men," is searching. Their hopes lie chiefly on the political side in creating a NATO community with authority to resolve serious political differences among the 14 members of the alliance. The urgent, yes, the desperate, need for such authority is reflected in daily headlines indicating the swift deterioration of the eastern wing of NATO over the issue of independence for Cyprus. A recent shakeup in the Greek Cabinet increases the threat that Greece, long a sullen and reluctant partner, will step out altogether.

That is a measure of how short the time is. Once a crack-up begins, the whole structure of NATO will be imperiled.

The Three Wise Men are going to need all the wisdom they can command from every possible source, and they will need, too, the positive and active support of the United States as senior partner in the search for a new and appealing policy to hold the western alliance together.

2000 DOCTORS EXPECTED TO VOLUNTEER FOR SERVICES

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) —The Defense Department said yesterday it expects about 2000 young doctors to volunteer for military service between now and September.

That number would fill almost half the Pentagon's expressed need for 4600 medical officers in the year starting July 1. A Pentagon spokesman said some 2000, just completing their internships, have signified they intend to complete now their two-year service obligation under the military draft law.

TRUMAN in EUROPE

Former President Sees Sights of North Italy, Gets Report of Economic Progress Under NATO

By HARRY S. TRUMAN
Thirty-Third President of the United States.
(Copyright, 1956.)

SALZBURG, June 2.

WE had a wonderful meeting with the Prime Minister of Luxembourg, Josef Bech, and the Foreign Minister of Belgium, Dr. Paul Spaak, at luncheon Wednesday on the island of Torcello, near Venice.

All along it has been very interesting to me to see the practical effects of the program which has been carried out with regard to the foreign policy of the United States, particularly the Marshall Plan and Point Four.

Therefore it was gratifying to hear both Bech and Spaak say that more progress was being made in the implementation of Section Two of the NATO treaty, which is the economic section of the treaty. I was very glad to hear this because if economic arrangements can be made for the whole of Europe, there is little likelihood of difficulties among the various states.

The economic article was stressed in a speech I made in Washington at the time of the visit of the Queen of The Netherlands when she presented a carillon to the United States. That speech went into some details of Section Two of the NATO treaty and I hope that now it can be implemented.

The Common Market.

The Europeans now are discussing the matter under the title of "The Common Market," which is really an approach toward an agreement for the free transportation of goods and services. It fits in with Cordell Hull's idea of reciprocal trade. The term, "The Common Market," itself means an improvement in the relations of the various countries which make up the NATO group.

The Prime Minister of Luxembourg, a very fine person, told us a story to illustrate his belief that progress toward European integration could be made gradually.

He told us that a great many of the people in his country were against the setting up of the clocks for daylight saving time. The farmers particularly were opposed to it, as they are in the United States.

A program was set up by which arrangements were made for the local priest in each community to set the clock five minutes ahead each day for 12 days and everyone was happy.

Bech said that the NATO economic program would have to be implemented in the same way, a little at a time.

Bech, who also is foreign minister of Luxembourg, and Spaak were in Venice this past week with other foreign ministers to consider the problem of European economic co-operation and integration and we were fortunate to have been able to talk with them.

End of Italian Visitor.

We ended our visit to Italy on Friday morning. The officials and people were exceedingly cordial and helpful to us and we left with regret and with the hope that we can go back again and stay longer.

Our last week in Italy began with a scenic ride from Arezzo to Florence. There was the usual heart-warming reception. The mayor and the prefect called to pay respects and welcome us.

It was election day and everyone was excited about it. We drove around the city and, among other things, visited the home of the Hon. Myron C. Taylor which now is a girl's finishing school in music and art. It is a lovely place and is a gift to the Catholic Church in the name of Pope Pius XII. The school is for American girls only, and the girls who attend win their place by competitive examination. They must have their bachelor's degree from college before they can enter, and at the school they work for their master's degree. Mr. Taylor has endowed the school as a non-sectarian institution. He is an Episcopalian.

After visiting the gardens and the music studios and the painting and sculpture studios, we had a cup of coffee and listened to some of the young ladies play the piano and sing. The young ladies were excellent in their renditions and some of them undoubtedly will be professional musicians.

Authority on Art.

We had luncheon the same day, Sunday, with Mr. Bernard Berenson at his villa on the outskirts of Florence. He is a most remarkable man, 92 years old and as clear-headed and mentally alert as a man of 35 or 40. He is considered the greatest authority on Renaissance art and is noted for his epigrams, one of which struck me forcibly.

We were discussing world affairs and he remarked that modern diplomacy had degenerated to "open insults openly arrived at."

We discussed the causes of the first world war, the Austrian Prime Minister of that time, the Serbian situation and the whys and wherefores of the Austrian ultimatum which started the war.

Mr. Berenson is an American who had lived in Florence for many years to be near the great concentration of Renaissance art which he loves so well. His face, adorned with a short white beard is very much alive and expressive.

Stanley Woodward and I visited a number of the famous places in Florence, discussed Florentine art and architecture and Italian politics, the elections then going on and a lot of things—"shoes and ships and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings and why the sea is boiling hot and whether pigs have wings."

On the evening of our arrival we went to dinner with Mr. Giovanni Giorgini to whom we had been recommended by B. Altman & Co.'s Mr. Haight. Mr. Haight had been responsible for the refurnishing of the White House after its reconstruction, when Mrs. Truman and I were living at the Blair House. Mr. Giorgini largely inspired the movement of Italy into a leading position in the international fashion market.

Other Guests.

The dinner was a small family affair and most enjoyable. After dinner other guests were invited, among them Miss Frances Perkins and Miss Gladys Swarthout (Mrs. Frank Chapman). There also were present a large number of the leading citizens of Florence. Mr. Giorgini has some beautiful and rare art treasures which we persuaded him to show us.

I had most happy and pleasant conversations with Miss Perkins and Miss Swarthout. Meeting them in Italy was almost like a family reunion because both of them had been a part of the Truman Administration in days gone by. Both had been very kind to Margaret and that's the shortest way to the old man's heart.

We had a most pleasant afternoon reception at the American consulate with Mr. and Mrs. Service. They are delightful people and they have an interesting family—two boys and girl.

At this reception we met the top government employes of the consulate and several leading Florentines. Judge Learned Hand was present with Mrs. Hand. We had a grand visit.

Next day at 12:12 p.m. the mayor, the prefect, the chief of police and several other citizens and the American consul and his wife escorted us to the train.

The mayor had just been re-elected and, of course, he was very happy. He is a remarkable man and lives a private life so disciplined that the people call him, "The Saint." The prefect is an officer similar to our state governor, except that he is appointed by the President of the Republic of Italy and is a career official.

Impressed By Officials.

I was very much impressed by these officials who met us in every city, and I was particularly impressed by the prefect of the Florentine province. He was a large man who reminded me of the picture of Grover Cleveland in the White House. He was born in Fiume across the Adriatic and could speak, read and write a half dozen languages.

We arrived in Venice late in the afternoon Tuesday and after dinner on the hotel terrace overlooking the busy Grand Canal, we walked over to St. Mark's square and had a wonderful view of the cathedral, the bell tower and the Palace of the Doges. The next morning we went over to the square and were conducted through the cathedral by the superintendent of the monuments in this sector of Italy.

The cathedral is certainly one of the most interesting in the world. It has some wonderful mosaics and some very valuable vessels, which are used in the church services. We also saw an immense sword which was presented to one of the doges by a pope. We then went into the Palace of the Doges and after climbing innumerable steps we arrived at the floor where the wonderful paintings of Tintoretto, Veronese and Titian are displayed.

Steps to Climb.

As a personal aside, I would like to say that one thing I have learned is that when you come to Italy as a tourist be sure not to have a sprained ankle. At Assisi it was even worse than in Venice, but everywhere it is necessary to climb up steps and down steps and walk long distances in order to see the things that are most interesting.

I will say this, though, that my ankle is practically healed and I can walk almost as well as ever, and this is going to be hard on the guides, the newspaper men and the family.

Despite the sore ankle and the long staircases, the climb was worth it.

The largest canvas in the world is in one of the rooms. I was intrigued that the largest room had no support in the ceiling. I was told that the wooden beams had been wrapped in lead, but in my opinion that made them all the heavier and I still don't understand how the ceiling is supported. But the pictures and paintings on the ceiling and walls are among the greatest in the world and one of the things about the palace is that these paintings are of such immense size that it has been impossible to remove them.

Gold-Covered Doors

The bronze horses are still high on St. Mark's cathedral in front of the dome. Napoleon took them and placed them on top of the Arch of Triumph in Paris and they weren't returned until after the treaty of 1815. I am told that once they were gold-covered like the doors of the baptistry in Florence. The baptistry doors once were bronze-colored but during the second world war they were buried in the earth for protection. When they were recovered it was found that the bronze paint over the gold had come off and now the gold shows as it did in the first place.

In going through the building that the doges used as a senate office building, as we would call it in Washington, we saw the old maps and globes created by the geographers of Venice. These maps are remarkable in that they are substantially accurate even though they were made 400 years ago when navigators had few tools to help them chart the seas and the continents.

John and Sebastian Cabot were natives of Venice. They crossed the Atlantic and were the first to touch the North American coastline. They made their voyage not long after Columbus discovered the western hemisphere. Amerigo Vespucci was a native of Florence. So the Cabots, Christopher Columbus and Amerigo Vespucci, all so important to the opening of our great land to civilization, were natives of Northern Italy.

A Disappointment.

I am always more interested in men than in things, so it was a disappointment to me that my guides, so well informed about every single work of art, knew little or nothing about the political leaders who made these great works possible.

It was the political leaders, the doges, who created the climate in which the arts could flourish. They made Venice one of the great city states of history with a power and glory known to only a handful of other city states, such as Rome, Athens and Constantinople. I will have to read about these great political leaders, the doges, when I get home.

An interesting thing to me is that these leaders were elected. In a restricted sense Venice was a republic. The leading families elected the doges from among their own number. Limited as it was, this system of selection helped Venice escape the weakness that came to other Italian city states whose rulers inherited their power.

On Thursday morning, Stanley Woodward and I motored inland over a fine modern highway, complete with billboard advertising, to see new wonders.

I was particularly impressed with the Teatro Olympico in the city of Vicenza. It was the first theater ever built to present Greek plays under a roof. It was built in 1579 by Palladio, who designed permanent sets that are divided into three Grecian streets that angle back from the bare forestage. The settings show the seven gates of Thebes; the acoustics are remarkable; everything said on a stage can be heard clearly in every part of the theater which has a seating capacity of 100 people.

An old man with white hair told us about the theater. One of the things he told us was that the statues which decorated the interior were of the 91 patrons who had contributed to the construction of the theater and that he had to know all their names and connections because when the great Venetian families came over he had to be able to point out their ancestors. Each patron contributed 40 ducats to build the theater. I was highly pleased that the theater was still in its original state.

Margaret's Signature.

I discovered, after I had been through the theater, that Margaret had been there last year and that she had signed the guest register, so to make the register complete I just signed my name above hers.

We visited the Rotonda Capra, also by Palladio. It is the basis of the architecture of Monticello and of the library of the University of Virginia.

On our way back to Venice we stopped at Padua and viewed the first equestrian statue which was cast in bronze after the Renaissance. We stopped at the church known as the Madonna of the Arena in which we saw more frescoes by Giotto. As in Vicenza, we saw a great many buildings which apparently were used as the pattern for the public buildings in Washington.

Aside from the wonderful frescoes, one of the things that caught my attention in this old church in Padua was that the soldiers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries had scratched their names on the walls, just as the present G.I.s do. Giotto did his frescoes in the early fourteenth century. The earliest G.I. name-scratching I saw was dated more than 100 years later. One name I saw was that of an Austrian soldier who had scratched it there on the wall in 1431.

Armed Services' Feuding Hushed But Not Ended

these differences, both loaded with difficulties.

The first would be to redefine roles and missions, again to make them clear cut as they were when first promulgated. This action, because it has been put off so long, will bring on a service fight that would make the earlier revolt of the admirals and the present dispute seem like a tempest in a teapot. It cannot be accomplished now without thorough airing in the Congress. Each service sees its entire future at stake in redefining roles and missions.

A second solution, unquestionably impracticable at present, is to go ahead with real unification — one war department, one uniform, one chief of staff, one promotion list. There would be little objection to this in the Army and Air Force. Even Gen. Carl Spaatz, former chief of staff of the Air Force, has recommended this in the current issue of Newsweek.

The navy would fight this to the end. The sea service has traditionally had greater autonomy than the other services and will fight anything that infringes its autonomy.

Montgomery's Analysis.

Field Marshal Montgomery addressed himself to this problem in a lecture before the Royal United Service Institution, Oct. 12, 1955. He said:

"This separate existence of the three services results, in every nation, in waste of money, waste of manpower and waste of time.

"The present organization of military forces is incapable of adaption to changes, neither quickly, nor economically, nor efficiently.

"There is a hidden suspicion at all levels between the members of all services, in varying degrees. There is a continual tendency for duplication of administrative facilities in all fighting services. There is a wastage of personnel through the wastage of obsolete or obsolescent functions in all services.

"When some functions become obsolescent, vested interests and emotional attachments go into action to prevent it being abolished, and service propaganda machines are put into top gear.

"In the future, as political, economic and technical changes accelerate, it is a grave question whether any large military organization which is not closely integrated and gripped tightly at the top can adapt itself successfully to the required speed of modern life."

In other words, our military organization has been left behind by the fast-changing times. It is wasteful of money and men, and service rivalries are disastrous in preparation for war and in war.

Fear Russians Are Winning A-Power Race Behind Proposal For Six Full-Scale U.S. Plants

First American Project Scheduled for Completion in 1957 — Soviets, British Each Have One in Operation, and Reds Have Disclosed Advanced Process.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 2.

SERIOUS CONCERN that the United States is losing the peacetime atomic power race lies back of a controversial proposal for this country to build six full-scale nuclear generating plants.

There are indications that Russia may be ahead both quantitatively and qualitatively. If that is the case, it is argued, something must be added to the United States position as a matter of urgent foreign policy. After all the talk of "atoms for peace," this country cannot afford to lose the race to put atomic fission to work after winning so spectacularly the race to build an atomic bomb.

As to quantity, no one denies that Russia is ahead, at least on paper. The Soviet Union said last summer its 5000-kilowatt power reactor outside Moscow had been operating since 1954, and more recently it announced a program to build ten large power reactors, of several different types, with a total capacity of 2,400,000 to 2,500,000 kilowatts by 1960, "with considerable capacity coming into operation as early as 1958."

The United States has its first commercial atomic power plant scheduled for completion in 1957. This is the 60,000 to 100,000 kilowatt Shippingport, Pa., reactor, being built principally with Government funds. Beyond that, various private companies and co-operatives plan to build atomic plants with total capacity of about 700,000 kilowatts, mostly hinged on federal subsidy or assistance of one kind or another.

British Plant in Operation.

Great Britain's first large atomic power plant at Calder hall began operation experimentally last week, and plans call for construction of 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 kilowatts of atomic capacity by 1965.

Senator Albert Gore (Dem.), Tennessee, presented these figures in support of his bill authorizing and directing the Atomic Energy Commission to build six Government atomic power plants of various types in different parts of the country.

AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss, in congressional hearings on the bill, contended mere quantity is not a measure of progress. Warning against embarking on a "kilowatt race," he said, "we do not regard kilowatts as the measure of accomplishment." He suggested also that Russian estimates might be over-optimistic.

Then, as a surprise to most observers, came the news that Russia might be doing a better job in some respects, as well as a faster job, in harnessing the atom.

'Local Boiling' Process.

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, brought out that the Russian plant makes use of an advanced process called "local boiling." This means that water comes into direct contact with the uranium fuel rods, is converted into steam and then forces its way directly into turbines to turn generators and manufacture electricity. Most United States reactors will use intermediate fluid lines to carry the heat from the uranium outside to a heat exchanger, where a separate water-and-steam system picks up heat and drives the turbine. This involves loss of heat and thus reduces efficiency.

Anderson was questioning Philip Sporn, president of Nuclear Power Group, Inc., which plans to build a 180,000-kilowatt atomic power plant at Dresden, Ill., by 1960. This will be a "boiling water" reactor, in which the water-steam cycle that drives the turbines will be heated inside the core, but will not permit the water to touch the uranium itself.

Their colloquy went like this:

Anderson: "The Russian job . . . has local boiling. Would you not regard that as rather high-class technical work? . . . Have we anything like it?"

Sporn: "Boiling?"

Anderson: "Local boiling."

Sporn: "I am not sure I know how to answer that, Senator. . . . I believe technically, on the scientific end, the Russian performance is altogether too close to ours. Maybe it is actually superior to ours."

Dr. Zinn's Testimony.

Anderson then let Dr. Walter H. Zinn tell how word of this Russian breakthrough had become known. As director of the AEC's Argonne National Laboratory, Zinn was among the agency's top reactor designers. He resigned recently and turned up as a temporary special consultant to the joint committee, to the apparent surprise of the AEC representatives.

Zinn recalled that the Russian reactor had been described by Igor V. Kurchatov, a Soviet nuclear physicist who accompanied Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin and Nikita S. Khrushchev, Communist party boss, on their recent trip to England. Kurchatov told British scientists the reactor was not "water-cooled," but "water-and-steam-cooled," Zinn noted.

"That means local boiling," Zinn told Sporn. "This is high-class heat transfer performance, as I admit and I am sure you admit. It does mean a good high level of technology on a very vital point."

Additional details on Russian progress had been given the committee in executive session by the Central Intelligence Agency and the State Department, but this testimony was classified top secret and could not be made public by the committee without "declassification" by the executive branch. Walter P. Reuther, president of the AFL-CIO United Automobile Workers, has urged President Eisenhower to make this information public.

When Strauss testified in open session a few days later, he belittled the Russian "kilowatt propaganda" and said the United States now enjoys "genuine leadership based on sound scientific progress and technological development" and has an aggressive program that will keep this country in the lead. He said Americans run to extremes — once they underestimated Soviet capabilities, but "now we are prone to overestimate their capabilities."

Interrupting him, Representative Melvin Price (Dem.), East St. Louis, remarked that "other Government agencies" thought differently.

Strauss then made it clear he had been expressing his personal opinion.

Price would not elaborate, but it was reported that some of the witnesses in executive session testified that the United States would suffer a diplomatic disaster if Russia went ahead with its plans and this country failed to speed up its more modest construction program.

AEC Member Urges Speed.

Atomic Energy Commissioner Thomas E. Murray wants a speedup. Last February, he proposed a five-year government atomic power plant program about twice the size of the one urged by Gore, including reactors both at home and abroad.

Strauss and the other commissioners disagree, as did witnesses for private power companies and nuclear equipment suppliers. They predicted a new government program would interfere with the present "partnership" arrangement, under which private companies and cooperatives propose to build reactors, mostly with federal subsidy. They call this the surest way to cut costs to the point where atomic power eventually can compete with conventional electricity.

Zinn has called attention to what may be a basic defect in this present system of waiting for private sources to make proposals: the choice of what types of reactors are to be built is made, not by the commission, but by the individual private groups in submitting their proposals.

He suggested that the United States was not yet building full-scale plants of certain types that might some day prove to be the best for manufacturing cheap electricity. He emphasized that the only way to test the efficiency of a new type of reactor is to build a full-scale plant.

Up to Congress.

Whether the present subsidized private program goes forward even according to its modest schedule depends heavily on whether Congress will extend some additional help that is being sought more and more urgently. Most of the private groups that plan to build atomic power plants, including both power companies and co-operatives, say they cannot go ahead without some government assistance to cover damage claims in the event of an improbable but still possible catastrophic accident.

Some applicants also want to be exempted from provisions of the Public Utility Holding Company Act, which might otherwise bring them under regulation of the Securities and Exchange Commission when they start producing atomic power. The AEC supports legislation that would remove both these "roadblocks" to private atomic investment.

Meanwhile, both the Russian and the British programs are going forward rapidly as high-priority government undertakings.

PROFESSOR TO BE OUSTED FOR BALKING AT RED QUERY

CARLISLE, Pa., June 2 (AP) —The board of trustees of Dickinson College voted last night to dismiss Dr. Laurent R. Lavallee from the faculty as a result of his refusal to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Thirty-five of the board's 40 members attended last night's meeting; all voted to dismiss Lavallee, an economics professor, effective June 30.

Lavallee was suspended with pay last March soon after his brush with the committee in Washington. He invoked the Fifth Amendment on the ground that his answers might tend to incriminate him. He was being questioned about what the House committee said were reports of alleged Communist activities when he was employed by the Federal Government several years ago.

The executive committee of the board conducted a hearing more than a month ago. It presented its findings to the full board last night.

John Hersey's Parable of the East and West

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

JOHN HERSEY

A SINGLE PEBBLE, by John Hersey. (Knopf, 181 pgs., $3.)

PROVINCIALISM is a universal trait but at this particular stage of history the American kind is particularly noticeable and to many foreigners, no doubt, is uncommonly malignant. In this context John Hersey's short novel "A Single Pebble" has a decided pertinence even though Mr. Hersey makes no obvious attempt to point a moral that can be applied to the current world situation. His story is rather a commentary on the brashness of youth and the tendency of every human being to regard his own tribal customs as the perfection of human wisdom.

The individual in this instance is a young American engineer who is inspecting the Yangtze river in China with the view of recommending a site for a great dam. He takes passage on a junk at Ichang and thereafter travels nearly a thousand miles upriver through shallows, rapids, enormous gorges, lakes and narrows. The motive power is furnished by the wind caught by the sails of ancient design; but when there is no wind or where a hazardous shoal or rapid must be crossed the junk is pulled along by trackers, with tow lines, walking on the shore.

Sailing the junk calls for extraordinary strength, knowledge, skill and courage. The young engineer is duly impressed but he is a little impatient, too, that such backbreaking toil should still be exacted from human creatures when modern engineering could make the river easily navigable.

When he communicates such ideas to "Old Pebble" — the head tracker and actually a young man of great daring and ingenuity—he is told in effect that "the river" is ancient and fixed in its ways and must not be challenged. Then he asks Old Pebble what he expects to get out of life; what are his hopes, his ambitions, his view of the future.

The tracker answers: "I shall stay on boats, and there will always be somebody to hire me, and when I am old, all my brothers in the boatmen's guild and all the captains on the riverside who know me will give me a few coppers in payment for the friendship I have hoarded for them. I will have plenty. I will have a fine funeral."

In his conversations with the owner of the junk, the owner's young wife, the cook and others the young engineer slowly discovers that his philosophy is not theirs and that to them he seems raw, barbaric and somewhat impious. They are adjusted to the ancient ways, to things as they are, to the pleasure of the daily task. The idea of "living for the future" strikes them as being senseless.

ALL this is communicated largely by subtle implications as the junk makes its hazardous way up the Yangtze. The voyage itself is full of incident and it comes to a climax with the cruel river exacting its toll from those who have dared its dangers.

For the young engineer, however, the voyage has provided not only the shocks of adventure but an insight into a kind of wisdom and harmony such as he has never known. Perhaps "insight" is too strong a word. It is a glimpse, but the glimpse is enough to make him realize that the techniques and energy of the world he has known do not provide him with a sure entry into the meaning of life. Perhaps we should leave it that, while noting that Mr. Hersey's parable has been told with affecting simplicity and poetic beauty of language.

To make deeper and more extensive comparisons between the outlook of a people who cling to slow, unchanging rhythms, and the active doers and changers of the Western world, will certainly lead us to no enduring conclusions. Both the "quietists" and the "activists" can make good cases against each other.

H. R. H.: THE STORY OF PHILIP, DUKE OF EDINBURGH, by James Hilton. (Atlantic-Little, Brown, 73 pgs., $2.50.)

Reviewed by
A. MERVYN DAVIES

MONARCHY, especially Greek monarchy, was at its nadir in 1921 when H. R. H. Prince Philip was born. At age of one he accompanied his parents — Prince Andrew and Princess Alice of Greece—into exile, and that appeared likely to be that for the little Prince. As Hilton puts it, "the initials D.P. had they meant anything then might well have stood for 'depressed prince'."

The question that Hilton in this posthumously published little book tries to answer for the reader is, how did this young man—whose one unquestioned princely asset was his handsomeness—born the sixth in line to the shakiest throne in Europe, arrive at his present position, right next to the most secure throne in the world? And how, having done so, did he win acceptance by a people not given to liking foreigners easily? As the author says, "Surely this makes a notable achievement."

In his brief and unpretentious but interesting account of this young man's life he finds the explanation in the influence of three persons—and he lists them in inverse order to their importance: (1) a governess named Roose, (2) a rich uncle named Lord Louis Mountbatten — an uncle not only rich but ambitious, attractive and able, and who, with no sons of his own, virtually adopted the disinherited princeling—and (3) a German school master named Kurt Hahn.

Hilton, best remembered for his "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," must be credited with knowing something about school masters. He ranks Hahn, who as a refugee from Nazi Germany established a school at Gordonstoun in Morayshire, Scotland, among the best, describing him as "among the rarer spiritual influences that historians of this century may remember when the dust has settled and when many 'bigger' names have been forgotten."

HAHN'S motto for his new school was, "Live always as though you were about to make a journey," and his life was dedicated to training the young for a life of service. "The individual becomes a cripple if he is not qualified by education to serve the community."

Now old and retired, Kurt Hahn is quoted as describing the kind of boy his school aimed to create: "He will have a trained heart and a trained nervous system which will stand him in good stead in fever, exposure, and shock; he will have acquired spring and powers of acceleration; he will have built up stamina and know how to tap his hidden resources. He may enjoy the well-being which goes with a willing body. He will have trained his tenacity and patience, his initiative and forethought, his power of observation, and his power of care. He will have developed steadfastness and he will be able to say 'No' to the whim of the moment. He will have stimulated and nourished healthy interests until they become lively and deep, and perhaps develop into a passion. He will have discovered his strength."

HARRISON SMITH

Drawing from the jacket of "The Mandarins."

MLLE. SIMONE DE BEAUVOIR, France's major woman novelist and feminist, has been a somewhat enigmatic figure to Americans. Her relationship with Jean-Paul Sartre's bizarre existentialist movement, the translations of four diverse novels by her, her study of that unsavory nobleman the Marquis de Sade, and her lengthy protest against the unequal relationship between men and women in "The Second Sex" have at last been brought into focus by her 610-page novel, "The Mandarins," which has won her the Goncourt prize, the highest award in France.

It begins with a party in the small apartment of Henri Perron, successful novelist and journalist, to celebrate Christmas Eve, the liberation of Paris and the first announcements by Radio Paris of the collapse of General von Rundstedt's armies. Henri Perron is a hero of the Resistance, the owner and editor of L'Espoir, an independent newspaper he has founded. He is bored with his once beautiful and talented mistress, Paula, who represents the author's conception of the woman who abandons her ego and clings like a limpet to the man whom she loves.

HENRI'S guests reveal conflicting opinions of Parisian intellectuals about the political future of France. Robert Dubreuilh, an older, famous writer is flirting with the Communists; Anne, his wife, is a psychoanalyst, uneasily attached to her celebrated husband; Nadine, their daughter, is a sullen, temperamental adolescent who goes to bed with any man who interests her. Then there is a Communist writer, always explaining the present, past and future constantly revised by the party; a political philosopher; a young Resistance fighter who still finds it amusing to hunt down and murder collaborators.

The novel is a fascinating study of political and intellectual Paris, torn between hope and apprehension for the future, and awareness that the country has lost its power and prestige. The fear of most of the characters of the United States is obvious. "Now you begin to realize," a young writer says, "that Americans are beasts, as racist as the Nazis." Henri takes Nadine with him to Portugal, with the tacit consent of his Paula and the girl's mother. He writes violent articles attacking the dictatorship and the abysmal poverty of the people, and incidentally blaming the United States for failing to turn Spain and Portugal into democracies by ridding them of Franco and Salazar.

Several of the most fascinating of Mlle. de Beauvoir's chapters concern Anne Dubreuilh's visit to the United States to attend a psychoanalytic conference. Americans who have read the author's account of her own visit three years ago will find that Anne has a somewhat higher opinion of our country; at any rate, she has a love affair with a Chicago novelist and returns to Paris reinvigorated. Anne is one of the most interesting characters in "The Mandarins." Intelligent, serene and wise, she accepts the turmoil of politics, betrayals and amorous interludes among the intellectual dwellers on the Left Bank as the necessary concomitant of France's revival from the ghastly years of German occupation.

There can be no doubt that "The Mandarins" is a brilliant and highly readable accomplishment. It is certainly the most stimulating account to date of the political, intellectual and moral history of France after the liberation. In American literature there is no fiction which has the slightest resemblance to this long and often tortuous novel, for there has never been in the United States the intellectual and political ferment of a dozen warring and powerful parties, and there is certainly no resemblance in our dying Bohemias and Greenwich Villages to the mental fervor of the poets, novelists and playwrights of France.

Vivid Story Of Adventure In Asian War

JOHNNY PURPLE, by John Wyllie. (Dutton, 190 pgs., $3.)

JACK ALDRIDGE

THERE is a strong pulse of life in this novel about a Royal Air Force bombardment squadron that is making a valiant last-ditch stand in Sumatra in a futile attempt to thwart the Japanese invasion of The Netherlands East Indies at the beginning of World War II. Squadron-leader Johnny "Purple" Mason is the fair-haired hero of the squadron, and like most fine, pure hero-types who are respected by their men and desired by all women, Johnny meets death before the final chapter when his heavily-loaded twin-engine bomber fails to clear the trees at the end of the runway during a take-off.

In Mr. Wyllie's words, "He stood out from the others like a piece of good porcelain in a secondhand dealer's window." In one of the few bits of dialogue given to him in the novel, Johnny says: "Sin to me does not mean failure—it means giving in to failure. If I did that—if I gave in, then life would be without point because I should have found myself to be worthless."

The action-scenes alternate between the tense, air operations against the Japanese fleet (flying ancient Blenheims probably, though the author doesn't say) and the gin-and-tonic atmosphere of the Palembang officers' club. More interesting than Johnny is his room-mate, the older, more worldly Flight Lieutenant Frenchie Perrier, who deftly catches the Wing-commander's attractive, warm-blooded wife, Clarissa, when she throws herself at the innocent Johnny. Perrier goes on to lead the squadron through its last hopeless days of combat after Johnny's death.

THERE are some unusually penetrating, thumbnail characterizations in the novel, including that of the Air Commodore who dislikes the tropical stickiness of the Far East and dreams of his retirement to the comfort of a fireside during the long English winter; the young aircraft observer who is disappointed when he tries to buy love from a Sumatran girl using a Chinese merchant as an intermediary; and Clarissa's husband, the wing-commander with the stiff chin and weak character who is killed during a Japanese air attack in a drunken attempt to warn the ground-crewmen.

Mr. Wyllie's first novel, "The Goodly Seed," about four years of prison camp life under a brutal Japanese sergeant and some Korean guards in the East Indies, was one of the best books published in 1955. "Johnny Purple" is also obviously drawn from his personal experience of the events immediately preceding his entry into Japanese captivity in 1942. It is full of the real flavor of the R.A.F.

ANDREW GARVE has produced another fine novel notable for its originality. He is one author who follows no formula but each of his books is a superb example of the detective story at its highest level. This story concerns Peter Mallory, a forest warden, and his teen-age adopted daughter, Anne. Mallory thinks his visitor is a clergyman until the man says, "I'm not really a clergyman. Blackmail is my profession." This fiend masquerading as a minister outlines his plan to tell Anne that her father, who has died in prison, murdered her mother. 'Culture' Book

VOICES FROM THE PAST: A Classical Anthology for the Modern Reader, by James and Janet Maclean Todd. (E. P. Dutton, 549 pgs., $6.50.)

HERE is a perfectly good collection of bits and fragments from the works of almost every classical writer: "from 800 B.C. or earlier to A.D. 500." All of the pieces, of course, are in translation, the work of scholars and literary men from the sixteenth century to the present, with the heaviest representation from the nineteenth century. The editors have shown wide knowledge and impeccable taste.

It seems to me, however, that all of this is labor in vain. There are probably not 10 reasonably literate adults in America who do not own at least three copies apiece of "culture" books of this sort. When they are not admonitory gifts from parents or irritating relatives their purchase represents the general American's feeling of guilt that he is letting his mind "go to pieces" because he is not reading anything "serious." The guilty feeling is assuaged by purchase and payment rather than by reading.

If, by some chance a reader actually gave a certain period each week to reading this book all the way through, if he then selected an author or two or three from the lot and proceeded to read, study and digest their major works, then he would find, in the course of five or 10 years, that he had gained something of value.

How Cortes Used Warships

NAVAL POWER IN THE CONQUEST OF MEXICO, by C. Harvey Gardiner. (University of Texas Press, 253 pgs., $4.95.)

JAMES N. GOODSELL

HERNANDO CORTES

MEXICAN history has been called one of "unending facets." This book does much to prove this point. In "Naval Power in the Conquest of Mexico," professor C. Harvey Gardiner of Washington University has added a new dimension to the story of Hernando Cortes's conquest of the ancient Aztec Empire.

The story may have been told and retold countless times, but one seems to never tire of hearing about the resolute and yet tragic little band of Spaniards who came to the shores of a new world and fought their way to the Indian city of Tenochtitlan, the present-day Mexico City, built in the center of the vast lake that then covered the mountain-encased Valley of Mexico.

Dr. Gardiner traces the conquest, beginning with the sea voyage from Cuba, carrying it through the march inland to the Indian capital, and ending with the magnificent feat of building a fleet of vessels to subdue the city.

The author's account unravels quite naturally around the figure of Cortes—a man whose understanding of ships and the sea was limited, but whose understanding of men and enthusiasm for an idea were immeasurably greater than those around him. Cortes was essentially a landsman, but his recognition of the importance of naval power is credited by the author as a dominant factor in the success of his endeavor in Mexico.

Together with his master shipwright, Martin Lopez, Cortes created and used a navy more than a mile above sea level. Salvaging the remains of the fleet that had carried his men from Cuba and which he beached on the Mexican shore, Cortes and his men transported tons of material over mountains, through jungles, and onto deserts, in order to reassemble a flotilla capable of smashing the Indian stronghold. Boldness and audacity were essential elements in the drama. But perhaps even more important was the iron-fisted will of Cortes and his subordinates.

WHILE Dr. Gardiner emphasizes the naval aspect of the conquest, he does not in any way slight the magnificent accomplishments of the Spanish soldier whose land mission was paramount. He does, nevertheless, put into more proper perspective the story of the conquest.

There is much in Dr. Gardiner's book that will seem highly technical to the general reader, i.e., the roster of sailors on the voyage from Cuba to Mexico, the long discussion of widths and tonnage of ships, controversies over the length of Indian causeways, and the like. But this should not deter the many American readers now interested in Mexican history.

Books for Young People

MR. WIBBERLEY has succeeded admirably in bringing to life the young Churchill, whose life was so different from that of most American boys. The contradictions and surprises which characterize Churchill are strikingly presented: although in the lower half at Harrow, he won the school's top prize for memorization; loathing mathematics as a boy and always poor in it, he later became Chancellor of the Exchequer; trained as a cavalry officer, he was made First Lord of the Admiralty; failing Latin as a student, he quoted it freely in some of the most striking addresses ever to be made in the English language. Twelve pages of photographs add greatly to the appeal of this fine biography.

THE TENTH WONDER: ATOMIC ENERGY, by Carleton Pearl. Illustrated by Robert J. Lee. (Little, Brown, $3.)

ATOMS TODAY AND TOMORROW, by Margaret O. Hyde. Illustrated by Clifford N. Geary. (Whittlesey House, $2.50.)

JOHN LEWELLEN'S "The Mighty Atom" is a good elementary introduction for the younger child to the atom's structure and fissionable character, knowledge of which he hopes will lead to its use for peaceful means. Bridging the span to the older child is Carleton Pearl's "The Tenth Wonder," which goes beyond to include a well-written and intimate report on the excitement that pervaded the laboratories of early pioneers when the atom was split. He explains, too, how the resulting nuclear reactors and atomic machinery operate and what form they may take to accomplish good for the future.

A fuller treatment for the young people is Margaret Hyde's "Atoms Today and Tomorrow," which not only explains what is known about the atom but has a large portion devoted to the fascinating experimental work in medicine, agriculture, transportation and other fields of endeavor. The last two are indexed, and all have authoritative backing. What is most significant, however, is the emphasis upon the use of atomic force for man's betterment in a world at peace.

EUROPE EXPECTS LITTLE CHANGE IN SOVIET POLICY

News of Molotov Resignation Received With Satisfaction but as Sop to Tito.

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—Western Europe received the news of the resignation of V. M. Molotov as Soviet foreign minister with considerable satisfaction today but could foresee no spectacular changes in Russian foreign policy.

Molotov was the man who most persistently said "no" to Western suggestions for an East-West accord. Diplomats hoped there may be a somewhat different refrain now.

Molotov's removal as the chief director of Russian foreign policy was generally regarded as slowly unfolding its new look attitude in world relationships, an assurance that the Kremlin, was not thinking of any retreat to Stalinism.

Molotov's going was big news everywhere in Europe, but there was little official comment. In many quarters his retirement had been expected, and a general view was that he no longer fitted into new Kremlin patterns. British government sources said his departure "just catches up with events in Russia."

Gesture to Tito.

Western newspapers generally regarded the acceptance of Molotov's resignation as an extraordinary gesture of conciliation to President Josip (Tito) Broz of Yugoslavia, who began an official visit to Russia today. The timing was regarded a pointed indication that Russia places high value on healing the breach with Yugoslavia, in which Molotov was a prime mover in 1948.

There was no disposition in Western Europe to believe Russian foreign policy was softening to any remarkable degree. The independent West Berlin Morgenpost said Molotov's successor as Foreign Minister, Dmitri Shepilov, would be "no less dangerous in negotiations with the free world."

A similar opinion was expressed in Britain, where government sources said no remarkable changes in Soviet policy were foreseen.

"The new Foreign Minister," said the non-Communist leftist newspaper Franc-Tireur of Paris, "many times distinguished himself by his doctrinal stiffness and his fanaticism. The (French) Socialist delegation which recently went to Moscow was struck by the cynicism of Shepilov, who used the scornful language of a Communist sure of the triumph of his cause and of the eventual disappearance of Democratic Socialism."

'Not a Soft Man.'

The rightist Le Figaro in Paris commented that Shepilov was "not a 'soft' man.

"Molotov's replacement could have been an occasion for the Kremlin to make a gesture of relaxation," the newspaper said. "We note that it has not."

In Belgrade, the semi-official Yugoslav news agency Yugopress said that "thanks to realistic appraisals" Soviet foreign policy was "merging from isolation, in which it found itself because of the cold war and the strict bloc division of the world."

Some newspapers described Molotov as just a tired old man at 66, and said his replacement now merely meant that he no longer has the flexibility to adjust himself to the new look.

Across the world, the Chinese Nationalists in Taipei took the view that the shift was merely a cold war move that will have no effect on basic Kremlin policies.

"The replacement of Molotov would be significant," said one official, "only if it deceives the Western powers into thinking the Soviet leaders are really revising Stalin's policies."

GROUP TO PLAN 90 MILLION MEDICAL SCHOOL AID NAMED

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Appointment of a special committee to recommend a plan for distribution of a previously announced appropriation of $90,000,000 to the nation's privately supported medical schools was announced today by H. Rowan Gaither Jr., chairman of the Board and president of the Ford Foundation.

Lee DuBridge, president of the California Institute of Technology, will serve as chairman of the medical school grants advisory committee. Executive vice chairman will be Carlyle Jacobsen, executive dean for medical education, State University of New York.

The $90,000,000 appropriation has been designated by the Ford Foundation's trustees to be used as endowment by the privately supported medical schools inthe strengthening of their instruction. Allocations to individual institutions will be determined by the trustees after the advisory committee has completed its report.

The appropriation is part of the $500,000,000 announced in December 1955 for college faculty salaries, private hospitals and medical schools and is entirely apart from the $10,000,000 appropriated on April 15 to the National Fund for Medical Education.

Dulles left May 25 and originally had planned to return on Monday.

Shepilov Sees U.S. as Villain And Main Barrier to Socialism

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

New Soviet Foreign Minister Believes, However, Communism Will Take Over the World.

By TOM WHITNEY

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP) — Dmitri Shepilov, the new Soviet Foreign Minister, sees the United States as the No. 1 villain in the world and as the main barrier to world-wide Socialism.

Shepilov may change the keynote in his new post as Foreign Minister, but here are some of the things he had to say about the United States just a little more than a month ago:

"Do there exist in the world forces which are plotting against the popular masses, trying to force their will on other countries, systematically interfering in other peoples affairs? Yes, they exist. They are imperialist circles and first of all the reactionary forces of the United States. They have a policy of dictation in other countries of the Western Hemisphere and everywhere orient themselves on traitors and renegades, create diversionist centers and organizations which work against lawful governments and poison the international atmosphere."

Speaker at Lenin Meeting.

As chief editor of Pravda Shepilov spoke on April 22 in Moscow at the meeting commemorating the eighty-sixth birthday of V. I. Lenin, the founder of Soviet Communism. He made his position on world affairs plain.

For example, he made completely clear he believes socialism will take over the world. He said:

"The chief characteristic of our epoch, the twentieth congress of the (Communist) party pointed out, consists in the spreading of socialism beyond the bounds of one country and its transformation into a world-wide system."

Shepilov also said the Soviet Union could use anti-colonialism for its own ends.

"The struggle against colonialism, against imperialist oppression, is that broad base on which popular movements, different in type and force, can come together and are coming together," he declared.

While Shepilov stressed the intention of the Soviet Union to bring about world-wide socialism, he also in the April 22 speech repeated old familiar slogans about peaceful coexistence.

Along with his bitter denunciation of the United States, Shepilov said:

"In the world there is not one state, not one people, with whom our glorious and mighty socialist homeland does not strive to have firm, peaceful relations on the basis of full equality and reciprocity."

Expresses Party Line.

In all these things, of course, Shepilov was expressing not just his own views but also the Soviet Communist party line as laid down by Party Boss Nikita Khrushchev and others at the twentieth congress of the Communist party last February and since.

Shepilov played a role in the formulation of the party line and in his positions as a secretary of the central committee in charge of Communist party propaganda work, as editor-in-chief of Pravda, and as an alternate member of the presidium of the Central Committee he was responsible for seeing that the party line was propagandized among Soviet people.

"Our age," said Shepilov in winding up his speech, "is the age of great triumph of the all-conquering ideas of Marxism-Leninism."

GREEK CYPRIOTS BOMB HOME OF U.S. OFFICIAL

No One Hurt—Attack Is First Direct Incident Against an American Citizen.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, June 2 (UP)—Greek Cypriots bombed the house of United States consular official John Meehan last night, terrorizing his wife and three children who were preparing to retire.

The bomb ripped apart the front veranda and shattered windows but nobody was injured.

It was the first direct incident against a United States citizen in the year-long struggle of the Greek Cypriots to wrest this strategic eastern Mediterranean island from Britain.

Meanwhile British Governor Sir John Harding left Nicosia airport for urgent consultations in London on the future of this troubled island. The departure of Harding and his wife was surrounded by stringent security precautions. Similar precautions were taken in London, since Cypriot nationalists have threatened to kill Harding.

Meehan, of West Acton, Mass., is a communications official at the United States monitoring station attached to the consulate. He was away working the night shift when his wife telephoned to report the bombing. He said a doorway and windows were smashed.

The only other incident involving an American prior to last night was the bombing several weeks ago of a parked automobile owned by a United States consular attache. The car was empty and authorities said the fact that it belonged to an American could have been merely chance.

Another British soldier died in a hospital last night. He was one of the 15 injured when a bomb was thrown into a truck loaded with soldiers in Famagusta Wednesday. Two others were killed outright.

RUSSIAN CHURCH GROUP GETS MIXED WELCOME TO U.S.

NEW YORK, June 2 (UP)—Eight Russian church leaders arrived here today for a 10-day lesson in religious freedom in the United States.

They got their first taste of democracy the moment they stepped onto American soil. While officials of one religious organization shook their hands in welcome, members of another picketed the airport terminal to protest against the visit of "spies."

The visitors' Scandinavian Airlines plane touched down at Idlewild International Airport nearly six hours late because of bad weather. They were whisked off shortly afterward to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Pickets, organized by the American Council of Christian Churches, charged the visitors were Soviet agents, rather than true ministers. Welcoming delegation was sent to the airport by the National Council of Churches, the Russians' official host.

Metropolitan Nicolai, head of the Russian Orthodox Church, led the Russian group in repaying a visit made to Russia last March by a group of American ministers organized by the National Council. They will resume discussions opened in Moscow on ways for the churches of East and West to work together.

PUTS SON ON TRAIN TRACKS, WATCHMAN RESCUES INFANT

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—A father placed his 3-month-old son on the tracks in front of a train today, police reported, but a watchman rescued the infant.

The father, John Birk, 33 years old, an Estonian refugee, then pummeled the watchman, Henry Davis, 35, officers said. Onlookers at the New York Central yards summoned police who subdued Birk and arrested him on charges of endangering the life and limb of a minor.

Police said the episode followed a fight between Birk, who had been drinking, and his wife. The baby was placed in the New York foundling home.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIANS VOTE FOR WOMEN ELDERS

MONTREAT, N.C., June 2 (UP) — The 96th general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. voted today to allow women to hold office as elders and deacons.

The decision was reached after two hours of debate and a close vote with 234 commissioners for the proposal and 226 against. The question now will go to the 85 presbyteries comprising the Presbyterian church, South.

The question of marriage and divorce is slated to come up in sessions Monday. Also on the agenda for next week is the segregation issue.

IRON LUNG USED IN ATTEMPT TO SAVE BOY MAULED BY LION

LONDON, June 2 (UP)—Doctors used an iron lung today in an effort to save the life of 9-year-old Tony Murphy who lost both arms when he was mauled by a lion.

The boy's condition improved yesterday but he went into a coma during the night and was placed in the iron lung.

A lion seized Tony when the boy climbed a guard fence and started teasing the caged beast at the London zoo Thursday. His scoutmaster, Father Ronald Aylward, beat the lion with an iron bar and snatched the boy free.

SOVIET EMBASSY CLERK ACCUSED BY 3 IN U.S. DEPARTS

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—Vladimir Mikheev, a Soviet embassy clerk who was accused of trying to obtain information from three Government employes, has quietly left Washington for Russia with his wife and child.

An official report filed by the embassy with the State Department showed today that Mikheev was going home "on leave." But United States officials consider it extremely improbable he will return even though the State Department has taken no action against him.

Three Government employes reported last month that Mikheev had tried to arrange with them to provide him with information on United States military history and similar matters. Some said the information he was after did not appear to be of a secret nature.

SHOWGIRL JOYCE MATHEWS AND BILLY ROSE MARRIED

NEW YORK, June 2 (UP)—Millionaire Broadway producer Billy Rose and former showgirl Joyce Mathews, who was named the "other woman" when swimmer Eleanor Holm divorced him two years ago, were married today in a brief civil ceremony in an apartment overlooking Central Park.

Rose, whose first wife was the late comedienne Fanny Brice, and Miss Mathews, who has been television comedian Milton Berle's wife twice, were married by New York State Supreme Court Justice Samuel Gold in the Central Park West apartment of Abe Burrows, a producer and comedian.

Miss Mathews, the daughter of a New York stockbroker, first was linked with Rose in 1951 after her second divorce from Berle, when she attempted suicide by slashing her wrists in Rose's apartment. Three years later, Miss Holm divorced Rose, naming Miss Mathews as co-respondent.

HOUSE COMMITTEE VOTES TO EXPAND FARM CREDIT

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—An expanded direct farm loan program providing more liberal credit terms to farmers was approved yesterday by the House Agriculture Committee.

The program, contained in a bill authored by Chairman Harold Cooley (Dem.), North Carolina, would make available an additional $50,000,000 for emergency loan programs, permit financially pressed small farmers to refinance existing indebtedness, and provide assistance to "part-time" and low-income farmers.

The Federal Housing Administration would be authorized, for the first time, to make loans to "part-time" farmers for real estate improvement and operating expenses.

The Cooley bill also would increase from $7000 to $9000 the maximum amount of an initial federal loan for farm operating purposes, and from $10,000 to $15,000 the total indebtedness outstanding at one time.

Molotov Resignation Marks End of Era in Red Diplomacy

He Served as Stalin's 'Hammer' Against West—Dulles Praised His Skill.

By HARRY SCHWARTZ

NEW YORK, June 2—Vyacheslav M. Molotov's resignation as Soviet Foreign Minister appears symbolically to mark the end of an era of Soviet diplomacy.

The name Molotov, a pseudonym, is derived from the Russian word for hammer. It was as Stalin's hammer against the West, first in 1939 and then after World War II, that Molotov gained world-wide attention. During the last year of "soft" Soviet foreign policy words and actions, his presence as Foreign Minister has often seemed an anomaly, a relic of the past.

But the timing of Molotov's resignation seems to have been dictated not by his past anti-Western policy, but by the visit to Moscow of Yugoslav President Josip (Tito) Broz, the man against whom Molotov hammered with all his power, but fruitlessly.

Dulles Tribute.

A prim, schoolmasterish figure of a man, Molotov's real talents have often been obscured by the legend that Lenin considered him the best filing clerk in Russia, and nothing more. Yet Secretary of State John Foster Dulles recognized his stature more adequately in this remarkable tribute:

"I have seen in action all the great international statesmen of this century, beginning with those who met at The Hague peace conference of 1907. I have never seen personal diplomatic skill at so high a degree of perfection as Mr. Molotov's at the 1945 London meeting of the great power foreign ministers."

Dulles told how Molotov used different tactics on each of his antagonists at that meeting. Toward the American, James F. Byrnes, he took advantage of the latter's liking for "off the cuff" statements to try to get errors he could use. He baited the Briton, Ernest Bevan, to get outbursts that might lay the ground for later apologetic concessions. He systematically played on the sensitiveness of the Frenchman, Georges Bidault, slighting him deliberately time and again in the hope this would make the French leave the conference.

It is in this failure of that 1945 conference to reach agreement that many observers see the formal beginning of the "cold war" which has dominated international relations since.

Replaced Litvinoff.

The most dramatic moment of Molotov's long foreign policy career, however, may well have been May 3, 1939, the day he entered the field by replacing Maxim Litvinoff as People's Commissar of Foreign Affairs. The world was thunderstruck by the news. Litvinoff had been identified with the policy of "collective security" against Hitler's Germany. There had been hints of a change in Stalin's speech two months earlier at the Communist party congress. What did the Molotov appointment mean, many asked with foreboding.

These fears were soon justified. On Aug. 24, 1939, in Moscow, Molotov and Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop signed the Nazi-Soviet pact. Seven days later German armies invaded Poland and World War II began.

Only later did the world learn that a secret protocol to this pact had divided Poland between Germany and the Soviet Union, and given the latter a free hand to expand into the Middle East, south of the Soviet Caucasus.

In 1940, Molotov negotiated directly with Hitler, pressing new Soviet claims on the Balkans. Those demands helped Hitler decide that he must destroy the Soviet power before it became too powerful, an effort he launched with the Nazi invasion of June 21, 1941. It is now known that Stalin and Molotov received advance warning of the Nazi plans, but they chose not to believe these warnings and Russia paid heavily for that neglect.

V. M. MOLOTOV

Role in World Conferences.

During World War II and afterward, Molotov played a major role at most important international conferences, including the 1946 San Francisco meeting which founded the United Nations. When he visited Washington during the war and stayed at the White House, it was discovered that he slept with a pistol near him—grim testimony of the suspicion and fear that made up the atmosphere in Stalin's circle.

Overshadowed by his prominence in foreign policy matters these past 17 years, Molotov's earlier career also gives many clues to understanding his career and his place in history. He had risen from schoolboy revolutionary in the sleepy Volga river city of Wazan to Premier of the Soviet Union before he ever became Foreign Minister. And most of that long road he traversed alongside Stalin, his master.

Clash With Stalin.

Ironically, however, as Soviet historians admitted only earlier this week, the first meeting of the two which has gone into history resulted in a clash.

This was in March 1917, immediately after the overthrow of the Czarist regime and its replacement by the moderate provisional government. For a few days the young Molotov ran the Bolshevik organ, Pravda, taking the ultra-left line that the new regime must be overthrown. Then Stalin arrived on the scene and ordered a more conciliatory course. Molotov acquiesced, but a month later Lenin returned to Russia, ordered the Molotov line reinstated, and it was Stalin who had to fall into line.

In 1921, at the age of 31, Molotov became the youngest man in history to become an alternate member of the Politburo. But his real rise later in the 1920's came as the result of his stand alongside of Stalin's in the latter's struggle for complete power against his rivals, Leon Trotsky, Lev Kamenev, Grigory Zinoviev, and others.

Stalin Grateful.

Staline was grateful. In 1925 he made Molotov a full Politburo member. In 1930, he made him premier of the Soviet Union. In the turbulent years which followed, Molotov directed the vast Soviet government machinery through crisis after crisis. He was Stalin's first lieutenant in the bloody struggle over collectivization of agriculture, in the merciless drive for industrialization at any cost, and in the great purges which terrorized the country from 1934 to 1938.

All this was a far cry from his modest origins. He was born in 1890 in the village of Kukarka, 500 miles northeast of Moscow. He was born Vyacheslav Scriabin, son of a merchant and cousin of the famed Russian composer, Alexander Scriabin. Molotov actually studied to be a violinist but he gave up music when he became a revolutionary at the age of 16.

His wife is Jewish. Pauline Zhemchuzhina, and they have two daughters, one adopted. His wife's Jewish origins, it is widely believed, caused her to be exiled in Stalin's last days, and made Molotov one of the possible intended victims of the anti-Semitic frame-up of early 1953 known as the "doctors plot."

JAPANESE SOCIALISTS FAIL IN NO-CONFIDENCE MOVE

TOKYO, June 2 (AP)—A Socialist non-confidence motion against Prime Minister Hatoyama's cabinet was beaten yesterday, climaxing three days of chaos and fighting in Parliament.

The House of Representatives voted 258 to 151 against the motion which the Socialist opposition introduced to keep cabinet ministers from attending to a legislative logjam in the upper house.

There were predictions that all remaining legislation—including the Philippines reparations pact—would fail to pass the current session, which ends Sunday midnight.

Varying accounts had up to 12 persons hurt, some hospitalized, in sporadic, name-calling fights. One secretary was taken to a hospital and a Socialist deputy fainted.

McManus, 7745 Peach Tree lane, University City, and Donald H. Stewart Jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Donald H. Stewart, 531 West Jewell avenue, Kirkwood.

McManus was graduated cum laude and has been selected for the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International affairs at Princeton University. Stewart was awarded a medallion as a member of the senior class who had rendered the greatest unselfish interest to the college.

HOCKER WOULD NAME WOMEN TO TOP JOBS

G.O.P. Candidate Says They Are Entitled to Voice in State Affairs.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 2—Lon Hocker, St. Louis attorney and candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, today said he intends to seek out capable and experienced women administrators to fill important positions in the state government, if he is elected.

Speaking at a state-wide meeting of Republican Women's Clubs at Hotel Governor, Hocker asserted that women are entitled to a greater voice in state affairs.

"In their interest in and understanding of governmental affairs—women do not lag behind men," Hocker said. "More than half of the citizens of the state are women. They are just as smart and, in the fields that primarily concern them, they are even more experienced than men."

In announcing his intention of appointing women to important positions in the state government, he referred particularly to the Department of Public Health and Welfare, which involves many aspects of family life, including milk and food sanitation, nursing, health education, mental health, aid to dependent children and care of the aged.

"What is most needed," he said, "is the elimination of political deadwood from the handling of welfare and relief cases. We need greater efficiency, but we need sympathetic consideration of the needs of our unfortunate or aged citizens as well."

Joseph M. Whealen of St. Louis, Hocker's principal opponent for the gubernatorial nomination, told the meeting that the handling of idle state funds "still is the key issue in the gubernatorial campaign and the only major issue on which a sound and successful campaign can be waged against the Democrats."

He referred to the fact that for years the state received no interest on idle state funds while the banks which handled the money earned returns on it.

The Missouri Legislature at its recent special session passed a proposed constitutional amendment which would assure the state a return on idle funds. The proposal will be submitted to the voters at the Nov. 7 general election, or at a special election called by the Governor before that date.

Under terms of the proposed amendment, idle funds would be placed on interest-bearing time deposits, or invested in short-term Government securities.

LOWER EXPOSURE LIMIT URGED FOR ATOMIC WORKERS

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—Sharply reduced limits on radiation exposure for atomic and other radiation workers have been recommended by an international commission.

The recommendation was made because of "possible genetic damage and possible shortening of life span" from the present system, a Government scientist disclosed yesterday.

Dr. Lauriston S. Taylor of the National Bureau of Standards said that a group of radiation experts from major countries has recommended that the present exposure limits be "in effect, lowered by a factor of three."

Taylor said the decision had been reached more than a month ago in Geneva, Switzerland, but not made public until now.

It was made by the International Commission on Radiological Protection, a non-governmental commission.

MAN WHO WOULD 'SHOOT ALL RUSSIANS' KILLS REFUGEE

NASSAU, N. Y., June 2 (AP)—A refugee doctor was shot and killed today by a man who shouted at him to leave "before I shoot all the Russians," state police reported.

Dr. Boris Klasons, 40 years old, was struck by a rifle bullet that shattered the glass of a car window as he started to drive away from a farm where he had been called to treat a patient.

Daniel Slivko, 36, was charged with first degree murder. The shooting occurred on his small farm.

Dr. Klasons, a native of Latvia, was imprisoned by the Germans in World War II. He came to the United States five years ago with his wife, Velta, also a doctor.

Police said Dr. Klasons was called to the farm this morning to examine Slivko's mother Sabina. They said Slivko ordered the physician to leave "before I shoot all the Russians."

FREE NATIONS SAID TO NEED 90 BILLION IN FIVE YEARS

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, June 2 — Free nations overseas will need $90,000,000,000 in new capital over the next five years just to sustain their recent growth in population, G. Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said here yesterday.

He pointed out, however, that these countries are not capable of raising this "staggering" sum by themselves and said American private capital could play a vital role in spurring foreign economic development.

He told the Los Angeles World Affairs Council that private United States investments overseas totaled $27,000,000,000 at the end of 1954, nearly double the 1946 figure, and said a "hopeful" trend is developing toward simplified exchange rates and more favorable tax laws to attract American capital.

STRONG STOCK COMEBACK; FIRST WEEKLY GAIN IN FOUR

Market Reaches Lowest Level Since January, Then One-Day Rally Equals Widest Since 1939.

By JOHN G. FORREST
Financial Editor, The New York Times.

NEW YORK, June 2.

THE STOCK MARKET staged a strong comeback this week, closing with a gain for the first time in four weeks. After it had sagged on Monday to the lowest level since January, a spirited rally on Tuesday gained twice as much ground as was lost the day before. The gains, as measured by the New York Times index of 50 representative stocks, equalled the big advance of Feb. 17 which had been the widest since 1939. Stocks were mixed and quiet in the two final sessions of the week.

There was no one news development to account for the sudden reversal in trend. The upturn came as the vital steel wage negotiations got under way. Few believed, however, that those discussions could have set off the rally. Some observers attributed it to the oversold condition of the market and to short covering.

19.23 Points Lost in May.

May came to a close with prices displaying a firmer tone. Even so, the Times average lost 19.23 points in the month. The decline just about canceled out the gains established earlier in the year.

There was plenty of ammunition available in the month to permit an attack on values. First, the market itself was vulnerable after its long climb. When the plight of the automobile industry worsened, selling in motor stocks had an unsettling effect on the rest of the list. The squabble over money rates was not helpful in maintaining confidence and the possibility of a steel strike also was a source of concern.

The demands of the United Steelworkers were laid before the leaders of the steel industry during the week. They were about what had been expected. They call for a "substantial" wage increase, a full year's supplementary unemployment pay, overtime for weekend work and increased welfare benefits. Both the producers and the union expressed hope that a new contract would be written before the July 1 strike deadline.

New Farm Bill Signed.

Meanwhile, President Eisenhower signed the new farm bill this week, even though it was not altogether to his liking. He said that "its advantages outweigh its harmful provisions." The President was particularly pleased with the establishment of a soil bank, an innovation.

Under this provision, farmers are paid for taking their crop lands out of production and planting them into soil-building cover crops or trees. But the chief executive said it would be "virtually impossible to put the soil bank properly into effect in 1956." He expressed disappointment "that advance payments to farmers are not provided for" in the new bill. However, Ezra Taft Benson, secretary of agriculture, started the bank on a limited scale.

Auto Situation.

The automobile industry operated this week at its lowest level of the year. Production fell to 75,589 cars. Many assembly plants were shut down not only for the Memorial Day holiday but for the five days ending Sunday. The halt in operation at what is normally the peak production season, was designed to reduce heavy dealer inventories. The industry, on top of these headaches, is faced with a demand for a shorter work week without a reduction in pay. This is the next goal of the United Automobile Workers, according to Walter P. Reuther, its president.

The drop in orders for steel sheet products by automobile manufacturers had no visible effect on steel production because of the continuing large orders for other items, particularly structural steel.

U.S. TREASURY BONDS HAVE A SPOTTY WEEK

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—The Corporate Bond Market milled inconclusively this week, with the exception of convertibles which advanced in sympathy with the stock market.

United States Treasury Bonds ended an otherwise solid performance in May with a spotty week. Government issues dropped sharply Tuesday, when the stock market scored its greatest one-day advance since 1939, then recovered hesitantly on Thursday and Friday.

In the corporate list, rails, utilities, quality investment issues and foreign dollar liens remained at or near their lows for the year. Japanese issues were steady in an irregular foreign section.

Volume slacked off during the holiday-shortened week. Trading slipped to $15,162,000 par value on the big board from $19,733,500 the week before and $16,549,400 for the same period in 1955.

For the week, the Government 2½s of 1963 and the Victory 2½s of December, 1972-67, gave up 4-32 each at 97 4-32 and 95 8-32 bid, respectively. The 30-year 3¼s climbed 8-32 at 104 22-32 while the 40-year 3s added 3-32 at 99 25 32s bid.

At Friday's closing prices, the 2½s of 1963 would yield 2.93 per cent and the victory 2½s 2.85 per cent. The 30-year 3¼s would yield 2.94 per cent and the 40-year 3s exactly 3 per cent.

The Federal Reserve came to the aid of the tight money market by buying $195,000,000 of 91-day treasury bills. This is the first substantial help of this kind since the last week in March. By buying short-term government securities in the open market, the "fed" is able to boost the reserves of its member banks so that they can make more commercial loans. Some economists believe the "fed" may ease its policy of tight bank reserves in order to make available more funds for the June 15 deadline when corporations traditionally have to borrow to pay federal income taxes.

New Securities.

In addition to ready absorption of current new issues, dealers were able to clean up inventory to a considerable extent.

MOST GRAIN FUTURES CLOSE WEEK LOWER

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—A majority of grain futures ended lower on the Board of Trade this week but only in July soybeans were losses very large. July beans dropped 8¾ cents. The best gains were recorded in new crop corn, entirely as a result of a sharp upsweep on Thursday and Friday. New crop soybeans made small fractional gains. Wheat advanced slightly but both oats and rye declined. Losses in rye were fairly large.

Wheat closed the week ⅜-1⅛c higher, corn 1½c lower to 2¼c higher, oats unchanged to 1 cent lower, rye 2¼-3½c lower, soybeans 8¾c lower to ½c higher and lard 40 to 65 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Old crop corn weakened on liquidation early in the week, recovering later. Cash prices held firm. The new crop months were bought late on the belief the new soil bank plan may result in some reduction in corn acreage and production.

Demand for both oats and rye was limited, although oats enjoyed a sharp advance Thursday. It was based primarily on short covering. New-crop soybeans got support largely because of their wide discount under old-crop months.

July soybeans fell under $3, touching $2.97¾ at one time. While recovering, July beans didn't show really impressive rallying power. Visible supply at Chicago increased and foreign countries held off expected purchases of soybean oil.

But wheat was getting support from bulls who thought the long-term trend pointed upward.

HOGS CLOSE AT $18 FOR GAIN OF 25C FOR WEEK

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., June 2—"Livestock markets displayed a cheerful tone during the week under the influence of moderate receipts and a higher dressed trade," said the Producers Livestock Marketing Association. Hogs strengthened to an equal of the best level since last summer and sizeable price gains were registered in most cattle and lambs. Supplies were curtailed by the Memorial day holiday.

Thursday's hog top of $18.25 cwt., paid for meat type animals, was on a par with the best figure received since last July and stood $6.40 above the December low. The market finished steady to 25c net higher for the week, with sales Friday downward from $18.000. Sows closed 25 to 50c lower, top Friday $15.00.

Slaughter steer and heifer cattle rose 50 to 75c on active demand. Choice 1229 and 1062-lb. steers topped at $21, prime mixed yearlings up to $22, top since January. Bulk of choice steers $18.25 to $19.50. Cows closed strong to 25c or more higher, bulls steady, and stocker and feeder steers and veal calves firm. Vealers sold downward from $25.

Spring lambs soared unevenly 50c to $1.50 as moderate numbers of choice and prime late placed at $26 to $27. Bulk of good and choice for the week was $23 to $26.

Salable receipts of livestock for May at National Stock Yards of 390,993 head were 30 per cent above those for the same month last year, and the largest May volume since 1944. It was one of the largest seasonal unloads in the history of the market.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

CHEERFUL SPOTS

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

BUSINESS men were betting most of their chips this week on an early upturn in consumer spending. That was the brightest ray of hope as the boom—particularly on the industrial front—showed further signs of slowdown. There was evidence that a modest pickup in retail trade might be under way right now. Morton J. May, chairman of May Department Stores Co., said the big chain's sales declined during Easter but now "appear to be following an upward trend." Said May: "We believe the outlook is favorable for continuing increases, both in sales and profits."

Equally bright prospects were seen by Wheelock H. Bingham, a director of R. H. Macy & Co. and head of its big New York store. Bingham's view: With consumer incomes high and likely to stay that way for a long time, retail sales this year should show a gain of 3 or even 4 per cent above last year's record level.

Other cheerful spots on the business scene this week: New proof of a rising trend in farmers' income, a brilliant if brief rally on the New York Stock Exchange, and hints that the tight money and credit situations might ease up soon.

On the Minus Side.

Looming large on the minus side were new cutbacks and layoffs in the auto and home appliance industries, a continued lag in housing starts (builders filled only 22,276 applications for FHA loans in April—2608 less than in March and 10,852 less than in April last year), and the prospect of a greater-than-seasonal dip this summer in the nation's steel production rate.

Much of the booming steel production of recent months (this week's output was scheduled at a hefty 96.5 per cent of capacity) has been the result of stockpiling by consumers eager to beat the new price rises many feel are coming soon.

Highlighting the dilemma of the steel consumer was the opening round of bargaining talks between steel management and steel labor. With negotiations in recess until next Wednesday, no one directly involved wanted to hazard a guess as to whether or not the union would call a strike. One thing seemed dead certain, though. Strike or no strike, wages would go up. And any wage raise would be followed at once by a boost in prices.

The motor industry continued to sputter along in second gear this week. Production of new cars fell to about 75,000—lowest in nearly two years. New car sales showed some improvement but not enough to make any sizable dent in the towering mountain of inventories, estimated at close to 900,000. According to people who usually make good guesses, the outlook is for more slowdowns, and more layoffs, in the weeks ahead. United States factories in May turned out some 470,-700 cars — down 31 per cent from the 724,892 produced in May last year. June production is expected to fall to about 447,-000 and in July it may slip below the 400,000 mark.

Business Is Brief.

Briefly over business scene: New reductions were posted this week in prices of copper, scrap steel, and western lumber. . . . Imports of foreign oil moved close to a record high. . . . Trade observers said consumer resistance might force cancellation of coffee price increases announced in recent weeks. . . .

COPPER DIPS ON WORLD MARKETS; U.S. HOLDS TO 46C

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Copper prices shifted lower this week on world markets and with U. S. custom smelters, but major U. S. producers held to the 46 cents a pound they set last February.

The widening gap between the producer price and other markets, which in the United States now amounts to 6 cents, has strengthened predictions of lower producer prices in the near future.

The big United States mining companies, now negotiating a new labor contract, may find a price cut advisable without waiting to learn the cost of labor under new contracts. Current pacts with the Independent Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union expire June 30.

Weakness in copper prices shows scarcities of last winter have been overcome. A strike in the industry, however, could quickly alter the supply picture. Walkouts against domestic producers last July and August, as well a strikes in Chile and Africa, were major factors in creating shortages that pushed prices last March to their highest levels in nearly 100 years.

The big United States producers, who now charge the highest price in the world, resisted the rise earlier in the year and did not follow custom smelters to their peak price of 55½ cents a pound in mid-March.

Since then custom smelters have been steadily lowering prices. On Tuesday they lopped off 2 cents, bringing their price down to 40 cents a pound. This followed a 1-cent cut the day before and a 2-cent reduction in the previous week.

On the London metal exchange copper declined sharply Tuesday but then rallied slightly and settled around 36⅞ cents a pound. The decline for the week was about 1½ cents.

African Combination.

The Rhodesian Selection Trust, a combination of big African mines, cut prices at the start of the week from 43¾ cents to 40 cents. Union Miniere Du Haut Katanga, the big Belgian Congo producer, brought its price down to 41.3 cents in two cuts totaling 1¼ cents during the week.

Brass mills and copper fabricators reported orders are light and customers appear to be living on inventories while waiting for prices to settle still lower. Cutbacks in auto and appliance industries have further reduced demand for copper products.

Auto and appliance industry cutbacks were also cited as the reason for continued slack demand for lead and zinc. Prices for both metals held firm, however.

Zinc refiners reported that along with reduced demand for high grades used in auto parts there has been a slower market for prime western zinc that goes primarily to the steel industry.

COTTON TEXTILE MARKET SLOW IN WEEK'S SUMMARY

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—The cotton textile market remained in doldrums during the past week, with the Memorial day holiday contributing to a further shrinkage in volume of cloth sales. Converters bought small quantities of print cloths and broadcloths for spot and nearby delivery. There was no special feature in other categories of goods, such as drills and twills. Increased resale offerings were noted in the heavy industrial goods section, with the slowdown in buying by the automotive industry contributing to quiet conditions.

The wool goods market was steady. New business was slow, but mills operated heavily on substantial backlogs of orders for the fall of 1956. Buyers appeared to be leaning more toward medium shades on spring 1957 fabrics, reducing the emphasis a year earlier on dark colors. Australian wool markets were steady. United States representatives were said to be buying very little at those sales, but dealer purchases of C.C.C. surplus wool stocks increased during May.

Rayon goods were sluggish. Some quarters said converter interest was more aggressive for acetate taffetas and some of the nylon constructions. Others could see no fundamental change in the cautious buying attitude of the past many weeks.

Flag Day Proclaimed.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—President Eisenhower yesterday proclaimed Thursday, June 14, as Flag day. He directed that the flag be displayed on all government buildings.

BENSON INSPECTS HOME OF FORMER FARM SECRETARY

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebr., June 2 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson paused today at Arbor Lodge, home of one of the early secretaries of agriculture.

Secretary Benson is on a two-day tour inspection of drouth areas in Nebrask and Iowa. Arbor Lodge was the home of J. Sterling Morton, who served in the Cleveland Administration. The property is now a state park.

Secretary Benson crossed into Nebraska last night from Iowa and spent the night at Nebraska City. In a brief discussion of farm problems he declared: "What I'd like to do is to move in the direction of greater freedom." This was the idea back of providing a support price for non-compliance corn, he explained.

"All we've been doing," he continued, "is chasing acres around. We want to get at it (the surplus problem) through the soil bank as a temporary means of getting the surplus down."

Under the old rigid support program Secretary Benson said: "We've been moving it (corn) in the back door faster than we can move it out of the front."

SUKARNO SEEKS AID, SYMPATHY FOR REVOLUTIONS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2 (AP)—Indonesian President Sukarno pleaded last night for technical assistance and for understanding of the national revolutions of Asia and Africa.

"Our revolution and the revolution of most of Asia and Africa is based upon a political idea, but has a social and economic content," the president of the seven-year-old republic said in an address to the World Affairs Council of Northern California.

Before his address, the Asia Foundation presented a second $10,000 grant to him for the University of Indonesia technical school at Saedong.

He blamed colonialism for the poverty and turbulence of Asia and Africa. Colonialism, he said, arrested the growth of governed areas, took all the profits, and shut the peoples off from the rest of this "beautiful and wealthy world."

ICC REFUSES TO RECONSIDER SALE OF ILLINOIS TERMINAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 2—The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday declined to reconsider authority granted last April to 11 major railroads to jointly purchase the Illinois Terminal Railroad Co. for $20,-000,000.

Reconsideration had been asked by the cities of Carlinville and Gillespie, Ill., the Little Dog Coal Co., and Gillespie Coal Mining Co., all served by the Illinois Terminal. Carlinville since has withdrawn from the case.

The transfer permit was redated to become effective June 10. The Illinois Terminal owns extensive trackage between Peoria and St. Louis and also the McKinley bridge, which spans the Mississippi river at St. Louis.

ETHIOPIA, RUSSIA RAISE LEGATIONS TO EMBASSIES

ADDIS ABABA, June 2 (AP)—Ethiopia and the Soviet Union have agreed to raise their respective legations in Moscow and Addis Ababa to embassy status the Ethiopian Foreign Ministry said today.

An Ethiopian national football team is leaving Wednesday for Russia to meet Soviet teams. All expenses of the 18 Ethiopian players are being paid by the Soviet government.

ENGLISH NURSE ON VISIT

Miss Mona Morriston Davies, an English nurse, will spend this week in St. Louis observing the work of Dr. James B. Brown, plastic surgeon, and will be a guest at the DePaul Hospital nurses' residence, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Davies' visit was arranged through the exchange program of the International Council of Nurses. This program brings many foreign nurses to this country each year on student visas to acquire additional nursing knowledge.

U.S. AID TO INDIA URGED LEST RED CHINA RULE ASIA

Mansfield Wants More Economic Help — Points to Political Effects.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP)—Senator Mansfield (Dem.) of Montana tonight suggested more economic help to India lest Red China dominate Asia and present a "dangerous" new threat to this country.

Mansfield, as chairman of a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, made public a study of the economic development race between India and China. He said:

"A dispassionate review of the relative progress of India and Communist China today raises a serious question as to whether India's rate of development is fast enough to serve free world interests.

"It seems to me that Congress, the Administration, and the American people might well reconsider our assistance to India from the point of view of whether it is, in fact, of sufficient magnitude to accomplish its objectives."

The study, entitled "Economic Development in India and Communist China," was made under supervision of the committee staff. It was released at a time when Congress is considering the Eisenhower Administration's $4,900,000,000 foreign aid program which the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted to cut by more than a billion dollars.

Critical of Neutral Stand.

Some members of Congress are critical of aid to India because of its neutral position in the cold war.

Mansfield voiced faith in "the devotion of the Indian people and their leaders to their democratic institutions" and said it was important "to demonstrate a clear superiority over totalitarian methods in economic as well as in spiritual terms."

He said he did not share the fear of some that India would "go Communist" if its economic development plans were not fully successful. But he said the result of the economic race between Red China and India would have "profound political consequences throughout Asia."

If India moves faster, he said, it will be in the interest of the United States.

"But if India falters," he said, "if Communist China becomes the dominant power of continental Asia, the danger to the United States will be immeasurably increased."

The study points out that the Red Chinese government claimed in November 1954 a mainland population of 582,-603,000. The census of 1951 placed India's population at 356,829,485.

Progress Traced.

It recites reports on the progress of economic development since India achieved independence in 1947 and the Communists assumed power in China in 1949.

It brings out that both India and China have undergone economic and political changes against a background of "predominantly agricultural economies, extreme poverty, low production, and maldistribution of wealth and income."

While the report asserts that precise comparisons are difficult, Mansfield said it affords little ground for "complacency."

He said the Indian government was "making a very considerable and effective effort."

Whether or not present progress is adequate to satisfy the legitimate aspirations of the Indian people, however, is a question to which the world needs to give serious thought."

China's use of prison and other forced labor, the study reported, has been an important factor in its higher capital construction investment rate. The Chinese consumer has been "forced to submit to austerity standards," it added, while in India there has been "a gradual increase in per capita consumption."

"The problem for India is how to increase capital investment without sacrificing democratic processes or the small gains that have been made in the standard of livinX," it said.

ANOTHER MAN IN PRINCESS'S LIFE IS GETTING MARRIED

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—Another young man whose name has been romantically linked with Princess Margaret is getting married — this time her cousin, Lord Carnegie.

Queen Elizabeth II last night approved his coming marriage to the Hon. Caroline Cicely Dewar. The "Hon." is added to her name because she is a daughter of a baron.

The Queen's consent was necessary under the Royal Marriage Act of 1772 because of Lord Carnegie's relationship to the royal family. His grandmother was Princess Louise, a daughter of King Edward VII.

Electronic and Mechanical ENGINEERS, Physicists:

An invitation to a better way of life...from Melpar

The Washington, D.C. Area provides a stimulating environment for professional and intellectual growth under conditions of minimum stress. Melpar laboratories are located in Northern Virginia, suburban to the Nation's Capital. The area enjoys the country's highest per capita income, is free of heavy industry and virtually depression-proof. Cultural, recreational and educational facilities abound. Housing is fine and plentiful.

Should you join Melpar you would tie your own professional growth to that of a Company which has doubled in size every 18 months for the past decade. Melpar maintains a policy of individual recognition which enables our engineers to progress according to their own time tables, not prearranged ones. Performance primarily determines advancement. Age, tenure, length of experience are only secondary considerations.

Melpar's unique "project team" system allows each engineer to experience the over-all approach to an engineering problem, thus enabling him to broaden his experience and background, essential to eventual directorship responsibility. Each project group is responsible for an entire problem, from initial conception to completion of prototype.

Complete facilities are at the engineer's disposal. Our new laboratories encompass over 265,000 air conditioned square feet and offer, in addition to a Central Model Shop, supplementary facilities, test equipment and personnel available for immediate use within each project group.

Fully-accredited graduate courses are available at Melpar, or you may enroll at one of the 5 universities in the Area which offer part-time curricula leading to higher degrees. An interview with our representative will give you more complete information. Qualified applicants will be invited to visit Melpar laboratories at Company expense.

DESIGNERS AND DRAFTSMEN . . .
We offer special opportunities in the interesting field of process piping and complete layouts for the fast-growing chemical industry. Here is why.
Vulcan Engineering Division is a well established firm in downtown Cincinnati engaged in chemical plant design and construction throughout the U.S. and abroad. Because of our medium size and the varying nature of our projects for different customers, a position here offers broad-range experience and work assignments, a high degree of personal responsibility and distinct opportunities for individual recognition.
Requirements for designers include piping and pressure vessel experience plus ability to lead and organize drafting work. For draftsmen 2 or more years general drafting experience is required; ASME code knowledge helpful but not essential. These are sound opportunities with good salaries in an aggressive organization which has been serving the chemical industry for 55 years. Send qualifications, data and present salary to personnel manager.

Perhaps the Leopard Has Changed Its Spots.

UNLESS there has been a tremendous change in major league club owners—and prima facie evidence indicates otherwise—Commissioner Ford Frick is being naive, unrealistic and overly optimistic when he suggests that the big leagues are going to do something most generous to help the minor leagues.

Frick announced, after a meeting with the owners in Detroit last week, that a definite program would be adopted to help the minors and intimated that the majors' new attitude was astonishingly generous.

Now, according to a story in The Sporting News, an outstanding proposal of "aid to the minors" is a "free agent draft plan," patterned after the one practiced by professional football and basketball.

Under the proposed plan, all college, high school, American Legion and sandlot players—free agents—would be put in a pool each year.

Now listen to the plan: The major leagues would hold a draft and each big league club would be permitted to draft "only" three players. Thus, before the poor minors would get a crack at the talent, the majors would skim 48 players off the top of the pool.

It is assumed that the major league clubs then would be given a year in which to negotiate contracts with the selected players. It also must be assumed that the clubs would be strictly honest and that no club would even think of approaching an excellent prospect and paying him to sit out that negotiation year, perhaps playing sandlot ball for one more season so he could pick his club and sell to the highest bidder.

Why suggest that there might be dishonesty in the front offices of major leagues? Well, there always has been. Scouts will tell you that there has been as much flouting of the bonus rule as there was of a constitutional amendment back in the post-World War I days.

Unrestricted Draft Is a Sounder Idea.

FRANK LANE, the uninhibited general manager of the Cardinals, attended the Detroit meeting and when asked about the plans to help the minors, he said there definitely was a movement in that direction.

"What I would suggest, as a more workable plan to help the minors and the weaker clubs in the majors, would be an unrestricted draft," Lane said. "After one year all players in the minors would be subject to draft. As the second-division clubs would get first choices, they would be given an advantage. Such a plan might change the baseball operation radically, as it would lessen the incentive to scout the sandlots and high schools. And it would not eliminate the bonus rule or the bonus. Rich clubs always will find a way to outbid poorer rivals for the extra choice young prospects. But it would discourage the payment of bonuses to players who plainly needed schooling in the minors."

The big difficulty, however, as we see it, is that no matter what rules the leagues may make, there will be club owners who will seek immediately to find ways to beat the rules. Almost any baseball man can tell you about circumvention of the bonus regulation, to describe it politely, rather than to call it cheating.

"I'll tell you one," Lane said in answer to a question. "When I was with the White Sox I got a phone call one day from a man who introduced himself, said he had a brother with great baseball ability, and asked if the White Sox would pay him a bonus if they liked his prospects. I told him we certainly would compete in the bonus market, and that we'd go as high as $25,000 or even $50,000. He asked if we'd take a look at the boy and I said we certainly would; for him to come to the ball park the next day.

"HE told me a representative of another club was interested in the boy, but that the club wanted the boy to sign for less than the amount that would make him a bonus player.

"Well, the next day I saw in the paper where the boy had been signed by a major league club and not the one the brother had mentioned as having a representative on the scene. What is the only conclusion that can be drawn? Of course it is that the boy was paid a bonus of perhaps $25,000. But it was under the table. The player was not listed as a bonus player."

There have been many cases like that, of course. During the Fred Saigh ownership, scouts reported a fine prospect in a Rochester high school. The Cardinals tried to sign the boy and went as high as $16,000, perhaps higher. When the boy was signed by another National League club and not listed as a bonus player, Rochester baseball writers were curious. They nudged Saigh into asking Commissioner Happy Chandler to investigate. Months later, when Saigh asked Chandler about it, Happy shrugged it off by saying that the owner of the club involved had assured the Commissioner no big bonus had been paid.

Skimming the top 48 players off the talent pool for the major league clubs doesn't sound like a tremendously generous start in a program to help the minor leagues, but it does sound exactly like what major league club owners would consider a dandy plan for themselves.

Kid Holds Champions To 2 Hits

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP)—The "Beat the Champ" movement continued in the National League today as the last-place Chicago Cubs reached up to hang a double haymaker on the groggy Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-1 and 5-4.

Don Kaiser, a 21-year-old bonus pitcher who learned of his first starting assignment only three hours before game time, got to the mound in plenty of time to fire a two-hitter at the sagging Brooks in the opener. Then Bob Rush, with help from Turk Lown, followed to spill Brooklyn to its fourth straight defeat in the second game.

The fifth-place Dodgers, now back to the .500 mark with a 19-19 record, had a desperate rally snuffed out in the ninth inning when Gino Cimoli, carrying the tying run, was thrown out at the plate by Leftfielder Jim King.

Kaiser, a 6-5, 195-pound righthander from an Ada, Okla., High School last year, made his first pro start a beauty in the first game. He gave up a single to Duke Snider in the first inning and another to Peewee Reese in the ninth. In between he was untouchable, retiring 18 in a row at one stretch. His Cub mates helped out considerably with a 13-hit attack off loser Carl Erskine and two successors.

It was the Cubs' first doubleheader sweep over the Dodgers since 1951.

Late Rally By Redlegs.

Cincinnati shoved over four runs in the eighth inning to defeat New York, 5-2, and take over third place from the Cardinals.

Rain curtailed the American League program, washing out the Detroit-New York and Chicago-Baltimore games, but Boston clipped Kansas City 11-3 behind the pitching of Tom Gorman and Bobby Shantz.

Southpaw Herb Score pitched his first shutout of the season and his batterymate, Jim Hegan, hit a grand slam home run as the Cleveland Indians walloped the Washington Senators, 15-0, to take over second place in the American League.

The hard-hitting Redlegs, who don't need it, had some help from New York second baseman Daryl Spencer in their big inning against the Giants. With the bases loaded and the Giants leading, 2-1, DON KAISER, rookie righthander of the Chicago Cubs, made his first major league starting assignment a brilliant two-hit 8-1 victory over Brooklyn yesterday at Wrigley Field as the Cubs swept a doubleheader. Kaiser, 21, is a 6-5, 195-pound Oklahoman.

Wally Post slammed a single, tying the score, and another run also scored when the ball slipped out of Spencer's hand as he tried to make a relay throw home.

After Ray Jablonski fouled out, Ed Bailey walked and Roy McMillan singled home two additional runs. Ruben Gomez, who went all the way for the Giants, had blenked the Redlegs until Jablonski doubled and scored on Bailey's single in the seventh.

Slaughter Chips In.

Gorman recorded his eighth victory over the Red Sox in nine decisions, but he had to have help from Shantz, who was making his third appearance in as many games after being out five weeks with a sore back. All of the Sox runs came on Mickey Vernon's first-inning homer.

Enos (Country) Slaughter doubled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and the A's wrapped it up with five insurance runs in the ninth inning.

Score allowed only three singles, two to Eddie Yost, in posting his first whitewash job since last July. He struck out 13 batters, running his total for the season to 86 in 76 innings. The Senators hit only four balls out of the infield.

Score's shutout was the first posted by a Cleveland pitcher this season and also the first suffered by Washington in 43 games.

Who's on First? Why, Two Catchers!

Sliding safely back into first base is STAN LOPATA, the Phillies' catcher, beating Ken Boyer's throw to BILL SARNI, the Redbird receiver, in the seventh inning of yesterday's game won by Philadelphia, 6 to 4. HENRY CRAWFORD is the umpire. WALLY MOSES the coach. Lopata, trapped off first on a throw from Sarni to Wally Moon, broke for second, forcing teammate Richie Ashburn to head for third. However, when Boyer held the ball in the double rundown, directing traffic, Ashburn scampered safely back to second and, as shown here, Lopata regained first base.

C.Y.C. All Stars Lose to English Soccer Team, 5 to 0

By Dent McSkimming

Classy Everton soccer club of England's first division rammed home four second-half goals in shutting out the C.Y.C. All-Stars at Public Schools Stadium last night, 5 to 0. About 3500 persons watched the game.

Everton's fast, accurate passes and clever team play had the young C.Y.C. players groggy but still fighting gamely at the finish. It was Everton's fourth victory in five games on its American tour.

Going into a tight defensive shell, from the very outset, the local team held the Englishmen to a single goal in the first half. As far as scoring goes, the 45-minute period was surprisingly even. But the tourists had command of the play almost continuously.

For example, Everton forced seven corner kicks in that interval while the St. Louis boys earned but one.

For the greater part of the time, the local stars had only three and sometimes only two players in a forward position. All others were massed between the half-way line and the St. Louis penalty area.

Eglington Spectacular.

Goalkeeper Herman Valli's long and accurate throws to his wing forwards were a factor in keeping Everton away. He had the ball often, gathering in and stopping shots and he made excellent use of it. Goalie Jim O'Neill of Everton, taking numerous long back passes from his teammates punted the ball for spectacular distances.

Goalie Valli drew a great cheer from the crowd early in the second half when he performed the unusual feat of stopping a penalty kick. The free kick was awarded for illegal use of hands by Gene Cucchi and the disappointed kicker was Tony McNamara.

Birch Fires a Bullet.

A few minutes later right halfback Ken Birch, moving up to the edge of the St. Louis penalty area, sent bullet drive into the lower near corner of Valli's goal for the second Everton score.

Then it was target practice with Peter Farrell and Eglington scoring with shots that eluded Valli.

The ground was fast and the weather ideal for soccer. The Everton team departed soon after the game for Chicago where it plays this afternoon.

The preliminary game was won by the Prep Seminary team which defeated St. Mary's High, 1-0, on a goal by Tim Barry.

Knute Rockne's Widow Dies

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 2 (UP)—Mrs. Knute Rockne, 66, widow of Notre Dame's great football coach, died today in St. Joseph's hospital.

Mrs. Rockne entered the hospital two weeks ago. Friends said only that she was suffering from "complications."

She is survived by four children.

Henry Armstrong Suffers a Stroke

LOS ANGELES, June 2 (AP)—Henry Armstrong, ex-triple boxing champion of the world, suffered a stroke at his home today and doctors report his condition is only fair.

Armstrong, 43, the only man in ring history to have held three championships simultaneously, was stricken this evening. He was taken to Georgia Street receiving hospital where an attendant said the former boxer "was not mentally clear."

Heintzelman Hurls Ballwin to Victory

Ken Heintzelman, former major leaguer, struck out 13 and pitched a five-hitter as Ballwin defeated the Festus Twin-City Reds, 2 to 1, in a County League baseball game at Ballwin last night. Lee Mueller drove in the winning run with a single in the last of the ninth.

Colt Wins, Then Is Killed

LEICESTER, England, June 2 (AP)—A two-year-old colt won a five-furlong race at Leicester today—and then lost his life.

As the colt, Edison, passed the finish line, the saddle slipped and unseated Jockey Tommy Gosling, who rolled under the horse's hooves. The colt galloped a few yards, fell and broke his leg. He had to be destroyed. The jockey suffered a concussion.

WEHMEIER IS REMOVED FOR WILDNESS; SARNI SCORES 3 WITH DOUBLE

By Bob Broeg

The trade winds have been ill winds for the Cardinals so far. Continuing their sub-par play since the madcap May week in which General Manager Frank Lane sent seven players packing, the Redbirds lost again yesterday afternoon at Busch Stadium.

In the three weeks since it first became difficult to tell 'em even with a scorecard, they've lost 12 out of 22, including five of the last six and have failed to fall out of the first division only because they're in the politest and perhaps best-balanced of baseball company.

The most recent setback was 6-4 to the lowly Philadelphia Phillies and soft-throwing former teammate Stu Miller, a mixmaster of the mound. The game was lost because two pitching acquisitions of the multiple May trades failed completely in a fourth inning that, if possible, was more horrible than Friday night's ninth frame.

This time Herman Wehmeier, pitching like a middle-aged sausage stuffer from his native Cincinnati, walked four straight men with two out, including a banjo-hitting infielder and the opposing pitcher, forcing across two runs and himself out of the game. Dick Littlefield, a well-traveled lefthander whose most recent mailing address had been Pittsburgh, then took over to serve up two consecutive extra-base blows that put the Phillies out of the bashful Redbirds' reach.

After the six-run nonsense, a medley relay of Redbird relievers held the Phillies to two hits, but the Cardinals couldn't mount a consistent offense against a pale-as-a-ghost pal who came back to haunt 'em. And when Stu Miller finally faltered, Bob Miller, no relation, took over and stopped Fred Hutchinson's club in the clutch for the second straight game.

The second Miller was so able or, if you insist, the Redbirds so inept, that the Cardinals couldn't even take advantage of the breaks in the ninth inning.

With one out, Don Blasingame's sharp grounder bad-hopped past Second Baseman Ted Kazanski for a fortunate single. Red Schoendienst followed with a grounder to Shortstop Gran Hamner, who threw wide to second with a certain force-out and possible double-play in sight. And when Stan Musial singled off Kazanski's glove, the bases were loaded with only one down.

Double Play Ends It.

However, Ken Boyer, after lifting a long drive foul, rapped into a game-ending DP and the visitors romped off the field with a contest in which they'd collected only seven hits to St. Louis's 10.

For the Cardinals, Bill Sarni and Rip Repulski belted three hits apiece. Sarni, driving in all four home-team runs, delivered a double and two singles. Repulski, returning to the regular lineup for the first time since he suffered an incomplete hairline fracture of the right wrist May 22, connected for three singles and boosted his batting average to a gaudy .402.

For the Phillies, Richie Ashburn and Elmer Valo had two blows each, and Valo began the Cardinals' trouble and Ashburn ended it.

Wehmeier, en route to a fourth failure as a Redbird starter and a fifth 1956 defeat against one victory, had two down in the fourth when Valo hit a grounder for which Wally Moon strayed too far off first, cutting in front of Red Schoendienst. The redhead couldn't come up with the ball and it went for a scratch hit.

Two Forced Across.

Suddenly, Wehmeier blew up against his former Philadelphia comrades. First, he walked Willie Jones. Then Gran Hamner, an injury-handicapped athlete batting only .158, was passed on four pitches, filling the bases. Four more high, wide and unhandsome deliveries to Kazanski, batting all of .215, forced in one run. And a "3-2" pitch missed to slender Stu Miller for another gift tally.

Littlefield, taking over with lefthanded hitters coming up, ground a full-count pitch for Ashburn, whose double cleared the bases, and Richie also tallied on Marv Blaylock's double. The damage was indeed done.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, found Miller's deceptive delivery extremely baffling in their first test against his variable velocities. Still, they'd had chances and good ones before the sixth inning when Red Schoendienst's double and Boyer's single were followed by Hamner's fumble on Repulski's grounder, loading the bases when the side should have been retired. Here, Sarni doubled off the left-center field wall for three unearned runs.

One Miller After Another.

Back in the game, the Redbirds rid themselves of one Miller in the eighth, only to run into the other. Stu gave up a run on a walk and two-out singles by Repulski and Sarni. Then Bob Miller took over, fanned pinch-hitting Hank Sauer and, as mentioned, overcame misfortune and a poor defense to pull out of trouble in the ninth.

So the Cardinals, stumbling in their longest home stand of the season, lost another one. As Lane has said, the final returns aren't in, but so far those trade winds have been ill winds for the rebuilt home town ball club.

Redbird Notes.

Forty-year-old Murry Dickson, a 2-4 pitcher this season, and 20-year-old Lindy McDaniel, the bonus rookie who has won four straight for the Cardinals in relief, probably will be the starting hurlers in today's 1:30 doubleheader with Philadelphia. For the Phillies, Ace Robin (5-5) Roberts and former St. Louis southpaw star Harvey (2-2) Haddix are due.

The Black Knights, Belleville (Ill.) drum and bugle corps that holds the Amvets' national championship, will entertain on the field between games.

Going into June, Hal Smith, rookie catcher, led the Cardinals in two offensive yardsticks kept by Publicity Director Jim Toomey at General Manager Frank Lane's request. Smitty was first in the percentage of runs he batted in per opportunity and in the percentage of base-runners he advanced.

Percentagewise, the Redbirds ranked as follows in RBI's per opportunities: Smith .611, Repulski .571, Musial .547, Boyer .547, Cooper .500, Sarni .459 Moon .436, Del Greco .429 Sauer .412, Hatton .375, Schoendienst .314, Blasingame .156 Brandt .105, Morgan .000 and Harmon .000.

In base-runners advanced Smith had .442, Hatton .390 Musial .341, Moon 329, Repulski .327, Boyer .306, Sauer .300, Schoendienst .280, Cooper .262 Del Greco .250, Sarni .226 Blasingame .185, Brandt .164 Morgan .000 and Harmon .000.

Semifinals in Series to Find Rocky's Successor This Week

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by Wm. J. McGoogan

Boardman Impresses but Has Long Way to Go.

LARRY BOARDMAN, latest boxing sensation, gave television fans an eyeful as he knocked out Frankie Ryff in 46 seconds of the ninth round in Madison Square Garden. It was only the second loss in 22 bouts for Ryff and the first time he had ever been kayoed—or according to him, the first time he had ever been knocked off his feet.

Boardman had previously defeated Sandy Saddler, featherweight champion, and Wallace (Bud) Smith, lightweight champion, in non-title matches. Now he is seeking, and may get, a September bout with Smith for the 135-pound championship in Boston.

The kid, only 20 years of age, has a punch, there's no doubt about that, but he's far from a finished fighter. Against Ryff he was very wild with his swings and missed badly time and again. Ryff, of course, presented no stationary target. He is fast on his feet and is a glove grabber, which may have had something to do with Boardman looking so clumsy on occasion.

Larry's father, Sam Boardman, was a professional lightweight in his younger days and the boy's trainer, Al Lacey, is a good man at his trade. So, between them they should be able to teach the boy the lessons in boxing which he so obviously needs —end badly.

It would be a shame to see such an excellent piece of fighting machinery hurried along too fast or fail for some other reason to attain the proficiency of which he seems capable.

THERE was a decision in New Orleans last Wednesday night which excited the ire of the fans present to the number of about 9000 and the countless fans on TV.

The referee of the Willie Pastrano-Chuck Spieser bout gave the decision to Spieser although one judge saw it 9-8-1 for Pastrano and the other 8-1-1 for Pastrano.

There was a roar from the fans present when the referee's verdict was announced and some television fans almost fell off their seats because it seemed as though Pastrano was an easy winner.

There were no reports from the referee as to his reasons but one may have entered which he would not admit—marking his card for the wrong man.

While the writer has never heard a professional official admit that this happened to him, it has been heard more than once in amateur bouts, particularly in a big tournament where there are so many bouts coming and going into the ring.

That's the only charitable view to take of this referee's score, otherwise he would better go to see an oculist or attend a school for referees.

By the way—that might not be a bad idea to establish a school for boxing officials. Perhaps some of the screwy decisions would be eliminated.

Moore Favored.

ARCHIE MOORE rules a 1-3 favorite to beat Yolande Pompey when they meet Tuesday night for the light-heavyweight or "cruiser weight" championship, as the British call it. Incidentally that name seems a better one than "light-heavyweight" for the 175-pound class.

An office Tilly the Toiler once asked, "How can anyone be light and a heavyweight at the same time?" Quite confusing.

Moore is reported from England as having struggled to get down to 175 pounds but will make it all right, as he always has in the past. Pompey had to lay off training for a few days to keep his weight up to over 170.

All of which should mean a fairly easy time for Archie. Pompey has given no indication that he should present any serious problem to Moore who will take no chances as he likely will meet the winner of the Hurricane Jackson-Floyd Patterson bout for recognition as heavyweight champion of the world. Jack Solomons is promoting the London bout at Harringay Arena, which seats 11,000 with prices ranging up to 10 guineas ($29.40). The promoter has announced that the sellout is assured with a "gate" of $100,000. The United Press reports that gate receipts are never announced officially in England.

Advantages to Jackson.

PHYSICAL advantages will be all on the side of Jackson when he meets Patterson of Brooklyn in a 12-round bout in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Jackson at 6 feet, 2¼ inches, is 2½ inches taller than Patterson; Tommy is expected to weigh about 193 pounds, 10 more than Floyd; Jackson's reach is 80 inches, nine more than Patterson's; Patterson is 21 years of age, Jackson 24.

Even so, Patterson rules a favorite at 1 to 2 to defeat Jackson despite Jackson's greater experience in the heavyweight ranks. Patterson has been defeated but once in his career, that on a disputed decision by Joe Maxim.

Jackson lost four times and drew once in 32 bouts. He was stopped in two rounds by Nino Valdes.

Patterson To Oppose Jackson

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Boxing's wise guys used to laugh at Tommy Jackson and the unorthodox heavyweight still is the butt of their jokes, but on Friday night the Hurricane will get the last laugh when he collects $40,000 for meeting classy Floyd Patterson in a heavyweight elimination bout.

Patterson, the Olympic 165-pound champion of 1952, also will receive a minimum of $40,000. More important to both is that the winner may be one step away from fighting for the heavyweight title left vacant by retired Rocky Marciano. Patterson is a 2-1 favorite.

There is a strong possibility that the victor of the televised 12-rounder in Madison Square Garden (N.B.C.-TV, radio, 9 p.m., St. Louis time) will take on Archie Moore in September with the heavyweight title at stake. That, of course, depends on how Moore, the light heavyweight champion, fares in his title defense against Trinidad's Yolande Pompey in London's Harringay Arena Tuesday night.

Jackson, 24, and Patterson, 21, are a study in boxing contrasts. Nicknamed "Hurricane" for his windmill style of punching, and "the animal" for his marathon training program, Jackson is a self-made fighter with a style completely his own.

Jackson Slow Starter.

Tireless Tommy's forte is his stamina. It takes him about two rounds to warm up and he's awful to look at until then. Once he gets going, he's hard to stop as Dan Bucceroni, Rex Layne, Ezzard Charles, Bob Baker and Britain's Johnny Williams discovered to their regret.

A magnificent physical specimen standing 6-2½ and weighing 193 pounds, Jackson, of New York's Far Rockaway section, can take a punch and dish it out. When he does throw leather, he does from all angles. He jabs, hooks, chops, uppercuts, bolos, and sometimes brings up both hands in a "double uppercut."

The pattern is seldom the same, which makes it very disconcerting for his opponents.

Ranked the No. 2 heavyweight behind Archie Moore, Jackson has a 27-4-1 record with 13 knockouts. He was beaten twice by Jimmy Slade, outpointed early in his career by Bert Whitehurst, and stopped in two rounds by Cuban Nino Valdes, July 14, 1954.

Ticketed for fistic greatness after he won the Olympic 165-pound crown, Floyd is a graceful fighter with fast hands and feet. He has a fine body to go with his skill, standing an even six feet and weighing 180 pounds without an ounce of fat. He throws combinations of punches with bewildering speed.

Brought along carefully by his manager, cautious Cus D'Amato, Patterson has fought few name fighters. His only loss in 30 fights was a controversial eight-round decision to former light heavyweight champion, Joey Maxim on June 7, 1954.

Slade Met Both.

Patterson beat Jimmy Slade twice, stopping him the second time, while Slade defeated Jackson twice in three meetings. Meeting mediocre fighters for the most part, Patterson has won 16 straight, the last 11 by knockouts.

Minor League Club Forfeits Six Victories

NEW IBERIA, La., June 2 (UP) — Lake Charles tumbled out of first place in the Evangeline League race today when League President Ray Mullins ordered a forfeit of all games won by the Giants between May 18 and May 27.

Lake Charles won six games during the period. The ruling came after Baton Rouge protested that the Giants had one more experienced player on the team than league rules allow when the teams played on May 24 and 25.

Mullins said league rules stipulate that a team must forfeit all games for the 10-day period before the date of protest.

Lake Charles Business Manager Sam Tarleton said he would appeal the ruling to the National Association of Minor League baseball clubs. He charged the other teams in the Class C league with attempting to beat his club "on paper because they could not do it on the field."

Althea Gibson Adds the Surrey Tennis Title

SURBITON, England, June 2 (UP) — Althea Gibson of New York won her eighth consecutive European women's singles championship today when she defeated Anne Shilcock of England, 6-3, 13-11, in the final of the Surrey county lawn tennis tournament.

Miss Gibson and Angela Buxton of England lost out in a bid for the women's doubles crown, however, when they were defeated by Betty Rosenquest Pratt, an American now living in Jamaica, and Thelma Long of Australia, 6-4, 6-3.

The American Negro girl now has won 14 women's tournaments since she started her current Asia-Europe tour last December in India.

Mooreand Pompey in Title Bout

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—A trim and sleek Archie Moore, ominously quiet and short tempered after a month of hard training, meets Yolande Pompey Tuesday night in Harringay Arena in a 15-round world light heavyweight title fight.

The 39-year-old champion from San Diego, Calif., is a 3-1 favorite now. The odds probably will be 4-1 by fight time.

Bettors in England, where bookmaking is legal, were not showing much interest in Pompey, a 27-year-old Negro from Trinidad, who got the assignment of fighting Moore when former world middleweight champion, Randy Turpin completely lost his form and punch.

Moore closes his training camp at Windsor in the Thames valley Tuesday morning when he will drive into London for the weigh-in.

Since May 9 Moore has been at the "Star and Garter Inn' at Windsor working off about 20 to 25 pounds of excessive weight. Neither Moore nor Manager Charley Johnston ever would say how much Archie had to lose or give any hint of how much he still had to go.

However, last Thursday it was learned reliably that Moore was down to 179 and in easy striking distance of the 175 pound light heavy limit.

Out in the west country, Pompey has been tapering off for four days. He is expected to come in at 171 pounds, or 172 at the most.

Sellout Likely.

The 10,600-seat Harringay Arena in northeast London was almost certain to be sold out. Only a few seats remained late today despite increased prices for the cheaper seats.

Tickets ranged from 10 guineas ($29.40) down to two guineas ($5.88).

The gate was expected to hit about $125,000 and Moore's cut was reported to be $35,000. Pompey will get about $12,000.

If Moore wins, he and the winner of the Floyd Patterson-Hurricane Jackson bout probably will meet in September for the vacant world heavyweight title. Patterson meets Jackson June 8 in New York.

If Moore loses it is difficult to see how he can ever hope to make up the lost ground. He is 39 years old.

Tale of the Tape

LONDON, June 2 (AP)—The tale of the tape for the Archie Moore-Yolande Pompey world light-heavyweight title fight June 5 in London's Harringay arena:

College Drops All Scholarships To Its Athletes

LANCASTER, Pa., June 2 (UP)—Franklin and Marshall College trustees voted today to drop all athletic scholarships because the policy "put us in the middle."

Dr. S. G. Pontius, chairman of the committee on athletics and student health, said the policy of allotting $5000 annually for athletic scholarships made it difficult for the school to have a "good athletic schedule."

"Ursinus, Haverford and Swarthmore have dropped us and will not play us in the future. Dickinson and Johns Hopkins have informed us that unless our policy undergoes a change, they will not continue to schedule us," he said.

"Our present policy puts us in the middle for we do not go far enough in the way of subsidizing, yet we go too far to identify ourselves with the non-subsidizing group," Pontius said.

Kono, World Weighlifting Champ, Upset

PHILADELPHIA, June 2 (UP)—Clement Warner of Bethpage, N.Y., upset world champion Tommy Kono of Hawaii today in winning the middleweight crown in the National AAU weightlifting championships at the University of Pennsylvania Palestra.

Warner, a 31-year-old Long Island machinist, became the first entrant in this year's tournament to make eight straight successful lifts. He missed on his final try in the clean and jerk.

Morey Is Defeated, 3 and 1

Rudolph, 22-year-old former national junior champion, defeated young Rex Baxter of Amarillo, Tex., 1-up to gain the finals. Parnell, at 20 one of the youngest players in the tournament, walloped Dale Morey, Indianapolis veteran, 3 and 1.

Both semifinal matches were close, although a fresh wind ran medal scores higher than on previous rounds. Rudolph, former Memphis State golfer and Tennessee Open titleholder, turned in a 74 on the morning round, when he went ahead 1-up.

Parnell, an Oklahoma A&M student, formerly from St. Louis, had to come from behind during the afternoon to defeat Morey, a former pro and veteran of many tournaments. The Indianapolis shotmaker was 1-up after the morning 18, when he shot a 74 on the par 72 Belle Meade Country Club course.

The college boy went to work in earnest in the afternoon round and evened the match on No. 19. He went ahead two holes later. Parnell birdied the par 5 17th to win the match.

Rudolph's putting kept the pressure on Baxter, also a former national junior champion, who took a 77 on the morning round.

Morey, 35, one of the pre-tournament favorites, seemed to tire during the afternoon.

Parnell and Rudolph play 36 holes Sunday for the championship now held by Eddie Merrins of Meridian, Miss., who failed to make the match play bracket. Hillman Robbins Jr., of Memphis, last year's runner-up, qualified for match play but withdrew immediately to enter the Air Force.

Olympic Flame On Way to Sweden

ATHENS, June 2 (UP)—The Olympic flame, to be burned at Stockholm during the equestrian Olympic games beginning June 10, was kindled at Olympia this morning.

Members of the Greek Olympic committee and local authorities attended the traditional ceremony at the Zeus temple.

A torch was lit from the flame, kindled by the rays of the sun through a magnifying glass, and carried in a procession of girls clad in ancient Greek costumes and reciting poems.

The torch then was handed over to the first of a relay of runners who will bring the flame to Athens. From here the flame will be flown to Stockholm for the opening of the games.

Saxton Jailed After Brawl With Waiters

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Johnny Saxton, welterweight boxing champion of the world, got into a baseball bat-swinging street fight early today that landed him and his opponents in jail.

Saxton, 25, was later released in $1000 bail for arraignment tomorrow on a felonious assault charge.

Also charged with felonious assault were two waiters, Wade Nance, 29, and Samuel Wyatt, 34, who were treated for cuts and bruises after their bout with Saxton.

The boxer apparently required no medical attention, although police said Nance attacked Saxton with a lug wrench after Saxton had belabored the two waiters with his baseball bat.

The fight, police said, started when the waiters' car blocked Saxton's on a narrow street, and the waiters refused to move after much horn-blowing by Saxton.

After the fight Saxton went home and called police, claiming he was assaulted. At about the same time Wyatt and Nance were lodging a complaint with police that Saxton had assaulted them.

Charges Are Made In Pheasants' Deaths

ROCHESTER, N.Y., June 2 (AP)—State Conservation Commissioner Louis A. Wehle declared today that "gross negligence or sabotage" in his department had caused thousands of pheasants to die at a department rearing project.

Wehle told the Associated Press that Dr. E. L. Cheatum, chief of the department's bureau of game "must assume the sole responsibility" for introduction of a fatal disease among the birds, at the Grenedier Island pheasant rearing project in the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence River.

Cheatum denied the accusation and called it "a very serious charge that affects my moral character."

First Englishman to Win British Amateur Since '33 Also Youngest Ever at 18

TROON, Scotland, June 2 (UP)—Eighteen-year-old John Beharrell of England battled a cold rain and gale-force winds today to defeat Leslie Taylor of Scotland, 5 and 4, and become the youngest player ever to win the British Amateur golf championship.

Undaunted by some of the worst weather conditions ever to accompany a British Amateur final, Beharrell showed his mettle when he recovered from a near-disastrous letdown on the afternoon round and swept the last three holes for his victory.

Before pulling his game together on the thirtieth hole, the English schoolboy's lead had dwindled to 2 up as a siege of poor putting and bunker difficulties lost him four straight holes from the twenty-sixth through the twenty-ninth.

Beharrell, who turned 18 only a few weeks ago, thus became the first English player to win the coveted amateur crown since Michael Scott in 1933. The previous youngest winner of the event was A. G. Barry of Great Britain, who won in 1905 at the age of 19.

"I'm sure glad that's all over," said Beharrell, who almost did not enter the tournament because of lack of funds. "I don't mind playing another good golfer, but that gale wind threw me off completely. I thought for a while I'd never get the hang of it."

Beharrell said he would like to come to the United States "to improve my game."

"I think such a trip would really tune me up," he said enthusiastically. "I would go in a flash if I were invited."

Beharrell said he thought the 15-foot putt he sank to win the thirtieth hole was his most important shot of the match. He had just lost four straight holes to the even-par shooting of Taylor and for a moment it appeared that the 32-year-old Scot might wipe out a deficit that had reached six holes after the twenty-third. It was at this point, too, that the cold winds became their fiercest.

But the poised English youngster stopped his decline when he knocked in that 15-footer on the soggy thirtieth green to regain a 3 up advantage. On the next hole, Beharrell put his second shot to within 20 yards of the green, chipped up and two-putted for a bogey five that won him the hole after Taylor flubbed a chip shot on his fourth stroke.

JOHN BEHARRELL

On the 170-yard, bunker-bordered thirty-second, Beharrell played it safe and drove his tee shot just short of the green. He chipped up to within two feet of the pin and sank the putt for the clincher.

Beharrell, who had saved diligently so that he might enter this tournament, could not reproduce his brilliant golf of the earlier rounds because of today's wretched weather conditions. But the bespectacled Taylor was even more troubled by the wind-swept rain in the morning round and shot poorly to fall four down at the lunch intermission.

The English youth appeared to have the match safely won when he holed out a 60-yard chip shot for an eagle two on the twenty-fifth hole to go six up, but his game disintegrated on the next four holes.

On the short twenty-sixth, Beharrell was 10 yards short of the green and chipped short; he missed a three-foot putt on the twenty-seventh; was bunkered twice and chipped poorly twice on the twenty-eighth; and hit into a bunker again on the twenty-ninth while Taylor was on in two and two-putted for his fourth straight pair.

Here, with the winds shrieking in his ears, he studied his game to win the title that had eluded the best of his countrymen for 23 years.

Rule Change May Bring New Contenders in American Legion Baseball

Season to Get Start This Week

By John J. Archibald

Last summer a new team broke into American Legion junior baseball's king row when Overland's Thoman-Boothe knocked off all the local opposition and went on to win the state championship, and the way things have been changed around this season there might be more such uprisings. The Legion leagues open with a double round of games this week in both the city and county.

The chief reason for the uncertainty of the Legion picture is the new arrangements of high schools from which the posts draw their squads. The national rules were altered to permit a post to count only the enrollment of a school's top three years when figuring its limit of 2500 pupils. This lets every post add at least one large-sized school.

Of the known powers, Aubuchon-Dennison, city champion for the past two years, is likely to be strong again. Coach Jim Robinson has Pitcher George Werley available and that's a pretty good start for a team right there. Several other members of the strong St. Louis U. High team, Catcher Charles Mitchell from McKinley as well as some of his experienced teammates, plus some talent from newly-added Lutheran High make the Aubuchons a pre-season favorite.

Stockham Post Strong.

Stockham Post, with its long tradition of winning, will be helped by five members of the state high school champion Beaumont starting lineup, including Pitcher Bob Miller. Stockham Coach Al Grosch has added Central High this season and may be able to draw from Riverview Gardens as well.

The defending state champion Thoman-Boothe team lost many of the stars of its fine club because of the age limit — Bob Burda, Ray Wilson, Pitcher Andy Reed, among others—but the carryovers, plus the fact that the post can now take players from Mercy, Hazelwood and Berkeley, in addition to Ritenour High, make the team a possible power.

Of the Maplewood team that reached the national finals in 1954, only Pitcher Jackie Satterwhite remains, but schools such as Webster Groves, Maplewood and Brentwood always produce ballplayers and Coach Pete Palumbo's outfit is likely to be a contender.

Two New Teams.

Two new posts are sponsoring teams. The Cecil Ritchey Post (Vinita Park) has taken over the Normandy-Wellston-Ferguson-Fairview group that was financed by Pine Lawn last season. A combination of Southwest and DuBourg Highs will be sponsored by the Rollo-Calcaterra Post.

There will be one six-team league each in the city and county, and the winners again will meet in a playoff to decide which will advance to outstate competition.

Here is the lineup of teams, with the schools used by each, except those which have been mentioned:

TO QUESTION ON PRECEDING PAGE

Walker Cooper hit 35 for the 1947 Giants, 18 for the 1951 BOSTON Braves and 13 for the 1944 Cardinals. Eddie Ainsmith also hit 13 for the 1922 Cards. Del Crandall whacked 26 last season to top the Braves-in-Milwaukee catchers.

Carondelet No. 2 In 7-2 Triumph

A six-run rally in the fifth inning broke a 1-1 tie and brought Carondelet Sunday Morning Club No. 2 a 7-2 victory over the Hoffmeisters yesterday in the Muny Heine Meine Field.

The Villas also had a big fifth-inning, scoring nine runs in an 18-6 victory over Simpkins. Norm Faveere led the winners with four hits.

Victories in these makeup games left Carondelet and the Villas tied for first place with 3-1 records. They meet today at 3:15. Hoffmeisters are 2-2 and Simpkins 0-4.

Charley Steis doubled to open the big inning. Bill Skowcroft and Pitcher Dave Lauck followed with singles to put Carondelet ahead, 2-1. Then Rich Meisemann hit a sacrifice fly. An error filled the bases and Bob Boehlow replaced Duke Wodraska, Hoffmeister starter. Terry Goewert's fly to right was misjudged by Bob Faucett and all three runners scored.

On the very next play Faucett made a sensational one-hand catch of John McCartney's drive.

The other fielding gem was by Steis, whose throw home after catching a fly resulted in a double play and ended Hoffmeisters' fifth-inning threat at only one run.

Two No-Hit Games In Jennings League

Mark Koenig of the Belldum Place and Neil Kloche, left handed hurler for the Goddards, came through with no-hit no-run games yesterday afternoon in the Jennings YMCA Muny League baseball competition. Belldum Place, with Koenig striking out 11 batters, defeated Jennings No. 3, 13 to 0. Goddards, with Kloche striking out seven opponents, beat Jennings Police, 16-0.

Fay Crocker Leads by Stroke At Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, June 2 (AP)—Fay Crocker of Uruguay, U. S. national open champion, retained her one-stroke lead over the field today in the $7,500 Churchill Valley women's invitational golf tourney.

Playing in the final threesome in a downpour of rain, Miss Crocker added a six-over-par 76 to her rounds of 75 and 70 for a 221 total at the three-quarter mark of the 72-hole grind.

Marlene Bauer of Sarasota, Fla., shot a 75 for second place at 222. Her earlier rounds were 73-74. Resting in third place at 224 was Patty Berg of St. Andrews, Ill., leading money winner among the women pros.

Miss Berg, who led the first round with a 72 and slipped to second yesterday with a 74, took eight strokes today on the par 4 No. 2 hole and wound up with a 78.

Louise Suggs of Sea Island, Ga., turning in the only par round of the day over the 6,000-yard layout, climbed into a fourth place tie with Alice Bauer of Asheville, N. C.

Rounding out the top 10 leaders are:

Bonnie Randolph, Linworth, O.	—	76-78-74—228
Beverly Hanson, Apple Valley, Calif.		76-77-76—229
Betty Jameson, San Antonio, Tex.	—	81-78-73—232
Mickey Wright, San Diego, Calif.	—	77-74-81—232

Two Games Scheduled In Ban Johnson Loop

Two more openers are scheduled today in the Eastern Missouri Ban Johnson baseball league.

Meramec Caverns, featuring Tom Fassler and George Werley from St. Louis University High, play the Gore team at Cathedral Field in Belleville (formerly Stag Park) and the MocPac Eagles face the Mallorys at Barrett Field, Goodfellow and St. Louis.

Both games start at 2 p.m.

Bitsy Grant to Defend U.S. Senior Tennis Crown at Triple A

Two national tournaments—the senior singles an ddoubles and father-son team event—will be part of the Triple A Open championships scheduled on the club courts in Forest Park June 12-17.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, Ga., who gained fame in the middle thirties as a "giant killer," will defend his United States senior singles title. This event is for contestants 45 and over. He also will compete in the Triple A Open singles and in senior doubles with Mahlon Courts of Atlanta as his partner.

Frank A. Thompson, Jr., chairman of the tennis committee at Triple A, said senior players from all parts of the country will be in the United States event. "Entries already have been received from California, New York, Florida and Canada," said Thompson.

Dick Savitt of Houston, Tex., won the men's singles title the last two years and is expected to be on hand to try for No. 3. His final round opponent in 1954 was Davis Cupper Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., and last year he defeated Bernard (Tut) Bartzen of San Angelo, Tex., in the title round.

Mrs. Merceina Parker, a consistent Muny winner here, will be the defending woman's champion and one of her chief rivals will be a foreign entrant, Anne Bagge of Denmark.

Grant, who was a Davis Cup player for the United States in his prime, was ranked by the U.S.L.T.A. in the first 10 for seven seasons. His highest rating was No. 3 in the country in both 1935 and '36. He was the United States Clay Courts champion in 1934 and '35.

Entries for the Triple A event are being accepted by Frank Thompson, 506 Olive street. Referee for the biggest tennis event on the St. Louis scene will be Russell Hadden, president of Triple A.

BITSY GRANT, as he appeared while stationed at Jefferson Barracks during World War II, will defend his United States senior tennis title in competition at Triple A Club.

Jazz Age, Whitney Colt, Surprises in Peter Pan and Refunds $61

May Meet Needles In Belmont

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP)—Jazz Age, a long shot, streaked down the stretch in the murk and slop at Belmont Park today and captured the Peter Pan Handicap in a fashion that suggests the horse could be a definite threat for the Belmont Stakes June 16.

Although this was only the first stakes victory and the second win in the career of the lightly raced C. V. Whitney colt, the race recalled that another Whitney horse, Counterpoint, came into prominence in the same handicap five years ago.

Counterpoint made the Peter Pan his first stakes score in 1951, breaking the track record, and then returned one week later to capture the $100,000-added Belmont and go on to become horse of the year.

John Choquette, who won the Peter Pan last year aboard Nance's Lad, steered Jazz Age to a three-quarter-length victory over the Brookmeade Stable's Lawless, second choice in the betting of the crowd of 30,775. Lawless took second money by a head over Mrs. Wallace Gilroy's Oh Johnny, the favorite, while Lawrence R. Troiano's King Somali was beaten out for third money by a neck in a photo finish.

Jazz Age, a grey son of Priam 2nd-Jazz Baby by Mahmoud, stepped the mile and one-eighth in 1:48 2-5, which was only three-fifths of a second slower than Counterpoint's track record.

The winner showed 25-1 on the board and the crowd whooped it up when the official prices of $61.20, $18.90 and $8.70 were flashed. Lawless, also eligible for the mile and one-half Belmont, returned $5.00 and $3.60, while Oh Johnny paid $3.50. Jazz Age collected first money of $20,350 from the net purse of $29,400.

Jazz Age is a stablemate of Career Boy, another Whitney colt which is expected to challenge Kentucky Derby winner Needles and Preakness hero Fabius in the Belmont.

Five Winners for Jockey Steve Brooks.

CHICAGO, June 2 (AP) — Myrtle's Jet, owned by Maine Chance Farm, breezed to victory today in the $22,250 Honeymoon Handicap in Balmoral-at-Washington Park feature.

Ridden by Jockey Bob Ussery, Myrtle's Jet took over the lead from Smart Devil while turning into the stretch and romped to a six-length victory.

Louis Lee Haggin II's Hen Party was second and Dixiana's Blue Hawaii finished third.

Claiborne Farm's Delta, an even-money choice of the 19,109 spectators, finished fourth in the seven-furlong event for fillies and mares. It was Delta's first loss after four straight triumphs.

Myrtle's Jet was second choice to Delta and paid $7, $4 and $4. The daughter of Jet Pilot-Myrtle Charm, by Alsab, earned $13,025 to boost its season's earnings to $56,950.

Myrtle's Jet, carrying 122 pounds—one less than Delta, ran the seven furlongs in a snappy 1:22 3-5.

Steve Brooks rode five winners for the day. He scored in the first race on Nell's Bay and came in with Nantua in the fifth, Dr. Joe Kay in the sixth, Homeplace in the seventh and Nora's Watch in the ninth. Nora's Watch paid the biggest price, $13.20.

Burroughs Captures Codasco Tennis Event

John Burroughs, with the help of Earl (Butch) Buchholz and Paul Putzel, scored 108 points to win the team title in the rain delayed Country Day School invitational tennis tournament. The host school finished second with 82. Principia was third with 33 and Ladue took fourth place with 30. Twelve schools competed in the event.

Buchholz and Putzel defeated Dick Horwitz and Neil Drury, 6-4, 6-4, in the doubles final yesterday at Tower Grove Park. Buchholz beat Drury in the singles final Friday, 6-2, 6-3.

Bills to Begin 26-Game Basket Schedule With Three Road Games

The St. Louis University basketball schedule for next season was announced yesterday, and it had some variations from the usual Billiken theme. Most notably, the Billikens do not have a regular-season date in New York's Madison Square Garden, and they do have a rugged opening sequence of three games away from home.

The Bills will open at the University of Cincinnati, on Dec. 1. They will play at Ohio State, Dec. 8 and at Lexington against Kentucky, Dec. 10. On Dec. 13 they are to meet Texas Christian here, the first of 13 home games scheduled at Kiel Auditorium.

Included in the scheduled 26 games is a two-game stand in the Sugar Bowl, at New Orleans, Dec. 28 and 29. Other teams entered are Dayton, Notre Dame and Kentucky. In view of the match scheduled earlier between St. Louis and Kentucky, Notre Dame and the Bills may be first-round opponents in the Sugar Bowl. It will be St. Louis's fifth appearance in the tournament. Billiken teams won the tourney in 1948 and 1951, finished second in 1950 and 1952.

The home opponents will be, after Texas Christian, Louisiana State University, Louisville, Baylor, U.C.L.A., St. John's of Brooklyn, and, in Missouri Valley Conference play, Drake, Houston, Tulsa, Detroit, Wichita, Bradley, and Oklahoma A. and M.

Next season will be Ed Hickey's tenth as coach of the Billikens. His record at St. Louis is 176 victories, 70 defeats. In 18 years as a college coach, his teams have won 308, lost 142.

Forfeit to Chaminade Makes It Co-Champion With Cathedral High

Chaminade and Cathedral High of Belleville were declared co-champions in Catholic League baseball after the league awarded Chaminade a forfeit victory over Marquette High of Alton yesterday. Both had records of 10 victories and 2 defeats.

The forfeit was decided upon because a busy schedule prevented Marquette from playing a rained-out game with Chaminade.

This is the third successive year that Chaminade has figured in the Catholic League baseball title, Coach Henry Buffa's team having won it undisputed in the previous two seasons.

North Side Muny Giants Meet in First '56 Battle At Fairground 1 Today

By Neal Russo

It's homecoming day today for the North Side League in Muny senior baseball and there's a big attraction, too, at Fairground No. 1 diamond at 1 o'clock—Kutis North vs. Borbein-Young.

Today's contests (Union Printers and Polish Falcons meet at 3:30) mark the first of the season at the No. 1 field, which had been unavailable because of light-pole installation, sodding and grading. At the temporary home, Sherman Park, Kutis North, defending league champion, and the Borbeins each had 2-0 records. Last season Kutis took three out of five from Borbein.

In this first 1956 battle between the North Side giants, Manager Al Mick of Kutis will start Lefty John Walsh, who saved his team's two victories with great relief. Borbein Pilot Lou Boggiano will counter with Lefty Jack Bocklage, who stopped the Falcons on one hit in his only start, or Righthander Ed Gerken.

Nine 6-Footers on Squad.

With the addition of Outfielder Bob Murphy, who was in the Cards' and Pirates' chains, and Gerken of the Yankees' system, the Borbeins now have nine six-footers.

However, the big guys may have to look up to little Lee Engert, Kutis second baseman, regarded as one of the Muny's most dangerous men once he gets on base. Besides stealing second, then scoring from there on an infield out, Engert threw out a batter from short right-center in the Printers' game.

Carondelet Sunday Morning Club No. 1, defending Muny champion, tuned up for its game at 1 o'clock with Kutis South by blanking Ballwin Friday night. However, the No. 1 diamond at Carondelet still isn't ready so the Carondelet (2-0) vs. Kutis (1-1) contest will be at No. 2 diamond. Kimacks (1-1) and Gravois (0-2) meet at 3:30.

Kurt Krieger, who hurled a hitless ninth against Ballwin after Erv Liberton and Ken Bennett each yielded two hits in four innings, will start today. Ted Beck doubled in two runs against Ballwin and teammate Chuck Vogt had three for five. Elmer Koestner and Ray Bopp pitched for Ballwin.

Wilson Aces to Make Bow.

Manager Dick Stoughton's promising Wilson Aces make their belated debut in the Berkeley League, meeting Carter at Jackson Park at 1 o'clock. Stoughton has most of the boys from his standout intermediate team in 1955, along with several newcomer collegians. Held up schedule-wise because of the high school rule, the Aces will make up four games Thursday nights at Ballwin. Schmersahls meet the Braves at 3:30 today.

A new team, Fischer Fleet, has replaced Army Medical Depot in the Art Rogers League, a new senior circuit. The Army boys lasted one game, bowing 29-0, to the Jokers. Fischer Manager Ron Flori has added Roger Brodback, Sonny Seibert and Jay Schicker. Holdovers include Kenny Kettler, Rich Westbrook and Bill Rogers.

The Fischers' first foe today at 12:30 at Titanium Field, Broadway and Horn, will be Titanium.

Star Catcher Chuck Stimac of Kimacks was married yesterday to Anita Stahlschmidt at Corpus Christi Church.

Prep Relay Team Breaks Own U.S. Mark

CHICO, Calif., June 2 (AP)—The Los Angeles Jefferson High School team bettered its own national interscholastic half-mile relay record in a qualifying heat time of 1:26.3 today at the thirty-eighth annual California State High School track meet.

The Jefferson sprinters hold the accepted National interscholastic record of 1:27.5, set last year.

Young Blair Running for Third Term as State Golf Champ

GOLF

by ROBERT MORRISON

Weight of Years.

AS the Western Amateur moved along at Nashville the past week, you could hear strong expressions for and against the tournament format that will require some 45 miles of walking over a 6700-yard course by the finalists.

The pro and the con fell quickly into two camps. Older golfers, even star tournament players in the middle thirties, generally are against the set-up that makes such a requirement of physical stamina.

But the young men who see that the physical ordeal may be in their favor are for it.

"It's the only way to run a tournament," said Tim Holland, the 25-year-old New York golf enthusiast.

"It's just too much," said Dale Morey, who for his age of 35 probably had played as much tournament golf over the years as anybody in the event at Nashville's Belle Meade Country Club.

With its 18 holes on Monday, 18 Tuesday, 36 Wednesday and then match play scheduled at 36 through Sunday, the Western runs seven days and involves more or less 12 rounds of play, depending on how long or short the matches are.

The National Amateur in its present form may require 10 rounds or nine, depending on whether a player draws one of the 56 first-round byes. The American championship is completed within six days.

But the big drawback is that the U.S. Amateur contains six rounds of 18 hole matches, a route that is notorious for its frequent failure to produce the better golfer as the winner.

Similar are most lesser tournaments and as a matter of interest, in comparison, the State championship to run at Meadow Brook this week qualifies 64 players with an 18-hole round, then plays out the field in five rounds of 18-hole matches until the 36-hole Saturday final.

Seek True Champion.

THE Western Golf Association, of course, was seeking a method that would enhance the reputation of its amateur championship winner.

Maybe the United States Golf Association doesn't need to take that step, but it is reported the Western change is being viewed with interest by U.S.G.A. officialdom.

Actually, the basis of most amateur championships is limited by some regulations. For instance, a public links golfer is not eligible for the American Amateur — except, of course, the current national public links champion who is invited to the U. S. Amateur.

Other organizations similarly limit the entry of players. The Missouri State championship, for instance, may be entered only by golfers who are members of golf clubs that are members of the association, plus a few players from associated clubs.

Sectional championships, like the Western and Trans-Miss and others, are likewise restricted.

So when an American or Western or State or any other amateur golf champion is determined, he is developed within a framework that isn't quite wide open.

An interesting note in this connection, however, is that the Illinois State event is open to any resident, according to Belleville's Bob Goalby.

Goalby, who belongs to St. Clair C. C. in Belleville and is the St. Louis District champion, intends to try for the Illinois State title at Champaign, June 25-30. First he will defend his St. Louis title at Algonquin, June 18-24.

Tee to Green.

WHAT with National Open qualifying at Westwood Monday, the State Amateur starting at Meadow Brook Tuesday, the State Senior tournament Wednesday through Friday at Excelsior Springs, and National Golf Day Saturday, this will be a busy week on the fairways.

National Open Champion Jack Fleck and women's title-winner Fay Crocker will be the Golf Day opponents of club and park players who participate in the golf and general charity promotion sponsored by the National P.G.A.

A magazine rating of probable favorites for the National Open at Rochester, June 14-16, lists Cary Middlecoff, Jack Burke, Sam Snead, Gene Littler, Ted Kroll and Amateur Harvie Ward in that order.

American amateurs may regard the British Amateur as one of the easier titles to win these days, but with Joe Conrad's loss in the quarterfinals, it didn't look that way this year. . . . Maybe British amateur golf is improving a little. . . . However, most of the top American amateurs were at the Western tournament, not the British.

Special Pin Event For High Rollers

St. Louis's leading scorers of the 1955-56 season will compete in the Airondack Hall of Fame one-game elimination tournament Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock at the Arcade Lanes, 7975 Olive Street road.

Bowlers rolling 300, 299 and 298 games in league competition may compete. Also eligible are bowlers belonging to teams that have registered top scores of the season both in five, four and three-man leagues. The city's high individual three-game bowler is also competing. The Budweisers will be among the teams entered.

167 Due To Start Tuesday

By Robert Morrison

Jim Tom Blair, currently assisting in the Blair (pater) for Governor campaign, is scheduled to run for a third term himself this week—as Missouri state amateur golf champion.

The 24-year-old son of the lieutenant governor, who went only to the round of 16 in the past week's Western Amateur at Nashville, Tenn., is exempt from the 18-hole qualifying round which starts the state event at Meadow Brook Tuesday.

Blair, who won the title in 1952 and again last year, will be trying to become the first golfer to make it two successive state amateur titles since Chester O'Brien did it in 1934.

But in a field that numbers 168 players and 10 former champions, Blair should encounter some opposition in the five rounds of 18-hole match play that lead up to Saturday's 36-hole final.

Jackson to Try Again.

Past winners include two-timer Jim Jackson, Walker Cupper who was off his game in the Western Amateur and failed to qualify; Bill Stewart of Springfield, Glen Oatman and Don Smith of Kansas City, Jack Geiss, Jonas Weiss, Bob Cochran, O'Brien and Elliott Whitbread of St. Louis.

It is one of the most complete state fields of recent years, missing only a few standout players such as Bill Webb of Kansas City and Warren Riepen, former champion from St. Joseph.

State Association Secretary Whitbread said he didn't know why Riepen had not entered but surmised that Warren may not be living in St. Joe now.

Loeffler Entered.

Last year at Indian Hills in Kansas City Blair defeated Ed Loeffler of Jefferson City, 7 and 5, in the title match. Riepen was medalist and Ben Schulein and Clarence Norsworthy Jr. of St. Louis were semifinalists. Both Norsworthy and Schulein are entered again, and so is Loeffler.

Soccer Title Series Delayed Until June 17

At the request of the eastern champions, the Ukrainian club of Philadelphia, the national Amateur soccer title series with Kutis will start here June 17, it was announced by the local club last night. Previously, the opening had been set for next Sunday.

Second game of the series (total goals to win) will be played at Philadelphia, June 24.

The Ukrainians are the team that defeated Harmarville, Pa., the national Open Cup holders, 5-4, in the eastern division final series. All players on the club are recent imports from eastern Europe; seven of the starting eleven are college students in Philadelphia.

The game here will be at Public Schools Stadium.

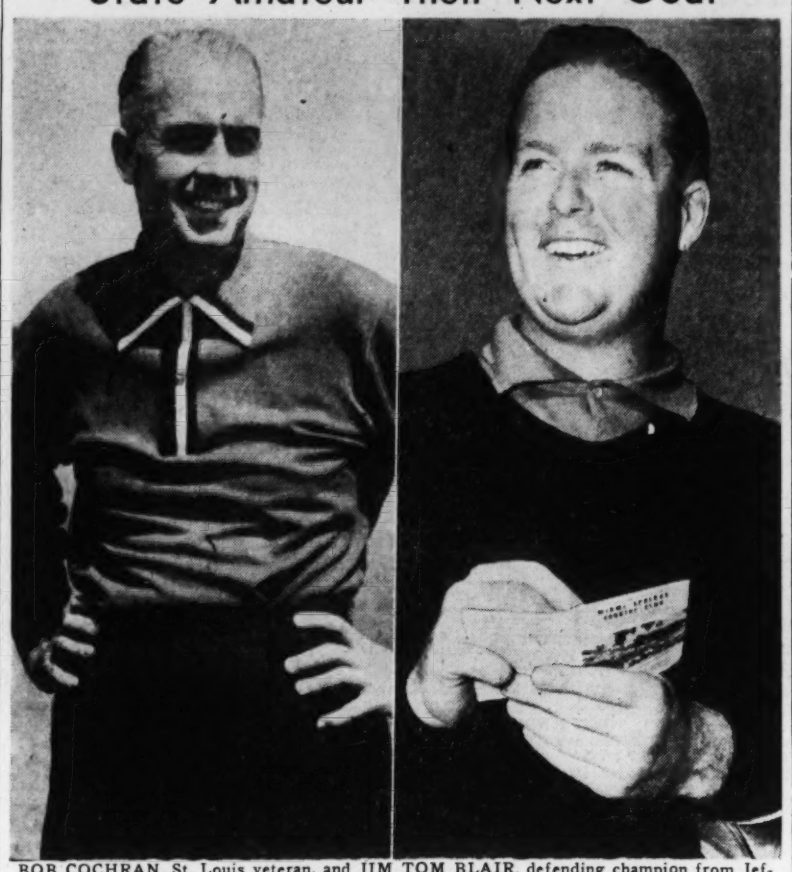
State Amateur Their Next Goal



BOB COCHRAN, St. Louis veteran, and JIM TOM BLAIR, defending champion from Jefferson City, are marked men in the state amateur golf tournament starting Tuesday at Meadow Brook Country Club. They were Missouri's best in the Western Amateur last week, reaching the round of 16 in the tournament at Nashville, Tenn.

What Value Breeding?

"WHAT Fairmount needs is more horses with top breeding," remarked a railbird during a recent program at the Collinsville track.

Records for the first 25 nights of the meeting show that horses sired by Bimelich, Whirlaway, Pavot, Alsab, Omaha, Challedon, Gallant Fox, Head Play, Shut Out and Gallahadion have a winning percentage of .167 with 11 victories in 66 starts.

Of the sires mentioned, Whirlaway, Omaha and Gallant Fox won the Triple Crown; Bimelich won the Preakness and Belmont after being beaten by Gallahadion, which paid $72.40 for $2, in the Kentucky Derby; Pavot won the 1945 Belmont; Challedon was first in the 1939 Preakness and was named "Horse of the Year" for 1939 and 1940; Head Play won the 1933 Preakness after being beaten by Broker's Tip in the rough-riding Derby; Shut Out scored in the 1942 Derby and Belmont Stakes.

Horses sired by Pavot have won four races, with Udo Reinach owning three firsts and a second. Miss Goodie owns the other triumph. Host Gogi, by Challedon, has two wins and a place, and Super-Salesman a win and two places. Seashore by Bimelich has two wins and a place, while Changeaway by Whirlaway has a win and two places. Essential, by Alsab, has won its only start at the track.

Following are the records of the "get" of the famous sires:

	W.	P.	S.	Out.
Bimelech	2	1	0	1
Whirlaway	1	2	0	4
Pavot	4	1	0	2
Alsab	1	0	0	5
Omaha	0	0	0	4
Challedon	3	4	0	10
Gallant Fox	0	1	1	6

Seeks Handicap Stars.

RACING SECRETARY JACK KLUCINA of Fairmount is making a tour of Midwest tracks in an attempt to line up a representative field for the $15,000 added Fairmount Handicap to be run over the mile and one-sixteenth route the night of June 16.

Klucina will visit Chicago, Hazel Park in Detroit, Ak-Sar-Ben at Omaha and Ohio tracks before returning here. Nominations for the race, which carries the largest purse offered by the track since the 1930 Fairmount Derby, close Wednesday. Weights for the race for three-year-olds and up will be announced June 12.

All Five Members of California's Boxing Commission Resign

LOS ANGELES, June 2 (UP)—Gov. Goodwin J. Knight today had a "free hand" to revise California boxing and wrestling regulations with the announcement that all five members of the State Athletic Commission were submitting their resignations.

The commissioners' action followed a state investigation which revealed purse splitting and at least a dozen alleged "fixed" fights.

The Governor stressed yesterday that as far as he knew there had been "no accusations of misconduct" against the commissioners.

Knight said he thought the resignations "might be a step in the right direction" since it would give him a clean slate to start with.

Commission Chairman Norman O. Houston, of Los Angeles, said the commissioners felt "the Governor should be given a free hand in any type of reorganization which he feels he wants."

Resigning with Houston were members Edward I. Beck, Los Angeles; Dan O. Kilroy, Sacramento; S. Thomas Bucciarelli, Arlington, Calif., and Joseph Phillips, San Francisco. Phillips announced his resignation first and the others followed suit after a four-way telephone conference.

Ace by Rossin.

Jake Rossin, former Forest Park Golf Club champion, scored his first hole in one in many years of golf when he holed out a No. 3 iron shot on the 215-yard No. 10 yesterday at the park. He shot the round in 70, even par.

Relying on the naked eye, the judges proclaimed as the winner a $71.60 long shot, Di-Ore-Model. Case Tip, the betting favorite, was second and O'Meara was third.

Pilot Changed In Midstream

Managers of reigning baseball champions have been changed before, but there's a special reason for the shift just effected in pilots of the Florissant team, which took the County League title last year.

Pat O'Reilly, who led Florissant to the National Division title and the playoff triumph over Creve Coeur, American Division winner, has "retired" as manager although his current team has a 2-1 record.

Last year was the first time O'Reilly ever managed a team, but he said he was tired of it all and wanted to concentrate on playing shortstop.

O'Reilly has a worthy replacement in Johnny Corcoran, a veteran of Muny ball, who also will be available for utility duty.

(All games start 2:30)
NATIONAL DIVISION—Creve Coeur at Bridgeton, Florissant at Twin City Reds, Webster at Glencoe.

Football Cards Sign Boydston

CHICAGO, June 2 (UP)—End Max Boydston, who played college ball at the University of Oklahoma, has signed with the Chicago Cardinals of the National Football League, it was announced today.

Boydston was the Cardinals first draft choice last year, but was handicapped due to a knee injury suffered in a pre-season game and played only the last three games of the season.

Two Tied for Lead at 130 In Dallas Golf

DALLAS, Tex., June 2 (UP)—Gene Littler curled in a 12-foot pressure putt for a birdie on the eighteenth hole today to scramble into a tie for the halfway mark lead of the $70,000 Texas Centennial open tournament with Roberto De Vicenzo of Mexico City at 10-under par 130.

Littler, the former National amateur champion from Singing Hills, Calif., was the only one of the three first day leaders able to come through under the tenseness today to catch the red hot Argentine-born De Vicenzo, who had posted his second straight five-under-par 65.

The California ex-sailor fought back from two apparently disastrous bogies on the fourteenth and fifteenth holes to birdie the sixteenth and eighteenth and pull into the tie with a 32-34—66, one stroke ahead of Dr. Cary Middlecoff, the Tennessee dentist, who was tied with him at 64 yesterday.

Middlecoff, finishing just a scant few minutes ahead of Littler, rammed home a downhill 18-foot birdie putt on the 17th to finish with a three-under-par 35-32—67 for a 36-hole total of 131.

That put him two strokes ahead of the third member of yesterday's opening round triumvirate—Bill Casper Jr., of Chula Vista, Calif., who slid from a first round 64 to a 35-34—69 today and third place.

The 20 low scorers and ties:

Best Opening-Day Fishing on Small Streams.

BASS FISHING on the Meramec, Gasconade and Bourbeuse rivers was poor because of water conditions when the season opened Wednesday, but many of the smaller streams in the east-central section of Missouri produced good catches.

Excellent bass fishing was reported on the Courtois and Mineral Fork in Washington county, the Huzzah and Crooked creek in Crawford county, Indian creek in Franklin county, Brush creek in Gasconade county and the Little Maries in Maries county.

Riley Gladden, district supervisor for the Missouri Conservation Commission, told Outdoors his agents observed many bass caught on the smaller streams, although no fish of spectacular size were netted.

Plugs and flies were the most successful lures, Gladden said. Minnows were not producing well as bait on opening day.

The Memorial day crowd of fishermen was smaller than usual, probably because the larger streams were high and muddy, a condition also prevailing this weekend. Another factor that might have held down the number of anglers was the holiday in mid-week, limiting sportsmen to a one-day trip.

1299 Visit Busch Area.

The August A. Busch Wildlife Area at Weldon Spring put on a good show for the record number of 1299 fishermen at its opening Wednesday.

The total catch was 1200 bluegills, 600 bass and 22 channel catfish—an average of almost 1½ fish for each visitor.

Fred Anderson, fisheries biologist for the conservation commission, said Wednesday's crowd was the happiest group of fishermen he has seen in the five years in which he has been on hand for the opening. The area was opened for fishing six years ago.

The catch was a pleasant surprise to commission personnel and fishermen alike, as the 16 lakes at the area are low on water even though tney are in better condition than at this time last year.

Four new lakes—Nos. 9, 22, 27 and 30—produced the best fishing. Visitors who tried these lakes caught many bass weighing from 8 ounces to 1½ pounds. These bass were only fingerlings when the lakes were stocked two years ago.

The largest fish taken on opening day was an 8-pound, 3-ounce channel catfish. Seven to eight other catfish only slightly smaller were pulled in.

Four 5-Pound Bass Taken.

Four bass, weighing 5 pounds or more each, were caught. The largest, scaling 5 pounds, 4 ounces, was taken from Lake No. 6. A man and his wife, fishing with plugs on Lake 31, took three of the 5-pounders.

Anderson said some of the Memorial day fishermen appeared the night before and slept in their automobiles to be johnny-on-the-spot when fishing started. At 4:15 a.m. Wednesday, more than an hour before the scheduled starting time, a long line of visitors had formed, waiting to check in at the area's headquarters for fishing.

Anderson believes the record crowd would have been even larger were it not for a 45-minute downpour late in the afternoon that kept away some late fishermen.

A total of 536 dozen minnows was sold on opening day, at 30 cents a dozen. Visitors also bought 150 cartons of worms (50 worms to a carton) at 50 cents each.

As on the streams in east-central Missouri, the bass disdained minnows and went for artificial plugs or worms.

Red-Eared Sunfish.

The four new lakes are stocked with red-eared sunfish, similar to a bluegill. Opening-day fishermen found they could catch these delicious little fellows on a fly rod, using underwater gnats or spiders. Worms also lured the sunfish.

The commission has 52 boats to rent at $1 a day and all were in use by 9 a.m. opening day.

Anderson saw many old-timers in the first-day crowd but he was impressed by the large number of youths who showed up.

Thursday presented a marked contrast to Wednesday at the Busch area. There were only about 150 visitors, who generally had poor luck.

As usual, some persons were law violators on Memorial day. At least six were arrested for having more than the legal limit of fish.

Agents got a chuckle out of a woman who was found holding a fishing pole but with no fishing permit.

"He just asked me to hold this for him for a while," she said, pointing to her husband, sound asleep in an automobile parked nearby.

By Harold Tuthill

"Does the catcher have to use a catcher's mitt or can he use a regular fielder's glove?" Milton Wels.

The rule (1.15) is that "the catcher may wear a leather glove or mitt of any size, shape or weight."

"Recently I read where Whitey Ford had a 67-33 lifetime record for an average of .744. Shouldn't that be .670?" William Woehler, 2135 East Gano.

It would be if those figures were correct. Give somebody an error because when Ford compiled a 5-1 record this season that gave him a lifetime record of 66-33, a won-lost average of .667.

Here's to carefree days and a flattering tan

By Dorothy Brainerd
Post-Dispatch Travel Editor

A vacation represents an appreciable investment, and like any other investment it should be expected to pay dividends. During the next three months millions of vacationers (some 42,000,000 workers now have paid vacations) will invest several weeks of their lives, and sizable sums of cash, in summer holidays.

What returns will they receive? Happy, carefree days of relaxation, quite obviously, and probably a flattering tan.

But far more important are the memories that will last a lifetime. Most prospective vacationers are so busy planning what to take with them, that they fail to think what they will bring back.

Acquired somewhere along the way will be a new outlook on life, a better perspective of the balance of fun and friendship in proportion to work, if they are to live full and well-rounded lives.

They will bring back memories of this wide, wonderful country viewed from sky or highway, or through the windows of a train gliding across the continent. Or perhaps, stored away to savor in quiet moments through the years ahead, will be mental pictures of a foreign marketplace, the kindly smile of a wise old European, the gay greeting of a South American. The sound of a native calypso in the Caribbean, the gentle caress of an ocean breeze on ship or shore.

Treasures, indeed—treasures worth far more than the time and money spent on a vacation. For these are treasures that will grow brighter with the years, compounding interest as time goes by.

WASHINGTON STATE'S WILDERNESS BEAUTY

The most popular sightseeing attraction in Washington State is Mount Rainier National Park in the center of which rises the majestic 14,408-foot peak perpetually crowned in ice. A lodge nestles in a valley at the very base of the peak. Visitors may rent "tin pants" for a nominal fee, and swoosh down the snow fields on their backsides. There are gentle, sure-footed horses and experienced guides for conducted tours along the skyline trails.

In the evenings, rangers give illustrated talks at the lodge and the staff presents an amateur show every night. There are guided walks to the ice caves, glaciers and alpine meadows, or visitors may stroll by themselves snapping pictures of deer, bear and other animals and birds in this wildlife refuge.

Mount Baker in the Mount Baker National Forest is another resort area providing year-round facilities. Mount Baker is about 55 miles east of Bellingham by paved, all-weather highway. The peak soars 10,400 feet high dominating northwest Washington. Few European skiing resorts can rival the incomparable snow and terrains at Mt. Baker. One of the major events of the year, the Heather Cup Ski Race, takes place annually on the Fourth of July.

Within three miles of the lodge are nine lakes famous for their rainbow and eastern brook trout. A panoramic dome chairlift operates daily for guest rides, there are three Forest Service grounds near the lodge for camping and picnicking.

About 56 miles northeast of Longview in the Gifford Pinchot National Forest another mountain giant thrusts into the sky. Mount Saint Helens is a perfect cone, eternally capped with snow. At its base is Spirit Lake with three rustic resorts and dozens of public camping grounds in tall, cool forests. Mount Saint Helens and Spirit Lake are twin beauties of the wilderness—as yet "undiscovered" by most travelers.

Seashore, Mountains.

If the family has made a split decision about vacationing this year—half wanting to go to the seashore and half voting for the mountains—Washington has the answer. It's only 60 miles from Mount Rainier to Tacoma on Puget Sound and about the same distance from Mount Baker to Bellingham, one of the gateways to the fabulous San Juan Islands. The distance from Mount Saint Helens to the long, clean ocean beaches is about 100 miles. Washington's slogan, "From Ski Level to Sea Level in an Hour," is no idle boast.

The rugged snow-clad Olympic mountains rise about the Olympic peninsula west of Puget Sound. This is the largest area in America which remains unexplored. However, United States Highway 101 penetrates this rugged wilderness area, making a complete loop around the peninsula. The million-acre Olympic National Park offers such attractions as Lake Crescent, with shores dotted by resorts, and secluded ocean beaches where shores are trimmed with years of driftwood. The Olympic peninsula is reached from Seattle within an hour or so via the Tacoma Narrows Bridge, Highway 101 through Olympia or ferryboats from the mainland.

Mount Spokane Park.

Eastern Washington has its mountain vacation areas, too. Just 34 miles northeast of Spokane is Mount Spokane State Park. In the center of this largest state park rises Mount Spokane. A highway leads to the top of the mile-high peak with a vista house and wide porch. Mount Spokane's summit offers a 360-degree view of mountains, forests and 17 lakes.

The valleys of Pend Oreille and Colville lie in the spurs of the Selkirk mountains a few hour's drive north of Spokane. This is primitive scenic country with pine forests, and flashing streams and rivers that teem with fish.

A new highway leads to the top of Steptoe Butte in the Palouse country south of Spokane. The Butte is the highest point in Washington's Palouse and from the top is a panoramic view of wheat fields and rolling hills. There still remains in the Palouse the battlefields where Indians once fought with the United States Calvalry. Steptoe Butte is named for Col. E. J. Steptoe, one of the early Indian fighters.

OVER 150 VACATION EVENTS IN MONTANA

Montana's 1956 calendar of vacation events lists more than 150 items on the western entertainment schedule for this summer's tourists.

Festivals, rodeos, Indian pow-wows, fishing derbies, historical parades, fairs, O-mok-sees (games of skill on horseback, Indian-style), and dozens of other activities will be presented throughout the Land of Shining Mountains.

Grand opening ceremonies at Virginia City, Montana's historic capital and now a restored ghost town, are scheduled for June 8-10. Traditionally, townspeople and visitors dress in nineteenth-century clothing for the occasion, and prizes are awarded for the best pioneer costumes.

The Montana Institute of the Arts annual festival, to be held in conjunction with Virginia City's grand opening, will add special attractions with exhibits in Montana arts and crafts, and contests in regional drama, literature and art.

A summer ski race is set for June 24, when the Third Annual High Road Summer Slalom takes place at Gardner Lake Headwall, adjacent to United States Highway 12, popularly known as the Red Lodge-Cooke High Road to Yellowstone National Park. Skiers from all over the Rocky Mountain West have been invited to participate. Spectators are welcome at no charge, and those who have been fore-sighted enough to bring their skis will be able to enjoy recreational skiing on nearby slopes.

Late June is the season for Indian pow-wows, and while dates have not yet been made public by the tribes, the ceremonies will probably take place about June 30. The Blackfeet Indians' Medicine Lodge at Browning is open to visitors, and cameras are permitted. Photographers are not usually welcome at the Northern Cheyenne Indians' Sun Dance at Lame Deer, but visitors who display the proper respect for the ancient religious ceremonies are permitted to attend.

Scheduled for late June is Montana's biggest rodeo, the Miles City Roundup. Other rodeos will be held in nearly every Montana town during the summer.

In a state too large for a single state fair, two major fairs are scheduled: the North Montana State Fair at Great Falls, Aug. 6-11; and the Midland Empire Fair at Billings, Aug. 13-18. The former, in addition to a full program of events, will this year include a contest for Rodeo Queen of Montana.

Among major fishing derbies are those at Livingston, Aug. 12, and Great Falls, Aug. 26.

The annual Festival of Nations at Red Lodge is set for Aug. 18-26, with a week-long program of activities featuring a different nationality each day.

PLANE-AUTO TOURS NOW TRAVEL TREND

One of the definite trends in travel is the combination plane-auto plan, which provides the answer for the person who wants to get to distant places without delay, do some leisurely sightseeing via automobile, then get back home quickly.

For a close-up look at America's great scenic offerings, nothing beats an automobile trip. Yet the vast majority of vacations are limited to one, two or three weeks. Until a few years ago that meant one of two things: either the motorist had to visit some near-by area, or drive so hard that there was little time for rest and relaxation.

Thanks to the plane-auto plan, the St. Louis traveler can fly to California, Mexico, New England (anywhere in the country as a matter of fact), in a matter of a few hours, according to American Airlines. By making advance arrangements, a rented car will be waiting for him at the airport, and he can spend practically his entire vacation time driving where and when he wishes.

Such "package vacations" are available to California, the Grand Canyon area, New England, Niagara Falls and other parts of the country. They vary from one to 10 days in duration, and are available at a wide range of prices. The plane part of the trip need not be expensive, particularly if part of the trip is by aircoach service.

One of the most popular plane-auto tour arrangements is a one-day stopover at Buffalo, where a car will be waiting at the airport so that the traveler can drive to Niagara Falls and back.

Other "package tours" include one to California, covering the area between Los Angeles and San Francisco. The vacationer may start at either city, picking up a car at the airport and leaving it at the airport in the other town. In between, he has covered 850 miles of some of the most spectacular scenery in the country. The suggested route goes through Santa Barbara, Carmel, Monterey, the historic mission and wine producing country, to Yosemite National Park and ends in San Francisco or starts at San Francisco and reverses the itinerary.

Another tour covers about 700 miles and takes in the Grand Canyon and Painted Desert, two of the natural wonders of this country.

There also are several basic New England tours, starting at the airport in Boston with a new rented car.

San Francisco Landmark

—American Airlines.

Out-of-door flower stands are to San Francisco what sidewalk cafes are to Paris, and add a gay note to the cosmopolitan city.

Suggested Tour of Oregon's Many Recreation Areas

Hundreds of miles of new highways in Oregon will lead summer visitors into the cool climes of recreation areas. Modern accommodations, facilities to please every family member and hospitable Oregon people all combine to make a Pacific Northwest trip one long to be remembered.

In the Portland area, the visitor will marvel at the metropolitan air of the large city set in a river valley only 55 highway miles from lofty 11,245-foot Mt. Hood, with its snow fields available for skiing throughout the summer.

The Portland Rose Festival, internationally famous for its all-flower float Grand Floral Parade, will be held this year from June 6 through 10.

Within a short distance of Portland are such attractions as world famed Columbia river gorge, which is now accessible by two highways. The Scenic Highway is maintained for those who want to see 11 waterfalls, eight state parks and the memorable view from Crown Point and Vista House, in more leisurely fashion. New water level route, U. S. 30, takes the visitor through the gorge in express time, but much of the beauty of the gorge may still be seen.

The Mount Hood recreation area is close to the metropolitan area, too—as close as 50 miles on highways that are open the year around. During summer season guided tours are available from Portland by bus completely around the base of Mount Hood on the Loop highway, which includes the Columbia gorge, the Hood river valley, Government camp and Mount Hood National Forest.

Westward from the valley via a number of routes the Oregon coast stretches 400 miles of its sandy beaches, imposing headlands and forested mountains for the enjoyment of all. All but 23 miles of the Oregon shore is public-owned. Coastal communities have accommodations to fit the pocketbook and the whim of everyone.

Southward from Portland is the Willamette valley and Salem, the capital city, with such attractions as guided tours through the modern white marble capitol. The capitol gardens and arboretum are lovely in early summer, and most of the trees are labeled for botanical inspection.

Corvallis, the home of Oregon State College, is an attractive city in the western Willamette valley. At Eugene, the metropolis of the southern Willamette valley, one may visit the University of Oregon campus with its Oriental museum.

East of Eugene, the motorist may drive over the McKenzie pass and see the Cascade lava beds at Dee Wright observatory—a special structure built of lava itself and containing view windows trained on some of the extinct volcanoes which caused the huge sea of lava stretching for miles in all directions.

The McKenzie river brings fishermen from far and near—modern accommodations are available all along U.S. Route 126 which flanks its banks. Boats and trained river guides are available season-long. Further southward are the valleys of the Rouge and Umpqua.

From Grants Pass, the motorist may ride into the Redwoods via U.S. Route 199 and take a 40-mile journey from Cave Junction to Oregon Caves National Monument, where overnight accommodations and meals are available.

While in southern Oregon, the traveler may visit Jacksonville, a "live" ghost town, preserved in its original state since the gold rush of the mid-1800s. A museum in the old Jackson County courthouse preserves relics of gold mining days and early Oregon history. In this area are the House of Mystery, near Gold Hill, gift-fruit packaging plants near Medford and Lithia park in Ashland. Lithia park is site each year of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival which will run from Aug. 1 through Sept. 1, 1956.

Via Oregon Highway 62, open year-round, the motorist drives to Crater Lake National Park for views of the deep blue lake, 2000 feet deep and set in the 20-square-mile cauldron of the ancient volcano, Mount Mazama. The lodge here is open from June 15 through Sept. 15. Bus trips are available to the lake from Medford or Klamath Falls during the same time.

At the eastern end of Highway 62 is the largest fresh water lake in the state, Upper Klamath lake and its recreation area. At the southern end of the lake is Klamath Falls, hub of huge Klamath basin. On the west side of the lake are lodges and accommodations and the highway to Lake of the Woods with its recreation facilities in Rogue River National Forest.

U. S. Route 97, the Dalles-California Highway, is the north-south artery through central Oregon. Immediatetly adjacent to it, northward from Klamath falls are Collier State Park, and its logging museum; views of the Cascade range to the west; junctions to South Century drive and the famed Crane Prairie fishing region near LaPine; junction to East and Paulina lakes, and fishing resorts and unusual Lava River Caves State Park.

Further information concerning this tour or any other Oregon travel information is available upon request to Travel Information, Oregon State Highway Dept., Salem, Oregon.

Summer Vacation News from SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Latest news about the things vacationists like best in this sea-cooled land of summer fun...from Southern California's official tourist bureau

BESIDE THE PACIFIC

Most visitors are surprised to learn that our Pacific seacoast is virtually one immense beach. We have 160 miles of white sand beaches in Southern California—all at their finest in summer. Warm sunshine—a cool salt breeze crinkling the blue waters—and white surf racing up smooth sands . . . !

Nearby beaches to try: those rimming Santa Monica Bay (an hour west of downtown Los Angeles via Wilshire Blvd.)—and those next to Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor (same distance south of city via Harbor Freeway).

Things to do: At both areas you'll swim, skin-dive or soak up sunshine. You can stroll onto a pier and watch people and pelicans catching fish. You'll dig your toes into sands as soft as powder, perhaps try your hand at building a sand castle. And you'll probably get the beachcombing urge, wind up with a fine array of scallop shells, sea snails and pink or purple sand dollars!

Things to see up and down the coast: U.S. 101, a fine four-lane highway, makes it easy to sample the full variety of our seacoast.

One day you might start at Santa Monica and work your way north. Skirting Santa Monica Bay, you'll see the 400-foot Palisades sea cliffs (wonderful marine views from here), miles of curving beaches, movie star homes and mountains that literally rise out of the ocean. Continuing north, you pass the green Channel Islands (looking like floating mountains), seagoing oil wells, and an area whose white beaches and rugged, green cliffs always remind Europeans of the Riviera.

Another day, start at Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor and wander south on Highway 101. The Harbor teems with nautical sights and sounds. Tugboats toot constantly; you may hear a China Seas freighter give out with a deep-toned greeting. You'll study the ships up close—their strange flags, and names like Sunwhit, Nikkoh Maru, Dongedyk, Loch Garth and Gjertrud Bakke! Then, going south along the coast, you can see: a colony of sea lions, one of America's big yacht harbors (5,000 craft, many owned by movie stars), tide pools swarming with pink starfish and purple sea urchins, half-moon bays, sea caves and more miles of tempting beaches!

UP IN THE MOUNTAINS

We have mile-high mountains half an hour north of downtown Los Angeles. And the spectacular High Sierra lies farther north (a half-day away), with the nation's tallest mountains, biggest trees and highest waterfalls.

San Gabriel Mountains. The wide, high-gear Angeles Crest Highway takes you to these purple peaks behind Los Angeles. (Take Pasadena Freeway from downtown, continue to La Canada, where Angeles Crest Highway begins.) Almost at once, panoramic views unfold. Sheer gorges, rose-colored canyons and miles of tumbled peaks pass by. You see below, with its toy-like cars, the roads you came up. Ahead, a white scratch on the mountain wall, is the road you'll travel next. Interesting side trip: to the table-top summit of 5,710-foot Mt. Wilson, home of the famed 100-inch telescope. Imposing views of sunny orange groves, vineyards and valley towns stretching out for miles below you!

The High Sierra. It rises two miles high—an immense silver-gray wall—as you head up U.S. 395. Good side roads lead to Whitney Portal (gateway to tallest peak in the 48 states), colorful ghost towns, matchless alpine scenery, and hundreds of sparkling lakes and streams.

A few steps off any of these roads, you're in country almost unmarked by man. Chipmunks pop out from the rocks; big jackrabbits bounce by; a startled fawn studies you with serious, brown eyes—then hightails it into the deep forest.

You'll hike or ride trails into sweet-smelling wildflower meadows and pine forests where the only sound is the wind singing through the trees. Or fish the bluest lakes you've ever seen—like patches of sky fallen to earth—and streams so clear you see the flick of a trout's tail before you catch him!

OUT TO HOLLYWOOD

What is this famous movie-TV-radio capital really like? Here's your chance to find out—Hollywood's just a 10-minute trip from downtown Los Angeles by way of the eight-lane Hollywood Freeway.

Heart of Hollywood. Good place to go first: the Sunset & Vine area. Nearby, you'll want to see the major TV and radio network studios and those of two big movie companies. On your way, keep watching for show people. They're always in the area, going to work or catching a bite at a cafe.

Movie star homes. You can see scores of them in an afternoon. Our free Color Sightseeing Map locates the homes of 80 top entertainers for you. Shows the streets they live on, who owns this green-roofed colonial home or that ground-hugging ranch house. Simply mail coupon below and you're off on a fascinating tour of Glamourland!

Other Hollywood fun: Seeing footprints of movie stars imprinted in the concrete forecourt of a big Hollywood Blvd. theater . . . sitting in on a TV or radio broadcast (ask us for tickets when you arrive) . . . taking in the night view from Hollywood Hills with a million lights spread out before you!

AROUND LOS ANGELES

The variety of Los Angeles attractions always astonishes visitors. Within city limits, for example, you'll find: the world's largest rose garden, with 15,000 plants abloom (Exposition Park) . . . an 18th century Spanish mission (San Fernando Mission, 1797) . . . America's largest city park, with fine zoo and planetarium (Griffith Park) . . . smart shops set among palm and banana trees . . . colorful Latin and Oriental quarters. And you may be just as impressed by our cliff-top homes, open-air markets and thousands of year-round gardens—at their peak of glory in midsummer!

Ultramodern freeways: You'll like the way this new system of 6- and 8-lane urban highways helps you get around. You can buzz out from downtown Los Angeles to Hollywood, San Fernando Valley, Pasadena or San Gabriel Valley orange country in a few minutes!

COOL NIGHTS

With the Pacific as our air conditioner, summers are comfortable in Southern California. Noontime temperatures in Los Angeles in July average 77.9 degrees. In this dry climate you seldom find steamy, humid heat. Nights are so cool you'll sleep under blankets!

Experts Predict Record High on Foreign Travel

WASHINGTON (UP)—A record flood of American tourists spent more than one billion dollars in foreign countries last year—and this year they will exceed it by 10 to 15 per cent.

That's the word from travel experts in Washington who base their estimates in part on the fact that applications for passports so far this year are running 13.3 per cent over the same period in 1955.

One reason for this increase in Americans abroad is that foreign countries have successfully engaged in a promotion campaign to lengthen the vacation season so that it includes not only the summer months but extends from mid-May to mid-October.

Another feature is that United States travelers this year will range over a wider geographical area than previously. Officials say that not even the relatively acute political crisis in the Middle East has discouraged travelers to that area.

Americans are looking with sharpened interest to inexpensive Spain and to Austria and some tours are planned to Soviet Russia. Western Germany is making its biggest bid since the war for the tourist trade.

Nevertheless, France—and particularly Paris—will probably still hold first spot in European popularity with the British Isles and Italy about equal for second place and Switzerland next.

The tremendous dollar flow that European countries have found in tourist trade has inspired other areas to emulate them. American countries recently participated in an inter-American travel congress at San Jose, Costa Rica, and adopted the most elaborate program in history.

Pacific and African countries also are stepping up efforts to attract tourists.

Among the 142,478 passports issued in the first quarter of this year, 95,813 were for pleasure travel.

The majority of travelers to Europe this year will be by air, as in 1955 when air travelers exceeded ship travelers for the first time.

CRUISE A DREAM? COULD COME TRUE

Here's a dream for those days when the summer sun glares down from a still, cloudless sky. You're stretched on a deck chair on a cruise ship, watching the prow cut through cool blue waters. A steward hovers nearby to tuck a blanket about you, should it get too cold.

A dream? It's one that could come true more easily than most average-income Americans realize, according to the National Association of Travel Organizations.

At $17 to $25 a day, cruises may be less expensive for one person than other kinds of travel with comparable accommodations. Your luggage "stays put," and you can take a great deal of it with you with practically no bother. You meet a world of new friends, and have time to get to know them well.

A wide variety of voyages make it possible to meet individual needs, whether it is a luxury cruise or an inexpensive weekend on the water.

American Express estimates that over 263,000 Americans will vacation on the great inland seas this summer. Saguenay and St. Lawrence river cruises are expected to pull more than 250,000; the Great Lakes, 20,000; another 3300 will steamboat down the Ohio, Tennessee and Mississippi rivers. Approximately 6000 will voyage to Alaska, according to predictions; many thousands more will cruise to Bermuda, the West Indies, the Mediterranean, North Cape, the Pacific, Hawaii and South America.

Trips range from cruises to the North Cape, Mediterranean, the Orient and South America to weekend jaunts on the Great Lakes.

Vancouver, B.C., is the starting point for all Alaska cruises to Skagway.

Those with more time at their disposal may plan an autumn cruise to the South Pacific, with stops at such exotic ports as Tahiti, Fiji and Samoa.

A tip from the Ask Mr. Foster Travel Service is to be completely frank with your travel agent as to why you are taking a cruise.

Thos. Cook & Son add that an agent can generally advise as to which ships are best for the kind of activity you prefer, and exactly what your trip will cost.

LOCAL TRAVEL INQUIRIES UP SHARPLY, AGENCY SAYS

Estimates on summer travel compiled by national organizations show an appalling increase in both foreign and domestic inquiries and bookings.

The trend is borne out on a local level, according to a report from Kirkland DeLuxe Travel Agency.

The bureau reports that vacation bookings and inquiries in both their Clayton and downtown offices indicate that European travel is up approximately 10 per cent, cruise business also has increased about 10 per cent, while domestic travel shows an increase of more than 15 per cent.

INDIAN DANCES AT GALLUP, N.M. AUGUST 9-12

Visitors to the thirty-fifth annual Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial Aug. 9, 10, 11, 12 will find Gallup, N.M., a gateway to countless scenic attractions.

Gallup is located at the juncture of U.S. 66, main east-west highway, and U.S. 666, major connection with Colorado and Utah to the north. It is served by Sante Fe railway, Greyhound and Trailways bus system, and Frontier Airlines. It has 10 hotels, 37 motels, and several smaller trailer camps in every price range—some of them the most modern in the Southwest.

North lies Shiprock, Aztec Ruins, Mesa Verde National Park, oil, gas, and uranium country; northwest, the expansive Navajo reservation with its many contrasts, red-rocked Canyon de Chelly (de Shay), Monument Valley, Window Rock, Rainbow Bridge, Keet Seel ruins, and Navajo Monument; northeast, archeologically famed Pueblo Bonito at Chaco Canyon.

West the traveler will see Painted Desert, Petrified Forest, Meteor Crater, Oak Creek Canyon, San Francisco Peaks, Grand Canyon, Wupatki Ruins, the sheer-cliffed fastness of the Hopi Indians, and roads to Bryce and Zion National Parks of Utah. To the east are Gallup's Red Rocks, old-world Acoma, malpais country, Grants, "the uranium capital," Rio Grande Pueblos, modern Albuquerque, quaint Santa Fe and the atomic city of Los Alamos.

South of Gallup is the busy community of the Zuni Indians, largest occupied Pueblo tribe of the United States, famous for their carefully guarded traditions, the splendor of their religious dances, their creative jewelry; the historic scribblings of old-time travelers at El Morro's Inscription Rock, and the hunting and fishing country of east central Arizona.

SUN VALLEY SCENERY

There are few areas in America where one may see a variety of scenery such as surrounds Sun Valley, Idaho.

Within a two-hour drive one can see barren desert, ride through rolling sagebrush foothills that blend into pine-covered mountains and finally reach high passes where jagged peaks wear snowcaps until mid-July.

Nation's Playground.

Miami Beach fittingly is known as the nation's playgrounds. One-eighth of the total space is devoted to public recreational use.

WORD OF WARNING

The National Association of Travel Organizations passes along a warning from San Francisco. Don't even think of going near that usually unusually hospitable city during the week of the Republican convention unless you have a CONFIRMED reservation. The same is true of nearby resort areas and parks on weeks adjacent to the convention week.

In a somewhat lesser degree, this warning applies to Chicago, which manages somehow to take most conventions in its stride.

Domes Increase Visibility On Rail and Bus Routes

Many Routes Now Feature Scenic Vistas for Travelers to View and Photograph.

Greater visibility is the trend in North American land travel. Railroads in the United States and Canada are adding dome cars to their crack trains, and bus lines are putting dome-topped busses in service throughout the country. So travelers can now get a topside view of villages and farms below, and a sky's-the-limit look at mountains or buildings towering above.

There are an estimated 38,000,000 camera-carrying families in the United States today. Aware that picture-taking from dome cars is therefore of great importance in promoting passenger traffic, the lines that have domes are enthusiastically encouraging travelers' cameras. On the California Zephyr—operated jointly by Burlington, the Denver & Rio Grande and Western Pacific—a Zephyrette (that's a hostess) calls attention over a public address system to picture possibilities in such scenic regions along the route as the Colorado river and Feather river canyons. The Zephyrette also volunteers photo-taking hints.

Several lines issue leaflets for camera fans. The newest of these, just published by Union Pacific, is a four-color job called "Suggestions for Taking Photos from the Astra Domes and in Western Vacation Regions." Many valuable tips on picture-taking under glass are offered, such as:

"The Solex heat-resistant glass in the dome windows has a slight greenish tint which serves as a lens filter. . . . For the sake of sharpness, it is advisable to shoot looking forward or back. In all cases, use as fast a shutter speed as your camera, film and light will allow . . ."

Penthouse Travel.

Not only is picture-taking from the trains featured, but the photoscenic qualities of the Bryce, Grand Canyon and Yellowstone National Parks and other regions served by Union Pacific are highlighted for the benefit of exploring camera fans. A typical paragraph reads:

"Grand Canyon—best photographed in late afternoon. . . . The effect of the wide chasm may be increased by allowing a small part of the foreground to show, with perhaps a person, tree trunk or tall rock at one side. . . ."

Incidentally, one photography note in the Union Pacific booklet reveals that even smog can have a silver lining: "A slight atmospheric haze is often encountered in southern California. In color shots of landscapes the haze often lends added charm."

Aboard the Santa Fe Super Chief, traveling through the sun-colored Indian Country of the Southwest, a leaflet entitled "When Making Camera Shots From the Dome Car" is given out. Not only does the leaflet helpfully advise on filters and film and how to avoid vibrations and reflections (don't lean your arms on the window frame; cushion camera in your hands; hold it close to the window) but a time-schedule of picture possibilities is given. Westbound Super Chief passengers, for instance, are advised: "Before coming to Dick Wootton Ranch move to the right side of car for pictures of the Rockies east of Gallup at 11 a.m."

Canadian Pacific also has a new photography handout, "Important Notice to Camera Fans," giving simple, specific rules on picture-taking from Canadian Pacific Scenic Domes, both in color and black-and-white, with recommendations for use of filters. In order to be sure that passengers bring their cameras, Canadian Pacific utilizes this leaflet as a reminder by distributing it through ticket offices and agencies, as well as aboard the train. For as Ian Warren, C.P.'s general passenger traffic manager, says: "Photography is increasingly important as a sales aid in promoting rail travel."

Warren adds: "This is particularly true in the case of 'The Canadian,' as photographers have unusual opportunity to capture the unexcelled grandeur of the Canadian Rockies from our Scenic Domes as well as other attractive regions of Canada in traveling over the world's longest Dome route."

More Cars Under Glass.

Southern Pacific is putting passengers under glass as fast as dome lounge cars can be built. One unforgettable scene for tourists to view and photograph from the dome of the San Francisco to Los Angeles Valley Daylight is the famed Tehachapi Loop, where the train does a complete turn, passing under the point where it had been a minute before.

Two other lines that have added a new dimension to travel by donning the Solex Glass space helmets are Northern Pacific's Northcoast Limited, described as "a wide open look at the wide open spaces" from Chicago to the Pacific Northwest; and the Missouri Pacific "Eagles" out of St. Louis. There are two Texas Eagles, to Fort Worth and to San Antonio, and one Missouri River Eagle to Omaha, traveling by daylight all the way. The Eagles' domes are called Planetariums. The Wabash also provides dome service out of St. Louis to Chicago and Kansas City.

Domes are primarily a Western specality, as the height of eastern bridges and tunnels limits their use on the East Coast. The exception so far among railroads is the Baltimore and Ohio, which has installed domes to give passengers a wide-angled view of the scenery on two trains, the Columbian and the Capitol Limited between Chicago and Washington, D. C. After dark, the B.&O. floodlights the passing landscape for night-viewers.

East Coast passengers who want to see more and take more pictures en route are not denied their pleasure-domes, however. Greyhounds' Scenicruiser busses have king-size windows on their raised observation decks. Amateur photographers have found they can shoot much more along the highway now, as these high-domed busses afford a view both fore and aft and over automobiles.

SHIP LAUNCHED

The second of Canadian Pacific's new ocean-going liners—the 26,000-ton Empress of England—was launched last month at Walker-on-Tyne by Lady Eden, wife of the Prime Minister of Great Britain.

Sister ship of the Empress of Britain, new flagship of the great White Empress fleet which left Montreal earlier this month following her maiden trans-Atlantic voyage, the new vessel will be similar in design and structure to the "Britain."

—Daytona Beach Area.

Buster knows a good thing when he sees it—a ride along the famous sands at Daytona Beach. Thousands of holidayers will beat the heat this summer in much the same manner.

There Is More to Florida Than Just Surf and Sand

By NIXON SMILEY
Chicago Daily News Service.

There is perhaps no other place in the world better prepared to take care of tourists, and their dollars, than Florida.

The state has more than 1500 hotels, with some 100,000 rooms. Its motels, most of them air-conditioned, line the main highways from the Georgia line to Key West, providing approximately 85,000 rooms.

Then there are the apartment houses, with 400,000 rooms; the guest and rooming houses with another 100,000 rooms.

Florida offers the tourist just about everything that he could look for in the way of recreation except open gambling. He can satisfy this instinct by parimutuel betting on horses or dogs, or on men knocking a ball around in the Basque game of jai-alai.

The state's main resources are sunshine and water, with palm-lined beaches and lakes ringed by moss-draped oaks and pines. But Florida has other wonders, too.

How these wonders fall in order of importance is a matter of opinion. They might be listed like this:

First, the overseas highway from the mainland to Key West, which was built over the bridges that once carried the train that "went to sea." The colorful water and striking keys, coupled with the long bridges, make the trip to Key West a wondrous experience.

Second, the citrus section of central Florida, which may be seen by driving down the "backbone" of Florida along Highway 27.

Third, the springs of Florida, fully described in any tourist guide.

Fourth, the swamps of South Florida, including the Everglades. The Everglades National Park is the best place to get acquainted with this vast and interesting area, which, unfortunately, is almost meaningless unless explained.

One needs to know something about its wildlife and its unusual biology to appreciate it. A good way to learn about the everglades and to have an unforgettable experience is to take one of the Audubon Society's tours from Miami.

Fifth, hotel row at Miami Beach. It is a place everyone should see at least once. This is truly a fabulous sight. Every service a person can desire for rest and contentment can be had under one roof in these plush hotels. Costs are considerably lower in summer than in winter, and almost all of them are air-conditioned.

Seventh, the palms of Florida. This is the only state where coconut palms grow. But there are other interesting palms here as well, including the spectacular palm forests.

The largest collection of palms in America is in the Fairchild Tropical garden, 10 miles south of Miami. There is no charge to see the botanical garden, which has a collection of tropical plants from all over the world.

There are many other worthwhile things to see in Florida, depending on individual preferences and available time. There is the skyline highway over Tampa Bay, the various gardens, aquariums, snake farms, Indian villages, cypress knee museums, shell collections, orchid jungles, driftwood museums and bird, parrot and monkey farms.

Just name it and Florida probably has it somewhere . . . with the exception of mountains, snow and waterfalls.

ST. JOHN SMALLEST OF AMERICAN VIRGIN ISLANDS

A tiny fragment of U.S. soil out in the Caribbean, approximately the size of Bermuda, is becoming known as one of the new recreational areas of America.

St. John, tropical and unspoiled, is the smallest of the three main U. S. Virgin Islands—that cluster of verdant mountaintops which divide the Atlantic and the Caribbean some 50 miles east of Puerto Rico.

Considered America's most primitively beautiful island possession, St. John is the site of the proposed Virgin Islands National Park which would preserve its natural beauty and make it available for public enjoyment. The mountainous island is noted for its rugged terrain, white sand beaches, unequaled year 'round climate, and peaceful remoteness.

This 19-square-mile isle is out of reach of telephones and accessible only by boat, yet is still within seven hours of New York. Vacationers at its guest houses usually come by nonstop airliner to nearby San Juan where connections are made with an island-hopping plane service direct to St. Thomas. A taxi ride takes one to the boat landing at Red Hook for the four-mile water crossing to St. John.

It is a place for casual clothes and relaxed activities such as sun basking on the pure white sand beaches, swimming, snorkling, fishing, yachting, hiking and exploring 18th century sugar plantation ruins or ancient Indian stone writings pre-dating Columbus's discovery of St. John in 1493.

Quick Rinse

Holly Wood News Bureau.

EVEN TEMPERATURES

At San Juan, Puerto Rico, temperatures maintain an average of 75 degrees during the winter months and 85 degrees throughout the summer.

But in Puerto Rico's mountain interiors, it is often some 10 degrees cooler than at sea level.

The Big Ones.

Good fishing is close at hand in Miami Beach. Within a half hour after leaving the docks, the vacationing angler may be tangling with a sailfish or some other big game in the deep waters of the Gulf Stream, which passes within sight of this resort.

trips to take in sea-cooled FLORIDA

Summers in Florida are blessed with the natural air conditioning of trade winds blowing inland off cool seas and lakes. It's a grand time to see the whole state at amazing savings in cost

Northwest Coast — The summer popularity of this area is soaring for good reasons. Fronting the cooling zephyrs off the vast Gulf of Mexico, it is endowed with a 100-mile arc of white sand beach that's as beautiful as any in the world (drive along Route 98 between Pensacola, Panama City and Port St. Joe). Many friendly resorts offer unique interests and relief from summer's heat. The region is steeped in historic lore dating back to the earliest Spanish exploration of Don Tristan De Luna in 1559. It is justly renowned for fishing, sea-fresh delicacies, excellent swimming and unspoiled beauty.

West Coast—Here, too, you will see exciting seascapes. The Sunshine Skyway alone is a spectacle. This new 15-mile route over Tampa Bay is one of the largest open-water crossings in the world. It connects St. Petersburg with Bradenton, Sarasota and other marvelous West Coast resorts. Water skiing, skin diving and less vigorous aquatic sports are ideal. Shelling is fun, too, on off-shore islands like Sanibel. Don't miss the Ringling Museum of Art in Sarasota; Clearwater's breeze-swept beaches; dining sumptuously on Spanish foods in Tampa; the sponge fishing fleet at Tarpon Springs, and the spell-binding sight of the sun as it sets over the Gulf of Mexico.

Florida Keys—The colorful mingling of Atlantic waters with those of the Gulf of Mexico is always a sight. Here, from toll-free bridges that connect the coral Keys, you'll see intense blues, pale aquas and glittering greens blend in a breath-taking vista of open sea. En route, and at the atmospheric city of Key West, you'll encounter no end of fine restaurants and lodgings.

Lower East Coast—Drive along the Atlantic's edge on route A1A from Palm Beach south for a sight unsurpassed in magnificence. See the castle-like estates of Palm Beach, picturesque ocean inlets and rock jetties with fishing fans casting for bluefish, snapper and mackerel. You'll come upon charmingly suburban Delray Beach, and other celebrated vacation spots like Pompano, Fort Lauderdale, and Hollywood-by-the-sea. Everywhere you look will be glistening palms swaying in the spanking sea breeze, blue water, and beckoning beaches. "Hotel Row" in Miami Beach is dazzling with spectacular architecture, swimming pools and cabana life. By all means get in some golf, fishing, tennis. Take scenic cruises in sightseeing boats past fabulous estates, lush jungle growth, flowering trees, orchids, airplants, ibis and egrets, snoozing alligators.

Northeast Coast — Here, from Fernandina Beach to Daytona you skirt the ocean's edge on route A1A. You'll be confronted by a galaxy of fun-loving seaside playgrounds, but no matter where you stay it's easy to explore the whole area. Stock up on health . . . build castles in the sand, doze on the beach, and sharpen your appetite for more active pleasures with invigorating dips in the frothy surf. Stroll the Boardwalk at Daytona Beach and drive your car over its tide-packed sands. Daytona is a lively host with many special summer events. Just 55 miles northward is intriguing St. Augustine, oldest city in the United States. Its historic fort, vine-clad houses and narrow streets carry you back to the romantic past . . . to the days of Ponce De Leon and swaggering conquistadores.

But this is just skimming the surface. Decide now to delve deeper into the beauties, the pleasures, the wonderful climate that is yours all summer in Florida, and at rates you can afford. Mail coupon today!

CHANGE IN CUSTOMS

Air and sea passengers arriving at Nassau will no longer be required to fill out customs declarations unless they actually bring dutiable merchandise into the colony. Henceforth, the government announced, visitors and returning residents will be requested to make oral declarations when they claim their baggage at the airport or ship landing.

The change in procedure was put into effect by customs officials after several months of study to "determine a new and better method of handling the growing flow of arrivals." The move had been urged by airlines and steamship companies serving the island.

Vacation Fun Beside the Surf

—Delta Air Lines.

Luxurious hotels line the Atlantic ocean at Miami Beach, a year-round vacation spot for the sportsman and sun worshiper. Streamlined with terraces and setbacks to allow maximum benefit of sea and air, the hotels have social directors and recreation personnel to help guests enjoy their vacations.

More Than 100,000 Visitors Expected at Miami Beach

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—Package vacations will bring more than 100,000 visitors to Miami Beach this summer at a cost per person of $19 to $47.50 for six nights and seven days in any one of the more than 100 hotels participating in the planned trips.

Package vacations, which have grown steadily in popularity since they were inaugurated by the air lines a few years ago, make it possible for the visitor to budget expenses in advance.

Two basic costs, round trip transportation and the hotel bill, both may be ascertained as plans are made. Transfers to and from the airport here are included in the hotel price.

Food, the third major expenditure, also may be anticipated rather definitely through the choice of a modified-American plan in which breakfast and dinner are provided by the hotel at a cost of approximately $3 to $3.50 a day.

Low Summer Prices.

These low summer prices, plus the wide range of recreation available, are the primary reasons Miami Beach has become a major summer, as well as winter, playground. Hotel rooms for two are available for as little as $25 a week and for as much as $15 a day, or about a third of the tariffs for the winter season.

Yet the summer vacationer has the wide beaches, the palm-shaded swimming pools overlooking the ocean, the fishing, golf, sightseeing and most of the other forms of sport and recreation that are available to the winter visitor. Racing is the only major diversion, in fact, that now is absent from the holiday scene.

By Train or Car.

Visitors who arrive here in their own automobiles can, of course, use them for sightseeing as well as transportation to the golf courses, the charter boat docks, night clubs, restaurants and shops. Those who come by train or plane may rent an automobile for as little as $20 a week, plus 7 cents a mile for all driving in excess of 100 miles. Unless extensive sightseeing is planned, the vacationer will find entertainment and recreation conveniently at hand.

Practically all the hotels have swimming pools and beaches on the grounds, or within a block or two. One of the city's two 18-hole golf courses will be not more than four or five miles from any hotel or apartment in Miami Beach. Night clubs are scattered through the hotel districts, as are shopping centers and restaurants. Municipal parks and playgrounds, where tennis, shuffleboard and similar recreation may be enjoyed, are in all areas.

Fishing trips may be arranged at the boat docks on the bayfront, where it is but a half-hour cruise to the famed big-game waters just offshore. Sailfish, tarpon, marlin, wahoo and dolphin are the top heavyweight trophies, while bonefish, permit, snook and snapper head the list of species most sought-after on light tackle.

The first-time summer visitor in Miami Beach will be pleasantly surprised to find the climate unexpectedly mild. Surrounding waters and off-ocean breezes form a natural air-conditioning effect that thwarts the heat waves so familiar to many northern areas. Seldom does the thermometer exceed 89, and never does it hit the extremes often felt elsewhere. Hay fever sufferers also find the clean, clear atmosphere gives prompt relief to sniffles and sneezes in most instances.

CARIBBEAN CRUISE ROUNDS OUT THAT TRIP TO FLORIDA

Many visitors to Florida will round out their trip with a cruise from Miami to some of the Caribbean ports.

Three-day cruises are available to Nassau aboard the Queen of Nassau, and the wise traveler will take along a camera since photogenic inter-island boats are always docked along the waterfront. Other excellent shots may be obtained of native boys diving for coins, and of tropical Paradise Beach.

The S.S. Evangeline calls at Havana, Cuba as well as at Nassau. Havana's narrow exotic streets, the flower market and Morro Castle are a photographer's delight.

The ship also makes a cruise to Port-au-Prince, Haiti; Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic; Kingston and Port Antonio, Jamaica.

In Haiti, hardy photographers visit the fantastic native produce market by the waterfront. The World's Fair is now in progress in Ciudad Trujillo, with more than 125 acres of grounds and many ultra-modern buildings.

Take along plenty of film(as each island is entirely different in custom, architecture and topography.

Modest Beauty.

Miami Beach, home of the bathing beauty, has a local law that prohibits bathers from walking the streets unless clothed from shoulders to knees.

Low Prices Just One of Miami's Attractions

Sports, Sightseeing, Climate All Add to Pleasure of Summer Visitors.

OCEAN SWIMMING and a chance to see Miami at reduced rates are the principal magnets which attract visitors to Miami during the summer months.

But vacationers during this once "dead season" find a variety of other entertainment activities in addition to swimming and fishing.

High on the popularity list during the daytime is sightseeing. With the race tracks closed, operators of most commercial attractions report they enjoy better business in summer than during the winter.

After-dark activities range from moonlight cruises and fishing excursions to the ocean reefs, to International League baseball games at Miami Stadium and open-air band concerts in Bayfront Park.

Baseball is a new addition to the schedule of events, being offered for the first time this year with marked success.

Most of Miami's sight-seeing attractions are geared to interest the entire family. And since most of the area's summer vacationers are family groups, this probably accounts for the summer patronage upswing.

Miami's bird, fish and animal attractions make a hit with dad and mother as well as the small fry.

Offering special appeal to grown-ups are Vizcaya, fabulous estate of the late farm machinery magnate, James Deering; a Spanish monastery, built in Spain 350 years before Columbus and transplanted in Miami in recent years, and Hialeah Park, with its beautiful landscaping and huge flock of flamingos.

Even nature co-operates for the benefit of summertime visitors to this all-year resort area. It is at this season that Miami's famous frangipani and Royal Poinciana trees are in bloom, adding a splash of color to the entire city. Bougainvillea vines, hibiscus and many other varieties of tropical flowers also are at their best at this time.

GREAT LAKES AREA SCENIC AND HISTORIC

Spanning more than 1000 miles from Duluth, at the southwest corner of Lake Superior to the St. Lawrence river at the eastern end of Lake Ontario, lies an immense summer vacation playground comprising the five Great Lakes. Throughout this vacation land may be found the most modern of luxurious hotels, charming chalets and inns, fishing lodges and summer homes.

Perhaps the greatest vacation appeal to be found in this vacation wonderland, however, is the enchanting unspoiled scenic beauty enhanced by the historic background of much of the region surrounding Lake Huron, the Georgian bay, Lake Michigan and along the shoreline of mighty Lake Superior, according to the Georgian Bay Line.

Discovery of the Georgian bay region dates back to Champlain's exploration of 1615. At that time this area was a huge Indian empire which Champlain named Huronia.

Mackinac island, known to the Indians as Michilimackinac (The Great Turtle) centuries before the arrival of the white man, was first seen by Jean Nicolet during his exploration of 1634. Its history has been written under three flags and through it passed a long procession of bearded soldiers of the King of France, of black-robed padres and gaily clad voyageurs and couriers des bois. Today Mackinac island rates as the most historic spot in Michigan and it is considered one of the scenic gems of America.

Often called "The Bermuda of the North," it is one of the few remaining places on the North American continent where one may step into an atmosphere of a past age for the automobile here is unknown and the horse and surrey is the principal means of transportation.

Aboard one of the cruise ships that sail weekly during the summer one can see the rugged, primitive scenery; the historic ports of call such as Mackinac Island; the 30,000 Island area of Georgian Bay; the bustling gateway to the far north of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and the vast horizons of mighty Lake Superior, the famed picture rocks near Munising and the great grain and ore center of Duluth than is possible by any other method of travel.

SOUTH AFRICA'S CITIES AMAZE AMERICAN VISITORS

Travel to South Africa has become one of the most noticeable trends among American tourists in recent years, according to reliable statistics on world travel.

When an American visits South Africa he usually is prepared to be thrilled by its natural wonders but, inevitably, he also is delightfully surprised by its beautiful cities, particularly Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban and Pretoria.

Johannesburg, the industrial and commercial hub of the Union, rivals Manhattan with its skyscraper office blocks, fashionable hotels, wide boulevards and modern way of life.

Cape Town, the fabled "Tavern of the Seas," is a delightful mixture of the old and the new, with its busy metropolitan area rising in fascinating contrast to its narrow quaintly-named old Dutch streets.

Durban is a fairy-tale city of tropical luxuriance; Pretoria, too, is a city of trees, flowers, and the gracious dignity of stately Georgian architecture.

Flatiron Building.

Flatiron Building, in New York City, filling the triangle made by Broadway and Fifth avenue, south of Madison Square, was the city's first skyscraper, and 50 years ago it was its most famous building. The name is derived from its curious shape—that of an old flatiron.

MICHIGAN'S TOURIST FACILITIES INCREASED

More Than 5000 Resorts, Motels, Hotels and Cottages Now Available.

The curtain is up on Michigan's 1956 summer travel season and the state's tourist and resort industry is preparing for an influx of over 5,000,000 out-of-state vacationers this year.

Encouraged by last year's record season and a five percent increase in vacation inquiries to date, Michigan's tourist officials anticipate that 1956 will be another peak travel year.

To keep pace with this increase, resort operators have been expanding and updating their tourist-servicing facilities at a record rate. Visitors can now choose from more than 5000 resorts, motels, resort hotels, and lakeshore cabins and cottages situated throughout Michigan's four tourist regions.

This constantly increasing interest in Michigan's vacation facilities still centers around the state's abundance of inland water for every summer recreation. Complementing these natural assets are a number of man-made sightseeing wonders that also act as powerful tourist lures.

Biggest of these today is the partially completed Mackinac Straits Bridge that will span the straits next year to give Michigan its first motoring link between the two peninsulas.

These natural and man-made vacation attractions are enhanced by an event-packed summer calendar that offers Michigan visitors plenty of activity. During June, July and August more than 75 special events are listed, with characteristic emphasis on water sports, Regattas and contests for yachts, sailboats, outboards, and canoes will be featured by resort communities along the Great Lakes and on Michigan's inland waterways.

All four of the state's tourist regions will host their share of the events, so that no matter where in Michigan a vacationer decides to stay he will be conveniently near a number of these summertime activities.

Besides water carnivals and boat races, the Michigan calendar lists bass, pickerel and trout festivals; rodeos; fruit and flower festivals; archery, shuffleboard and golf meets; a pancake festival; summer stock theatres; and a national music festival.

SAN DIEGO'S SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL OPENS JULY 20

A setting of Elizabethan splendor will be featured in the presentation of the Seventh Annual San Diego National Shakespeare Festival at the Old Globe Theater in Balboa Park, San Diego, California, July 20 through Sept. 2.

Two of Shakespeare's finest plays, "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Richard II," plus Ben Jonson's "Volpone," will be given nightly in rotation in the 400-seat playhouse said to be the truest replica in existence today of the London Old Globe of Shakespeare's own day. The theater buildings, including Falstaff Tavern, will be colorfully festooned with flags and pennants. Surrounding the theater green will be gaily-decorated refreshment booths from which are sold tarts, candies and punch.

The Festival opens each evening at 8 p.m. with Good Queen Bess and her royal court presiding over a costumed pageant of authentic Old English folk dancing. Madrigal singers and recorder players entertain the Festival guests before the opening curtain and 'tween acts.

FERRY SERVICE FROM BAR HARBOR TO YARMOUTH, N.S.

Establishment of the new ferry service between Bar Harbor and Yarmouth, N. S., is resulting in receipt of literally hundreds of inquiries every week from all parts of the United States about the new Bay of Funday service, according to a report from the Canadian National Railways which operates the big car and passenger ferry 'Bluenose.'

The $5,000,000 ferry makes the 95-mile trip in six and one-half hours.

The trip is now being made three times a week but beginning June 26 the ferry will make a round trip daily.

Distance overland from Bar Harbor to Yarmouth is more than 700 miles. The ferry carries 500 passengers and 150 motor vehicles.

Maine and Nova Scotia are enjoying being next-door neighbors so much that Down Easters and Bluenosers will celebrate their new "ocean highway" with duplicate celebrations of "Bluenose Day" in Bar Harbor on June 8 and Yarmouth on June 9.

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. FLIES TWO FLAGS FOR SIX WEEKS

Six weeks each year, America's first national colors fly along both sides of Duke of Gloucester street during the restored Williamsburg's Prelude to Independence observance.

The Continental flag displays the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew—from the British flag of the colonial period—in the upper left hand corner, and the well-known 13 red-and-white stripes represent the 13 colonies.

When the annual Prelude to Independence observance opened on May 15, a Continental flag was raised over the Capitol, and others were spaced out along the main street in memory of the Virginia patriots' action in 1776. The Continentals fly each day during the six-week period with the exception of May 30 (Memorial day), June 14 (Flag day) and July 4 (Independence day), when the stars and stripes hold forth.

On July 5, the British Great Union flag will return to the cupola, and the Continentals will be put away until next May 15.

Wisconsin's Vacation Areas Of Lakes, Streams, Woods

Wisconsin's popular summer vacation area, featuring 8676 lakes, 10,000 miles of streams, 200 golf courses, is well supplied with accommodations ranging from the most luxurious resorts to ideal campsites.

All types of accommodations, at all prices, are available in all sections of the state—the north woods (north central Wisconsin) with one of the highest concentration of lakes in the world, the Indian Head country in northwestern Wisconsin, the Lake Michigan shore topped by Door county with its quiet colonies, the rolling southwestern section of the state with historic Prairie du Chien, and the lakeland region of southern Wisconsin.

The Indian Head country, so named because of the Indian profile the area makes on a map, comprises 15 counties north and west of Eau Claire.

Wisconsin resorts have no standard pattern of charges, but in general, rates are based on one of three arrangements—lodging and meals in one price by the day or week (American plan); the housekeeping type of accommodations, which includes cooking and refrigeration equipment and sometimes linens, or a combination of the two systems, in which housekeeping cottages are available, but a central lodge also provides meals.

The term "modern" usually means complete bathrooms with tub or shower and hot and cold running water, gas or electrical refrigeration, and gas for cooking. "Semi-modern" usually signifies a cabin with running cold water.

There has been no indication of hikes in rates, even by the luxury resorts. As usual, the cabin or hotel price will average between $45 and $65 a person a week, with a wide variety of facilities available on both sides of that range.

A helpful vacation planning kit is available to those contemplating a trip to the Badger state. Included are a colorful brochure, an official highway map, a list of regional resort secretaries, and a copy of the 1956 fishing regulations. The kit may be obtained without charge upon request to Recreational Section, Wisconsin Conservation Dept., State Office Bldg., Madison 1, Wis.

CELEBRATED SHRINE

The celebrated shrine and grotto at Dickeyville, Wisc., which attract thousands of visitors each year, were built between 1920 and 1930 by Father Mathias Wernerus.

The structures are composed of thousands of bits of broken glass and china, colored pebbles, turned rockball, petrified wood, shells and other bright objects from all over the world.

Canoeing in Minnesota's Forests

The canoe country in Minnesota's Superior National Forest was set aside by presidential edict to be preserved as the original America. The lakes and rivers in the area afford fine fishing, and some wonder of nature awaits the canoeist around every bend.

MINNESOTA SCENERY TRULY MAGNIFICENT

FOR lovely scenery, few areas in Minnesota can surpass the St. Croix river valley, particularly the superb stretch along State Highway 95 between Stillwater and Taylors Falls. Along this 30 mile length is concentrated a rich variety of natural beauty and of exciting diversions for the fisherman and boating enthusiast, the motorist and the hiker.

These outstanding features, combined with its ready accessibility to the Twin Cities and its points of historical interest, have long kept it one of the most popular recreation places both for the Minnesota resident and the out-of-state tourist. In fact, in the 19th century it lured such distinguished visitors as Ulysses S. Grant and John Jacob Astor.

Interstate Park, a joint enterprise of Minnesota and Wisconsin, contains some of the most superb scenery along this "Rhine of America." Here in the "Dalles of the St. Croix," one may gaze downward into a gorge from the tops of pine-clad palisades which in some places tower as much as 200 feet above a stream white with rapids. Fascinating geologic formations include the largest pot holes in the world, one of them 60 feet deep, ground out after the "Ice Age" by the whirling motion of water and rocks.

Here, too, is one of the historic battle grounds of the Chippewa and Sioux Indians. From the rocky heights the Chippewa are said to have rolled down showers of boulders upon their enemies. Peaceful and lovely today, this part of the St. Croix was known to the Indians as the "Valley of Bones."

Farther south the river broadens, is bordered by rolling hills, often forested, and contains numerous islands and inlets to delight the canoeist drifting toward Stillwater. The river is noted for its abundance of small-mouth bass.

Here is truly a paradise for the fisherman, as he glides past magnificent scenery, his journey made all the more enjoyable by the many surprises that challenge his skill at rod and reel. Everywhere natural camp sites tempt him to linger a while, and to enjoy the flavor of a morning catch fried in the open air over a wood fire. The motorist also may want a chance at these out-of-door delights at any one of innumerable points of access to the river.

However one travels, by automobile, boat, or afoot, the William O'Brien State Park is a welcome stopping place. It introduces the vacationer to another of the historical attractions of the St. Croix, for its 180 acres have been set aside to commemorate the early logging days on the river.

Still farther downstream is Marine-on-St. Croix. Oldest civilian settlement in the state, it is today a quiet village but was once bustling with sawmill activity. Last major stop on this scenic stretch is Stillwater. Now a thriving modern community, it is located three miles from the historic log boom site of the St. Croix. More logs have floated past this point than past any other in the nation. In a 50-year period more than 2,225,000 carloads of logs were cut here, rafted and sent downstream.

By highway or by canoe, this 30-mile stretch of the St. Croix between Stillwater and Taylor's Falls offers one of the most enjoyable trips in Minnesota and is justly famed for its amazing variety of attractions.

SUGAR LOAF TRIP A REAL THRILL FOR RIO VISITORS

For about 50 cents a round trip, the visitor to Rio de Janeiro can have a trip that is a real thrill. For this modest fee he can ride the 16-passenger aerial railway which leaves every half hour from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. for Sugar Loaf mountain.

The engineer sits on top of the car, always checking every inch of the big double cable. First stop is Morro da Urca (660 feet) where passengers climb out for refreshments and picture taking of the breath-taking view below.

Boarding a second car, they then swing on up higher and higher until it seems they will run right into the rocky cliffs—and then suddenly the engineer is helping them out on the landing at Sugar Loaf.

On top is the world's highest television station. All materials for the station, the tiny restaurant and other construction were brought up in an auxiliary cargo car which swings back and forth on a separate cable. There is no other transportation to the top except by climbing the sheer walls, which takes a minimum of three and a half hours for the most experienced mountain climbers.

Sugar Loaf was so named because in the olden days when Brazil was part of the Portuguese empire, sugar was sold in loaves shaped very much like the big rocky peak that has become the symbol of Rio, according to Eastern Air Lines which has an interchange agreement with Braniff Airways.

MINNEAPOLIS AQUATENNIAL SCHEDULED FOR JULY 20-29

The 1956 Minneapolis Aquatennial, scheduled for July 20-29 during this city's Centennial year, will attract an estimated 1,000,000 persons with 100,000 from out-of-state areas.

The seventeenth annual edition of the show will feature 120 events during the 10-day period, 115 of which are free.

The top paid attractions will include two parades, a Grand Day parade and a torchlight parade scheduled respectively July 21 and 25; the WCCO Aquatennial radio show July 21 featuring name entertainers; the Aqua Follies July 17-28, a top aquatic attraction featuring precision swimming, Olympic diving, comic diving and a stage show; and the aquatennial Star Night Coronation, July 27, an out-of-door program climaxed by the crowning of the Queen of the Lakes.

Among the 115 free attractions will be a Children's Day program, sports of all kinds, water skiing championships, 10 top-grade music contests and a myriad of spectator events.

MERAMEC CAVERNS HAVE NATURE'S AIR CONDITIONING

Something old and something new have been combined at Meramec Caverns, Stanton, Mo. The new restaurant at the 100,000,000-year-old cave will be air conditioned.

But the cooling system isn't as new as one might assume, because nature will do the air conditioning. The restaurant has been built against the cave entrance to take advantage of the cool air currents coming out of the cave.

Since the cave maintains a constant 63-degree temperature, an arrangement of a series of doors and windows will capture the coolness. Each door will have the same square feet of space as each window. The doors are from the cave, the windows are outside the restaurant. The temperature can be adjusted easily by the simple process of opening the necessary number of doors and windows.

10,000 Lakes.

Game Department officials estimate there are 10,000 lakes in Washington state. Many of these wilderness lakes are so remote that as yet they are unnamed.

HINTS FOR BETTER VACATION PICTURES

Vacation and travel pictures are important to all of us because they capture memories of good times and let us relive our trip over and over again.

Because they are so important, they are worth taking well. So, follow these ten hints for getting better vacation pictures:

1. Check Your Camera: Before you leave on your vacation, have your photo supply dealer check your camera to make sure it's working properly. If you have a new camera, test it before you go by taking a couple of rolls of film and having them processed.

2. Keep Your Camera Clean: Put it in a field case if possible to protect it from dust, moisture or hard knocks. Keep the lens of the camera clean by dusting it with a soft handkerchief or better yet with lens tissue.

3. Keep Camera In a Cool Place: Do not put it in the glove compartment of your car and do not leave it too long in direct sunlight. Excessive heat may damage the emulsion on your film.

4. Hold Camera Steady: Moving or wiggling a camera spoils more pictures than any other cause. Squeeze the shutter release. A sudden jab at the release will move your camera and spoil the picture. Use a tripod or other firm base for all exposures longer than 1-25th of a second.

5. Focus Properly: Concentrate on one subject at a time and make it fill the camera viewfinder. With a fixed-focus camera, snap moving objects only when they are moving directly toward or away from you.

8. Flash: Keep within 12 feet of your subject when using flash attachments indoors or at night. If your camera is loaded with daylight-type color film, and you are taking pictures indoors, use a blue flash bulb.

9. Close-Ups: On a fixed-focus camera, you must use a close-up attachment for any subject closer than six feet.

10. Take More Than One: Do not be shy about taking a subject from two or three different angles. It gives you added assurance that you have gotten the picture you wanted to tell the story of your vacation this year and to look over in future years.

Florida Golf Tournament.

Plantation Golf Club at Fort Lauderdale will be the scene of the Florida state open tournament June 23-26.

Palms Are Plants.

Palms, of which many varieties grow in Miami Beach, technically are not trees, although generally called that. Scientifically they are "plants."

Missourians Find Vacation Fun in Own Home State

Choice of Things to See and Do; Historic or Scenic Spots, Sports or Relaxation.

ST. LOUISANS seeking summer traveling fun on a limited budget this year need not travel far to find vacation adventure for the whole family in their own home state. Missouri offers a wide variety of things to do and places to see and, for the St. Louisan, many of them are barely a weekend's travel away.

From north to south one may choose the historic or the scenic, rest and relaxation, fishing and boating, and all with accompanying accommodations to suit the taste and fine highways on which to travel.

A drive north from St. Louis, on U.S. Highway 61 to Hannibal and return on Missouri Route 79, makes a weekend trip which will take in the historic as well as scenic. At Hannibal, the boyhood home of Mark Twain, are the Mark Twain Museum and Mark Twain Cave where the visitor can step back into a bygone era and live for a moment the Tom Sawyer-Huck Finn life on the Mississippi, as Samuel Clemens lived it and as Mark Twain wrote it.

Homeward bound, the journey is made complete by a visit to Clarksville's bluffs, highest on the Mississippi, which afford a view of the splendor of the mighty river for miles in both directions. The lookout tower is built atop an ancient Indian mound.

Peace in Arcadia Valley.

A weekend trip south along Missouri Route 21 will take the St. Louisan to the beautiful Arcadia Valley area, Lake Killarney, Taum Sauk Mountain, Graniteville and Ironton.

The vacationer escaping the clamor of the city will find haven in the cool and quiet solitude that makes the Arcadia Valley unique. There, amid serene, green hills, the pulse of life slows down and relaxing comes easy with a lazy boat outing or fishing on Lake Killarney.

The visitor to Graniteville will discover early the obvious origin of the town's name. Deep red granite boulders dot the roadside, homes are of granite—granite seems to be part of everything. Nearby, giant granite boulders known as Elephant Rocks stand as nature's immovable, silent sentries, guarding their granite ridges. The boulders are striking both in their immensity and odd forms.

Taum Sauk Mountain.

Taum Sauk Mountain is a scenic treat often by-passed by the hurried traveler. "Old Taum" is the highest point in Missouri, rising some 1772 feet. This spot now is easily accessible by the auto-traveling public. A new road leads to a picnic ground and lookout tower on the summit.

Population of the valley is centered in the towns of Arcadia, Pilot Knob and Ironton. The area is rich in historical background. Ulysses S. Grant was commissioned a brigadier general at Ironton. Nearby, at Pilot Knob, are the battle-scarred and time-worn earthworks of Fort Davidson, just off Route 21. A relatively small Union force held off for three days nearly 20,000 Confederates who were intent on capturing St. Louis.

Possibly the most popular spot for week-ending St. Louisans will be the nationally famous Lake of the Ozarks area, the resort-fishing-swimming center of Missouri. Encompassed in the 1372 miles of the lake's shoreline and adjacent area are an endless variety of resort and camping facilities. And the 129 miles of the lake itself provide a year-round fishing attraction. A special attraction next month is the J-Bar-H Rodeo at Camdenton, second largest in the nation in attendance (July 10-15).

Vacationing and traveling in Missouri is fun. This is borne out by the fact that it is one of Missouri's fastest growing industries. Traveling, however, should be enjoyed in safety. Remember to drive carefully; Missouri is a good place to live.

Albuquerque, the largest population center in New Mexico, celebrates its 250th birthday this summer. Plans are complete for an 11-day observance July 4-14 including parades, city-wide decorations, a music festival, and a nightly pageant-spectacle called "Enchantorama" with a cast of 2000 which will depict the story of Albuquerque.

Founded in 1706, Albuquerque offers a quaint mixture—a drowsing past, mingling with the bustle and bright lights of a modern city. The tone of New Albuquerque is youthful and enterprising, with university students, soldiers and airmen from nearby Sandia Special Weapons Base and Kirtland Air Force Base, scientists, government workers, health seekers, and retired executives filling the busy downtown streets.

Cowpunchers, Spanish-Americans, and bright-blanketed Indians are there, too, along with the tourists who stop off to see this western crossroads city.

In an 18th century tavern, you'll order pecan waffles from an old Virginia recipe . . . "served up new and hot!" And you'll see "The Common Glory," drama of the Revolution, staged under the stars in Williamsburg's lakeside amphitheatre.

TENNESSEE LAKES, MOUNTAINS LURE SUMMER VISITORS

The mountains, lakes, forests and rivers of Tennessee provide unexcelled fishing, boating, hunting, camping and other recreational activities that delight tourists. These attractions, plus good hotels, tourist courts and highways, account for the fact that more than 7,000,000 tourists visited the state in 1955.

There is a certain attraction about Tennessee that causes visitors to linger and enjoy the colorful scenes of the Old South that blend harmoniously with the pulsing tempo of the modern age.

One of the main tourist attractions, of course, is the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in the eastern section. There visitors sense a feeling of security as something old and precious, forgotten in the urgent tempo of modern life, is borne in upon them.

Yet the Smokies are modern, too, in that visitors find first-class cabins and hotel accommodations and perfect highways so well graded that one may climb more than 6000 feet without changing gears.

It is on the "Roof of America," embracing an area 54 miles long and 19 miles wide, that tourists see 29 parks more than a mile high and 16 more than 6000 feet in altitude. On their slopes are vast forests containing 152 kinds of trees, as compared with 85 in all Europe, and more than 4000 different types of plant life—the greatest variety found in any one area in the temperate zone. Within the 440,000 acres of the park are 600 miles of clear, swift trout streams.

In addition, Tennessee has lakes with a ragged, scenic shoreline of 10,000 miles and 30,000 miles of streams and rivers that make fishing a major sport. The state ranks fourth in the number of fishing licenses sold to out-of-state sportsmen, exceeded only by Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Historical Missouri.

Missouri's historical points of interest are as varied as its sports, or its land, or its lakes and streams. They include old homes, sites of single incidents of importance in our nation's development, and monuments and historical markers spread throughout the state.

Float Trip Time in Ozarks

What better way to spend vacation days than float fishing on one of the streams in the Missouri Ozarks?

OLDEST PARK IN ARKANSAS, MODEL FARM ATOP MOUNTAIN

The oldest park in Arkansas and one of the nation's most fabulous farms are located atop colorful Petit Jean mountain, and the two combined attract over 400,000 visitors annually.

The agricultural enterprise is Winrock Farm, a $2,000,000 project atop Petit Jean Mountain which was started only three years ago but has attracted national attention.

The idea for the cattle breeding farm was born during World War II when Winthrop Rockefeller heard an army friend speak of the unspoiled beauty of Petit Jean Mountain and its 1000 foot mesa.

Now nearly 20 buildings, most of them low rambling ranch-type structures, give the appearance of having been there for years. Carpet-like lawns extend from the buildings, and are outlined with carefully selected rocks and boulders. Fire plugs dot the landscape, and there is a modern pump truck and fire house.

Rockefeller, in a desire to share with the public, has established a recreation area including a boathouse and lake, which are used to "accommodate FFA, 4-H, and other clubs who wish to benefit from the proper farming practices being carried out at the breeding farm."

Mark Twain's Birthplace.

It was in Florida, Mo., that Mark Twain was born Nov. 30, 1835. The site is preserved by the Mark Twain Memorial Park Association and is maintained as a museum.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY YEAR AT LAKE OF THE OZARKS

The summer vacation season is now in full swing at the Lake of the Ozarks area, which is celebrating its silver anniversary this year with a series of fishing derbies, festivals, firework displays and other entertainment.

The Lake of the Ozarks Association, Inc., has prepared a 48-page map and guide which may be obtained without charge upon request to the association, Box 2, Lake Ozark, Mo.

SCENERY, CULTURE IN NEW ENGLAND

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut—these are New England, and all through the calendar and around the clock, New England offers the vacationer playgrounds, sports and activities to appeal to varied tastes.

If you like your vacation rugged, New England offers timbered mountains to climb, along more than 5000 miles of mountain trails. You can travel the famous long trail through the Green Mountains of Vermont, enjoy a lofty view from one of Maine's 3000 foot peaks, roam the Appalachian Trail through Connecticut and Massachusetts, make your way over the well marked trails of the White Mountains of New Hampshire or look upon the famous "Notches" of Pinkam, Crawford and Franconia in the presidential range.

To the fisherman, New England beckons with wilderness rivers, spruce fringed lakes and the wide salty sea. Here is fine fresh water fishing, and salt water fishing can be arranged at almost any fishing village or port along the coast.

With their quaint old fishing towns, the ever changing colors of the countryside and famous patriotic shrines, the New England states hold a full share of sight-seeing interest throughout the year, according to Greyhound Lines.

Here you stand and picture the gallant defense of Bunker Hill and seem to catch the echo of thundering hoofs as you follow the route of Paul Revere.

Add to all of these natural attractions the many cultural events so typical of New England, and it is easy to understand why this section of the country is the vacation goal of several million Americans every year.

VIRGINIA'S SUMMER PLANS INCLUDE 35 SPECIAL EVENTS

Virginia has planned a full program of special events to supplement visits to the Old Dominion's famous historic shrines, scenic and and natural wonders, and active sports at recreational attractions.

Virginia Beach is going "all out," with a series of 35 events arranged especially in connection with the resort's observance of its Golden Jubilee.

Colonial Beach, on the broad Potomac, will hold its annual Potomac River Festival June 15-17. Performances of "The Common Glory" will be held June 23-Sept. 2 in Williamsburg. "The Eleventh Hour," highlighting events in the life of Woodrow Wilson, will be staged July 9-21 at Staunton, birthplace of the former President. The production is one of a series of events in a year-long observance of the centennial of Wilson's birth.

Other events include the annual pony penning on Chincoteague Island, July 26; the Virginia Highland Festival of the Arts at Abingdon, Aug. 1-15; the annual Jousting Tournament at Natural Chimneys, Mount Solon, Aug. 18; the Galax County Golden Anniversary Jubilee Aug. 5-11.

The twin cities of Bristol, Virginia and Bristol, Tenn. are observing the centennial of their founding with a year-round program, with many events scheduled for the summer months.

NEW OHIO RIVER BRIDGE OPENED AT SHAWNEETOWN

The new Ohio river toll bridge connecting Union County, Kentucky, and Shawneetown, Illinois, was opened to the public Friday.

The bridge is located at mile 858 in the Ohio river, and is the only bridge between Henderson, Kentucky and Paducah, a distance of about 140 river miles. It replaces the Shawneetown toll ferry which operated at a nearby site for many years. High water in the Ohio made the ferry crossing hazardous at times and caused shut-downs in operation.

Kentucky Routes 56 and 85 give access to the Kentucky side of the bridge connecting with U.S. 60 and U.S. 641 at Morganfield and Sturgis. Illinois Route 13 joins the bridge with Illinois Route 1 and U.S. 45.

The new bridge is a steel structure consisting of two main river spans each 825 feet long and 14 approach spans. The total length of the structure is 3200 feet; roadway is 24 feet clear width with an additional two-foot safety walk on each side.

Who'll win Rocky's heavyweight title?

FLOYD PATTERSON — TOMMY "HURRICANE" JACKSON

W. J. McGOOGAN

Who'll be the next world's heavyweight boxing champion now that Rocky Marciano has retired? That's the "big" question among fight fans these days. Many experts believe that Rocky's eventual successor might well be the winner of Friday night's battle between Floyd Patterson and Tommy "Hurricane" Jackson at New York's Madison Square Garden. This is an important elimination fight because the winner probably will meet Archie Moore in September for the title. Because Friday's scheduled 12-rounder has such an important bearing on the heavyweight title picture, Post-Dispatch sports writer W. J. McGoogan will be at ringside to give readers an on-the-scene account. Watch for McGoogan's first-hand report of the Patterson-Jackson fight

Both are fighting hard to win California's 68 convention votes.

Off to a running start as the "people's candidate" for Democratic presidential nominee with his victories in New Hampshire and Minnesota, Senator Estes Kefauver has had rough going recently. He's suffered five straight defeats in contested primaries with Adlai Stevenson, the latest in Florida. Next Tuesday's primary in California will give the winner all of that state's 68 votes and a definite edge at the Democratic national convention. Watch for up-to-the-minute coverage of the crucial California primary.

MOUNTAIN FLOWERS IN GREAT SMOKIES

Purple rhododendron, mountain laurel and flame azalea are bringing eastern America's highest-altitude wildflower show to the peak of its beauty in the Great Smoky and Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina.

These flowers—"big three" of blossom time in the Southern Appalachians — can be seen along fine highways throughout North Carolina's mountain vacationlands. Because they grow on the floors of mountain valleys and gorges as well as on the slopes and crests of mile-high mountains, their blooming seasons vary sharply according to altitude and continue until late June. It is not unusual to see all three in the same locality, but some sections have become famous because of the predominance of one species.

Two of the largest natural gardens of purple (Catawba) rhododendron in the world are in North Carolina. One is at Craggy Gardens, directly on the Blue Ridge Parkway near Asheville, and the other is on 6286-foot Roan Mountain in Pisgah National Forest. Peak bloom at Craggy and the Roan occurs shortly after mid-June.

The summit of Roan Mountain, newly accessible by paved highway and U.S. Forest Service Road, is the setting for the annual Roan Mountain Rhododendron Festival to be held June 23-24 this year. A highlight of the festival is the crowning of rhododendron queens from North Carolina and Tennessee, with both states participating in the festival program held on the state line. Highways 26 and 261 connect Roan Mountain to the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Mountain laurel and flame azalea started blooming in May throughout western North Carolina at elevations of around 3000 feet, and are spreading to higher slopes. Favorite routes for viewing these flowers as well as rhododendron are the Blue Ridge Parkway, U.S. 441 through the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, and U.S. 64 through the Waterfall country and Nantahala National Forest. One of the larger concentrations of laurel is in the Pink Beds Recreational Area in Pisgah National Forest near Brevard, where the blooming season occurs during the first two weeks of June.

A new vantage point for viewing the mountain flower parade this year is a recently completed spur of the Blue Ridge Parkway from Wagon Road Gap on U.S. 276 to Beech Gap in the remote Devil's Courthouse country. Flame azalea is abundant on this route, and at Mile-High Overlook, where another spur of the Parkway meets the Great Smokies west of Asheville. Wayah Bald, in Nantahala Forest near Franklin, is also noted for flame azalea.

Flame azalea, laurel and rhododendron border the Blue Ridge Parkway between the Virginia line and Asheville, particularly in the vicinity of Doughton Park, Linville, Blowing Rock, Grandfather Mountain and Mount Mitchell. Purple rhododendron grows profusely on Mount Mitchell, highest peak in eastern America, and towering Grandfather Mountain, in the Blue Ridge. Both mountains are accessible from the Parkway by automobile.

NOVA SCOTIA ART FESTIVAL SET FOR AUG. 13-14

The picturesque little town of Tatamagouche will be the scene of Nova Scotia's first Arts Festival Aug. 13-14.

In addition to presenting the music, drama, arts and crafts of the province, the Arts Festival will be a new event for Nova Scotia's summer visitors, many of whom are attracted by the special appeal the province has for artists.

Tourist attractions in Tatamagouche, overlooking Northumberland strait, are being expanded to accommodate an influx of visitors for the festival. Special tours and recreational projects are being planned to entertain visitors.

Tatamagouche was settled by the French early in the 1700s. The ruins of old Ford Francklyn, built in 1768, can still be seen, as well as the old wells, a mill dam, dykes and a cemetery used by the Acadians.

There are fine bathing beaches along the Tatamagouche shore, where the swimming is excellent. Tatamagouche is on Route 6, "The Sunrise Trail," about 56 miles from the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia border.

NATIONAL CIVILIAN DEFENSE HEADQUARTERS DAILY TOURS

Daily tours for vacation visitors to West Michigan will be inaugurated July 2 at the national headquarters of the civilian defense administration at Battle Creek, Mich., it has been announced by Val Peterson, civilian defense administrator.

The tours, under direction of trained personnel, are aimed at acquainting as many persons as possible with plans for protection of the citizens in both peacetime and war by permitting visitors to see the vast operation in action, Administrator Peterson stated.

ENGINEERING MIRACLE

When completed in 1957 the Mackinac Straits Bridge will be the first motoring link between Michigan's upper and lower peninsulas.

The construction site is currently one of the nation's top travel attractions. Tourists may view construction operations from land or from special excursion boats.

U.S. TROOPS KEEP CAREFUL VIGIL AT CZECH FRONTIER

Plowed 'No-Man's Land' and High Voltage Wires Keep Reds From Fleeing.

ON THE WEST GERMAN-CZECH BORDER, June 2 (AP) —Two grim-faced United States soldiers, standing concealed in a clump of trees on a wind-swept Bavarian hill, peer through binoculars at Communist Czechoslovakia across the valley.

From their border observation post the soldiers command a sweeping—and revealing—view of the rolling countryside spreading out before them.

To the unaided eye the scene looks normal and serene—green meadows, a rippling stream, woods and a farm house.

But a look through glasses is revealing.

"See the barbed wire fence," says one of the soldiers, Cpl. Anthony Davis, of Lexington, Va., "It looks much like an ordinary fence. But it's charged with high voltage electricity. Touch it and you're dead."

There is a plowed field running parallel to the fence. But it is never sowed with seed. It is a no-man's land. Intelligence officers say the fence and cleared strip run entirely around Czechoslovakia, even where it borders other Soviet satellite countries.

Guards on Tower.

"See, there in the woods on the left," Davis says. "Look closely. See the watch tower rising out of the trees? See those two men standing on top of the tower? They are Czech border guards."

The two Czechs stroll slowly around the tiny rectangular platform. One stops, leans on the railing and looks out over the woods. He straightens up. Both resume walking. Once in a while one of them lifts his binoculars and looks in our direction.

"They keep a close watch on us, too," Davis says. "But they seem more interested in keeping their own people from trying to escape. The Czech guards shoot first and ask questions later."

To the right of the tower in an open field stands a two-story farm building. It looks like a run-down resort hotel. But it is actually a barracks for Czech border guards.

Two men emerge from the building. One is carrying a submachine gun.

Scribbles Report.

"We must report that," Davis says. He scribbles a note on a writing pad, rips out the page and hands it to another soldier who ducks down into a concrete bunker.

The message, reporting latest movements of Red troops across the border, is handed to a soldier sitting in a corner with a portable radio resting between his legs. He holds a hand microphone to his lips. Speaking slowly and distinctly, he transmits the message:

"Two Czech border police left the barracks at B—at 1203. One carried a submachine gun. They remained in view five minutes before disappearing into the woods."

Conceivably, the first signs of preparations for an attack could be spotted by a soldier in any one of these observation posts.

The United States Army is responsible for guarding a twisting, 435-mile frontier that extends from just east of Kassel on the north to as far south as near Passau on the south.

The upper half faces East Germany, the lower Czechoslovakia.

The British are responsible for guarding the border north of Kassel to the Baltic sea.

No Tension Now.

"Right now," says Maj. George D. Styer of Coronado, Calif., "there is no tension along the border. But that doesn't mean we drop our guard for a second."

Maj. Styer, a tall, handsome officer with close-cropped dark hair, is commander of the Third Battalion of the Third Armored Cavalry, one of three regiments assigned to the border.

"Our primary mission," he says "is to keep a constant watch along the border. We have tanks to back us up. Our observers keep a sharp lookout. Jeeps, equipped with machine guns and radios, patrol the border constantly. When the weather is good, our planes are in the air."

United States patrols are under orders to resist arrest. If fired upon, they are to fire back. If captured they are required to give only their names, ranks and serial numbers.

"But we don't expect to be caught napping," says Maj. Styer.

West of the frontier are 250,000 United States troops ready to go into battle in event of an attack. They are equipped with atomic guns, guided missiles and rockets.

Their tanks and vehicles are ready. Ammunition racks are full. Weapons are cleaned. Field packs are neatly rolled.

"If the Communists start anything we here on the border want to be the first to know," Styer says.

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William Kuba, 3306 Nebraska avenue, will observe their fiftieth wedding anniversary Saturday with open house at their home for friends and members of their family.

Kuba, 74 years old, is a retired baker. Mrs. Kuba is 77. They have two daughters, four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

BALEARIC ISLES AGAIN VITAL AS A DEFENSE BASE

U.S. Helping Improve Port Mahon—Mallorca to Have Radar Installation.

By ANSEL E. TALBERT
The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

PALMA DE MALLORCA, June 2—Spain's Balearic Islands—the "golden islands" of ancient Carthage located from 50 to 190 miles off the Spanish coast southeast of Barcelona—are being thrust back into strategic importance.

The current Mediterranean and Middle Eastern situation is directly responsible. Recent visitors to the Balearics include Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, Rear Adm. Truman Hedding, his chief of staff, Maj. Gen. August W. Kissner, chief of the United States military and air mission to Spain, and the United States' diplomatic representative in Madrid, Ambassador John Lodge.

Naval strategists of past centuries called the Balearics a vital key to any Mediterranean conflict. In the days of the Barbary pirates, the United States Navy's crack Mediterranean squadron and many famous warships including "Old Ironsides" used to winter there with Spain's consent. Today Port Mahon, the chief port of the island of Minorca, once the finest harbor of the entire Mediterranean area from a strategic standpoint, is being improved considerably with United States aid.

Once a Staging Point.

The port, founded by Carthaginians, who called it Portus Magonis after Hannibal's brother Mago, once served as a staging point for African war elephants in Hannibal's campaigns in Italy and Spain against the Romans. Mallorca, with Carthage also held, is soon to have important radar installations closing a gap in Europe's early air raid warning system—scheduled for immediate improvement and closer integration through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, of which Spain is not a member.

United States global strategy currently envisions that its fast Navy aircraft carriers, missile-launching cruisers and submarines, including those powered by nuclear energy, must count on staying in the Mediterranean under any eventuality.

Otherwise, in case of either a "pocket war" in the Mediterranean or an all-out global conflict, Greece, Turkey and Italy would certainly go down the drain for lack of oil as well as other supplies and reinforcements normally coming into their ports along the shipping lanes of the great 2400-mile-long inland sea.

More Bases Desired.

Chiefs of the United States Department of Defense have made no secret that they are considering negotiations for more strategic air and naval bases in Spain—particularly on the Atlantic side of the Spanish peninsula and in the Mediterranean—now that "phase one" of base construction is well under way.

The initial phase calls for four strategic air bases and a naval base at Rota in southwestern Spain, all linked by a 670-mile-long pipeline feeding aviation gasoline, oil and lubrication to vast reservoirs at each base. These all will be completed by 1958. They will allow the United States to back up the continental defense forces of NATO with tremendously increased strategic air and sea power capabilities.

The new Spanish bases are only one and one-half hours by jet bomber from the Rhine and about six hours from the Kremlin. Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles already has indicated that some American air strategists question whether four bases are enough to guarantee flexibility and mobility of operations and revealed that the question of more now "is being weighed."

Contradiction for Propaganda.

Soviet propagandists are trying hard to convince the French, the Italians and particularly the West Germans that the building of strategic air bases in Spain means that the United States favors a "peripheral strategy" in Europe with a stand at the Pyrenees rather than on the Rhine. The projected air defense system for Western Europe based on radar and anti-aircraft guided missiles, as well as jet interceptors, the new West German army and America's Mediterranean strategy give the lie to this.

The total cost to the United States of all its base construction in Spain, including the pipeline and naval base improvements in the Balearics, is something over $365,000,000. Another $350,000,000 worth of equipment is being supplied to the Spanish Army, Navy and Air Force for modernization and about $115,000,000 in additional economic aid. This compares roughly with the total aid given to "Titoist" Communist Yugoslavia and "neutralist" India—and most United States military men believe it to be a much better bargain.

OIL ROYALTIES SPUR ARABIAN TRADE IN SLAVES

By MILT FREUDENHEIM
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1956.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., June 2—Every now and then a tear is shed in the exquisite meeting halls and cocktail lounges at U.N. headquarters for the uncounted unfortunates sold into slavery between colonial West Africa and the harems of Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

Girls from the French Cameroons sign up for pilgrimages to Mecca which wind up on the auction block where they bring from $1200 to $2000, depending on age and model.

Prices are quoted in British pounds, readily converted from American oil royalty dollars that go for palaces and pretty playthings on the Arabian peninsula.

"The traffic in human beings has again become active," Lord Winster, president of the British Anti-Slavery Society, reported a few weeks ago.

Oil Stimulates Traffic.

"In fact it has become stimulated because, thanks to the oil royalties, money has been pouring into Arabia, with the result that unheard of prices are being paid today for slaves."

The U.N. Economic and Social Council has called a meeting of nations for late summer in Geneva to draft a supplementary convention on the abolition of slavery.

The Geneva parley is a little unnecessary, in the view of the United States which has announced it will not attend.

The United States is one of 46 countries which ratified a 1926 convention which outlaws slavery.

Also, it is presently a tenet of United States foreign policy that it avoid signing U.N.-type conventions against slavery or other forms of sin for fear of stirring up the Bricker Amendment controversy in Congress.

Proposed Draft.

Some 85 nations, members of the U.N. and its affiliates, will be invited to the Geneva conference. About 40 are expected to attend, with the slaveholding states absent.

A proposed draft for the new convention would remind the world "that slavery, the slave trade and institutions and practices similar to slavery have not yet been eliminated in all parts of the world."

It would allow seizure of vessels suspected of carrying slaves on the seas in the Arabian peninsula area.

It would also outlaw debt bondage, serfdom and the sale of prospective brides by their families.

Whichever countries care to sign the document drafted at Geneva will then be bound by it. Those that don't come to the meeting and don't sign will remain beyond its reach.

Fresh Talking Material.

However, the new convention will make fresh talking material for the anti-slavery movement, a British and French outfit largely responsible for reducing the slave trade to present levels.

C. W. W. Greenidge, U.N. representative of the society, testified here last month on a French official report of slave routes from Timbuctoo to Jidda and Mecca.

"The French ambassador in Saudi Arabia informed his government that he had made inquiry in the Senegalese colony at Jidda and was satisfied with the authenticity of the information," Greenidge said.

The Ambassador had reported "that merchants in Jidda and Mecca send emissaries of Senegalese origin, who are now naturalized as Saudi Arabians into the villages of the French Sudan, the High Volta or the Niger province and particularly to Timbuctoo.

"These emissaries pretend to be Moslem missionaries and they entice their compatriots to accompany them on a pilgrimage to Mecca.

"A number of Africans fall into this trap and are taken to Saudi Arabia. There they are sold into slavery. He estimated that a few hundred a year are so sold."

Greenidge's speech brought a reply from Jamil M. Baroody of Saudi Arabia: "To my knowledge, slave trade has been abolished and my government enforces the laws against it."

If there is any slaving, it is done "clandestinely by bands of gangsters," Baroody added.

Expert observers noted he did not deny the existence of a slave trade and made no comment on the existence of slavery itself in Saudi Arabia.

MOBILE LIBRARY ISSUES 44,774 BOOKS IN 8 MONTHS

Books issued by the University City Public Library's mobile unit in the eight months that ended April 30 totaled 44,774, it was reported yesterday byMiss Suzanne Stribling, trailer librarian.

This figure compares with 55,390 books issued in the entire preceding year, the unit's first year of operation. The service has begun to bring books nearer to those living in the western and northwestern sections of University City, remote from the main library building.

The bookmobile, operating on a two-week schedule, makes 15 stops, most of them at elementary schools. Recent seasonal trends among adults have been toward books on exercise and diet. Best sells in fiction are popular here, but how-to books have caused a decline in the reading of such staples as mysteries, westerns and science fiction, Miss Stribling reported.

Rugged Training Is Marine Corps Method of Making Fighting Men

By ANTHONY LEVIERO

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

PARRISS ISLAND, S. C., June 2—What makes a first-class fighting man? The Marine Corps believes it has a sound formula for molding warriors, proved by the record of battles from the Halls of Montezuma to those of the atomic age.

The corps's training practices have aroused public concern, however, as a result of the tragic drowning of six recruits in a night march into a swampy stream here.

It is a generally accepted fact that the Marine Corps has a tougher, more rugged training program than the other services. When you go by the rear of a barracks and find a recruit platoon engaged in close-order drill in the dark after dinner, you can well believe the Marines get in more training in less time than the other services.

When a Marine recruit platoon is on the way to "chow" it does not merely march. The D. I. (drill instructor) puts the outfit of about 75 young men through various close-order maneuvers. The kids seem to be going along like West Pointers, but the D. I. discovers some flaw. He stops the unit and "chews out" the guilty man. The "chewing out" seems almost literal when you see him barking an inch away from the lobe of a scared rookie's ear.

What Makes a Marine.

In considering what makes a Marine, three factors require examination. First is the boy himself, for the most part an "eager beaver" who wants to be as good as the "old man," or his big brother or his uncle who fought at Iwo Jima or the Yalu.

Next is the rigorous curriculum that makes men out of boys. Third is the caliber of the D. I., the sergeant with the combat ribbons on his chest. For 10 critical weeks he has complete charge of the boys who almost break their mothers' hearts by insisting on joining the corps that is usually frist to fight.

Immaturity sticks out all over a platoon of youths who have been here only about two weeks. Most of them are 17 or 18 years old. A great many of them seem short, as if they had not attained full growth yet and, indeed, one could swear that some must have told a little white lie about their age. Their fatigues do not fit them too well because the skinny fellows haven't put on the muscle yet and the plump ones haven't melted off the excess.

These young men have a hard time the first two or three weeks adjusting to iron routine and physical activity. Some just can't make the grade. The D. I.s have a bad time, too, and as a matter of fact both the rookies and the instructors are carefully screened by psychiatrists before they get into the program. This is no place for misfits because they do you no good on a battlefield.

A seasoned D. I. says any sizable recruit group is likely to contain some of these types that make life tough:

Card Sharp. He comes with a marked deck and begins his operations on the recruit train headed for boot camp.

Sea Story Artist. He's been everywhere and knows everything.

Sea Lawyer. This equivalent of the guardhouse lawyer in the Army picks up a smattering of knowledge from the Uniform Code of Military Justice and tries to argue in a big way.

Crud. He apparently has never taken a shower and never wants to—he's just allergic to cleanliness.

Wise Guy or Snipe. He has browsed through the manual and tries to trip up the instructor by asking the weight in ounces of the "sear" in the M-1 rifle.

Mama's Boy. He does not take to the military life very well and is always running to the chaplain.

Average Recruit.

Fortunately the average recruit is none of these. He's neither a rough guy nor very sophisticated, bound to get out of line once in a while, has had some kind of job that has given him some appreciation of responsibility, and is very adaptable. He will fight his country's battles.

Some of these boys are well-spoken high school graduates from well-to-do families. Some are almost illiterate. Some are Negroes experiencing desegregation for the first time. Some obviously have not been used to square meals.

First thing the Marine Corps does is to level them, blur out the distinctions as much as possible. En masse they go to the barbers and they are shaved electrically down to the scalp. Thus goes a boy's most distinctive feature, the style of his hair. Then all their "civvies" are taken away, and their privacy, as they take their first shower. Then all of them have to submit to a delousing process, than which there can be no greater leveler. Pretty soon they all look alike with shiny domes and clad in forest green.

After that comes the life-filling training hours, a kaleidoscopic routine of precision marching, classroom lectures, endless hours of weapons marksmanship, bayonet drill, more marching, defense against chemical attack, defense against atomic attack, conditioning marches, more close-order drill, night bivouacs, combat swimming instruction, military sanitation and personal hygiene, guard duty, more close-order drill.

The ill-fated march of April 8, ordered by Staff Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon, junior D.I. of the Seventy-first Recruit Platoon, illustrates the kind of extracurricular activities that the D.I. adds to the crowded day for disciplinary reasons. The march was not on the training schedule. If the sergeant had led the boys into shallow water without mishap to cool them after some infraction of discipline the recruits would have taken it as part of their life and nothing would have been heard of it.

Inevitably an incident like this uncovers other examples of hazing or harsh treatment. One of those who died had written home that one of the boys was caught smoking "and we had to lift our rifles over our heads 200 times." Another of the victims had written that he was caught drinking a bottle of pop against the rules and his D.I. made him drink 19 bottles as punishment.

Stop any Marine anywhere and he will tell you this sort of thing has always gone on in boot camp. Even officers assure you privately that unless the noncom maintains a firm grip, using rough stuff sometimes against recalcitrants, discipline will collapse and neither the sergeant nor the recruit will be any good to the corps or the country.

Hence Gen. Randolph McCall Pate, commandant of the corps, shook the morale of the noncommissioned officers by declaring that Sgt. McKeon had no authority to order a march for disciplinary reasons.

Inquiry into attitudes indicates that the critical period of boot training comes around the third week. Homesickness, the exhaustion of rugged outdoor life, the rigid routine drive the recruit to the point where he would like to kill the D. I. The D. I., too, would like to break the necks of rookies who make his life miserable in one way or another through misbehavior or inefficiency.

Yet in the end the recruit almost invariably comes to regard his D. I. as his personal hero. If he has not been weeded out by a mid-course examination and becomes a marine after 10 weeks, ready to go on to four weeks of individual combat training, he exudes pride and toughness and is mighty respectful of the beribboned veteran who has made him that way.

Despite the fact that the noncoms and many officers feel that Gen. Pate has let the D.I.s down and has struck in a legal sense at the disciplinary system used by generations of noncoms, Gen. Pate has asked the public to withhold judgment on the training program until a court of inquiry has completed an investigation of the death march. He said the system of recruit training has withstood the test of years of combat experience.

Gen. Pate was pleading for a recruit-training program that has produced more than 192,000 marines since January, 1951. This base resounds to the cadence counts of 7500 recruits organized into 98 platoons. Despite the tragedy on Ribbon Creek, the volunteers are still coming in.

There were 17 of these volunteers on a train headed toward Parris Island this week. They were asked what they thought of the swamp march and the six dead boys. They all felt about the same way about it and one expressed their feelings thus: "Huh. It's just one of those things. We didn't have to get in the Marine Corps. They don't draft marines."

Mme. Chiang Heads Drive.

DISPUTE RAGES IN CANADA OVER GAS PIPELINE

Showdown Nears in Parliament on Proposed Alberta to Quebec Facility.

OTTAWA, June 2 (AP)—A project to build a 2200-mile pipeline to carry gas from Alberta to Quebec has plunged Prime Minister St. Laurent's government into one of the bitterest controversies in Canadian history.

Cries of "fascist" and "rapist" have been raised in Parliament by opponents of the $375,000,000 project.

For two weeks a parliamentary battle has raged over the plan for temporary government financing of two major parts of the line to be built by Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd., a largely United States - backed corporation.

June 7 is the deadline set by the Government for approval of the measure, which provides for a loan of up to $80,000,000 to finance 90 per cent of the cost of building the line's 575-mile prairie leg to Winnipeg.

If the deadline is not met, Trans-Canada will be released from its agreement with the Government complete the western section this year.

Blocking Campaign.

The opposition Progressive Conservative and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (socialist) parties have waged a determined effort block the bill. They charge it is a sellout to United States interests, who own 83 per cent of Trans-Canada.

The Government counters that Trans-Canada is the only agency which can build the western line this year because no Canadian company can get the necessary materials. Trans-Canada already has them.

The Government has been challenged to take the issue to the voters. Prime Minister St. Laurent refused, saying an election now would make a start on the pipeline this year "quite impossible."

It appears to be a tossup whether the Government can meet its deadline for the bill's passage.

It needs to replenish its supply of funds from Parliament by May 31. An attempt to get approval for expenditures beyond that date would require introduction of a Government money bill. Opposition debate on that bill could block passage of the pipeline measure.

The over-all project is for the biggest pipeline in the world. Connected developments in distribution systems and changeover of facilities would involve a total investment of an estimated one billion dollars.

Joint Financing.

The bill provides—besides the loan to the prairie section—for joint financing by the federal and Ontario governments of the $118,000,000 section of the line through northern Ontario from Manitoba to Kapuskasing.

The prairie loan at 5 per cent must be repaid by next April 2. If Trans-Canada defaults, the Government can take over the project.

Trans-Canada's ability to raise money from private sources apparently hinges on the success of its plan to export surplus gas into the United States. Long delays have stymied an application to the Federal Power Commission in Washington for approval of gas import. The importing company would be Midwestern Gas Transmission Co., a subsidiary of the huge Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., one of Trans-Canada's main backers.

Although both the Conservative and C.C.F. parties oppose the bill, they each have different goals.

The Conservative says Trans-Canada should be held to its original promise to build the line without Government aid. Or the Government should build the entire line and lease it for private operation under Canadian control. The C.C.F. has come out for complete public ownership.

Trans-Canada gained its federal charter in 1951, stating that it could build a cross-country line without United States exports or Government aid. It merged early in 1954 with Western Pipe Lines, Ltd., whose plan to pipe gas to the United States Middle West had been rejected.

Trans-Canada later got Alberta's permission to take 500,000,000 cubic feet of gas a day from the province. It planned to export 200,000,000 feet under a 25-year contract.

Once its line is built, Trans-Canada also plans to export surplus gas to the Tennessee company for storage in underground gas fields in Pennsylvania.

The original Trans-Canada sponsors included Clint W. Murchison, oil millionaire from Dallas. Tennessee Gas Transmission, which came is as a backer last November, holds 17 per cent. Gardiner Symonds of Houston is a Trans-Canada director.

FIXING OF PRICES ALLEGED ON V-SHAPED DRIVE BELTS

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) —The Department of Justice announced yesterday the indictment of six leading rubber corporations on charges of unlawfully fixing uniform prices for V-shaped rubber drive belts. The indictment was returned by a federal grand jury in Denver.

The belts involved are widely used for power transmission in a variety of industries and are found in many home appliances such as washing machines, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners and pumps.

The indictment asserted that the six defendant companies sold $60,000,000 worth of such belts in 1954. Those named were: United States Rubber Co., Philadelphia; B. F. Goodrich Co. and Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., both of Akron; Gates Rubber Co. of Denver; Dayton Rubber Manufacturing Co. of Dayton, O., and Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Co. of Boston.

A Dream Come True

By Dorothy Brainerd

A man may yearn for fame and fortune, but a woman fancies simpler things. The fabric of her dreams is woven from threads of thoughts for the welfare and comfort of those dear to her; of a home in which they will be happy and of which they may be proud.

It is inevitable, then, that the kitchen plays a major role in her daydreams, since it is there that she goes about many of the tasks which make a house a home.

Naturally, the dream kitchen will vary with the woman. It may be sleek and streamlined, as modern as June's brides. It may be enchantingly feminine, with even the major appliances her favorite pastel color. Perhaps it has the charm of brick, plank floors and rag rugs; or the mellow warmth of softly gleaming wood and copper.

So to each her own—and may every dream someday come true.

It's No Wonder Daughter Enjoys Helping Mother in This Kitchen

This teen-ager learns that homemaking duties can be fun, and not a burden, as she helps Mother in her charming kitchen. An attractive and well equipped arrangement such as this will encourage youngsters to entertain in their own homes. Note the completely built-in equipment, the ample storage space, and the convenient arrangement for passing food through to the dining area.

OPEN EVENINGS

Modern Kitchen Literally 'Heart of Home'; Center of Varied Activities of the Family

In Addition to Cooking Center, May Also Serve as Laundry, Sewing or Play Room and Office.

EVERYWHERE ONE GOES these days there is talk about the kitchen of the future. Almost every publication for homemakers tells us of the wonders to come. Predictions for Circa 1975 include dishwashers and clothes washers that will operate by ultrasonic waves. There seems a better-than-even chance that dishes will come out of these machines of tomorrow and put themselves away, and clothes will be brought forth not only washed and dried, but neatly folded.

As for food preparation, the outlook is that pre-packaged foods might even cook themselves (literally) with built-in chemical units. Experiments under way with electronic ovens seem to indicate that the dinner of the future will arrive on the table so fast that Dad and the kids had better be washed and seated before Mom pops the potatoes into the oven.

The present trend toward out-of-door living supposedly will have advanced to the stage where kitchen and patio will be separated solely by sliding glass panels, and dual controls will make it possible to cook from out-of-doors as well as the indoor side of the range.

Wonders Enough Today.

However, there is no need for today's homemaker to dream longingly of the promised land of kitchens. There are wonders enough for today.

Kitchens of tomorrow are here today in many shapes and designs. Major electrical appliances and electrical housewares come in a variety of colors to make the kitchen the most attractive livable room in the house.

Kitchens are no longer just places to cook. They are places which are the very nerve-center of the home, where chores are lightened to allow more leisure for living. Both the physical set-up and the way of life have been undergoing some interesting changes.

"Live" servants are becoming more scare every day. It is predicted that in a few years only one family in every 50 will have a full-time domestic.

But the engineers and scientists are taking care of that. They are providing electric "servants" to take the labor out of housework, do it fast, efficiently, and at moderate cost.

They are constantly devising better ways to prepare, refrigerate, freeze, defrost and cook foods. They have gone a long way toward eliminating garbage. They have made it possible to wash, dry and store dishes and utensils, mechanically and automatically. The necessary hot water is just as easily available as running cold water, and with no more thought on the part of the user.

All of this has come about because there is a whole new idea in American kitchens—less bend, less stoop, less steps. Everything is designed for the woman who does her own work (and if she has one of those very important persons, a maid, with such equipment there is a better chance of keeping her).

Everything is within easy reach so that the kitchen works for, and not against, the homemaker.

New appliances have made this possible; some brand new, others improvements on former models. In 1930 there were only 19 different appliances. The automatic washer and food freezer were introduced as recently as 1940. By the end of 1953 there were a total of over 60 appliances, and the end is not yet in sight.

Kitchens are now a gathering place for the whole family, with a table for mealtimes which also may be used as a convenient place to drop bundles, or for games and study. Kitchen layouts save many a step in serving meals and clearing away after them.

Often the kitchen is also a laundry—a time-saving arrangement which means that the homemaker can carry on the important jobs of food preparation and washing at one and the same time, without neglecting either.

Provisions have been made in many kitchens for the youngsters to play in complete safety, but under mother's watchful eye. Sometimes a quiet corner in an open-plan kitchen is set aside for the small fry and equipped with storage cabinets for toys. The children are away from the traffic path and from the area fraught with such dangers as sharp knives and hot pans, but they are close enough for mother to supervise activities.

If a large kitchen in an older home is being remodeled, provision may be made for a low, well-padded box near a low window, where younger children may entertain themselves happily for hours by watching the activities of furred and feathered friends in the back yard.

In homes where space is at a premium, if provision cannot be made for play space in the kitchen, it is sometimes possible to install a glass window in the wall between kitchen and dining room, so that mother can still keep an eye on activities.

For very tiny tots, an adjustable "fence" will close off one section of the room and keep the small fry within bounds.

Some type of accommodations for toys should be made so that it is not necessary to transport them into the kitchen. Not only does this keep the youngsters under supervision during meal-preparation time, but it keeps the rest of the house from becoming cluttered with play toys.

Center of Activities.

Activities other than cooking, laundry and child supervision may be centered in the kitchen.

With the increased trend toward informality in entertaining, the room often is used for cards or other games, with guests joining the "do-it-yourself" movement and helping to prepare their own refreshments from a "hospitality shelf" in the refrigerator which contains the "makin's" for sandwiches and snacks.

Many larger kitchens include a sewing center. This, again, is a highly practical idea since it means that the home sewer need not worry over her living or dining room being in disorder, with patterns and fabrics spread about, should someone drop in unexpectedly. And, of course, it also saves steps when sewing and cooking simultaneously.

A kitchen desk is almost a "must," for making out shopping lists, menus and carrying on the business of running a household.

Some designers are including bookshelves in their kitchen plans. These may hold not only cookbooks and recipe folders, but also radios or even television sets.

Another trend is the use of wall decorations in the kitchen. Often pots and pans of gleaming copper, stainless steel or aluminum are hung on the wall, serving both a functional and decorative purpose. Molds also play this dual role, or the decorations may be purely ornamental fantasties of wrought iron.

True, the kitchen of the future may have even more wonders. But surely the efficient appliances and the ingenious kitchen planning of today provide kitchens which fulfill every dream today.

EVER THINK OF THIS?

Do you know how many hours you spend in your kitchen every day? Do you know how many hours your husband spends in his car every day? Do you know that a good modern kitchen costs no more than a good modern automobile?

The Whole Family Gets Into the Act

An attractive kitchen is a good incentive for the whole family to get into the act of homemaking—not only at picnic time, but throughout the year. There is ample room in this kitchen for several persons to work simultaneously at the different areas of activity. Note how this kitchen has been designed for ease of cleaning.

DID YOU EVER SAY YOU HAD WASHED A MILLION DISHES?

Did you ever say you had washed a million dishes? Maybe you were nearer right than you thought you were. Somebody has figured out that American women wash 5,692,500,000 dishes every day.

Probably he didn't count every dish, but it seems to have been what is known as an educated guess. That guess was based on a study made in Ohio. It seems a series of Ohio homemakers found they washed an average of 126.5 dishes every day. (Maybe the half dish was the one that was broken.) It took each woman 73.2 minutes to do the job.

On the basis of 45,000,000 homes in America, the total added up to the staggering figure given above.

REMODELING MAY BE ANSWER TO PROBLEM

So you have decided to go ahead with the modernizing of your home. Most such undertakings are planned piecemeal; they're easier step-by-step. But there should be some general over-all scheme.

First thing to do is think it over, talk it over. Have a clear mental picture of what your house needs to make it a modern home. Then, get all the ideas on modernizing that you can from manufacturers and dealers—read the manufacturers' literature for valuable suggestions and information about materials and equipment.

The next step is to organize your projects—decide which will bring the greatest benefits to your family in living comfort and efficiency and give them top priority.

Put your plans on paper. Use plastic models and cardboard cutouts of equipment, appliances and furnishings to visualize the changes you want to make. These aids are available at many dealers.

If you can, employ an architect. He will more than earn his fee—especially if the projects are big. In any event, don't forget to check local building codes and zoning regulations.

Select materials and equipment and note down work that you will want to do yourself. Don't undertake jobs that require more skill than you possess or more time than you can devote.

Two of the most important steps to take are getting cost estimates and arranging financing. A number of different types of loans are available and you may be able to use your mortgage for further credit.

ACCESSORIES CAN BE IMPORTANT, TOO

When you fit your new modern kitchen to your individual desires, you will find a wide variety of special cabinets to help ease your chores. Here is a partial check list giving some of the important accessory items you may find helpful.

Mixer Shelf: This is an assembly which lifts out and up to bring the automatic electric mixer into quick use when needed.

Bread and Cake Box: This is a special drawer with a sliding shelf for the storage of bread and other baked goods.

Cutlery Tray: A compartmented insert for a steel cabinet drawer for the orderly storage of kitchen cutlery.

Cutting Board: Pull-out accessory for use in chopping-slicing operations, kneading dough, etc.

Vegetable Baskets: Drawer inserts for the storage of tomatoes, potatoes and other vegetables.

Condiment Rack: A step rack for use as an insert in a wall cabinet for the easy, orderly and colorful storage of spices and other condiments.

Flatware Drawer: A special drawer for the storage of your everyday flatware in orderly arrangement.

These are only a modest number of the many accessories found in modern steel kitchens, but they illustrate the basic usefulness as well as the unique attractiveness incorporated in today's kitchen planning.

Look for them in planning the kitchen of your new home, or include them in your plans for the modernization or remodeling of the kitchen in your present home.

Though there are many more accessories available for the modern steel kitchen, this list will illustrate the variety from which you can choose to make your new kitchen more efficient.

A QUIZ TO HELP WITH YOUR PLANS

Planning for your kitchen depends upon the habits of you and your family. It sometimes is hard to remember all the personal problems that should be considered in arranging a steel kitchen that will become a permanent part of your home.

Planning experts of one steel kitchen manufacturer have prepared a series of questions to job your memory.

What is the size of your family?

Are you thinking in terms of a meal-preparation kitchen, or one that also offers the space for family-centered living?

What extra activities would you like to have in your kitchen?

Do you frequently serve lunches or snacks?

Will more than one adult frequently help with meal preparation?

What are your entertaining habits?

How often do you shop for food?

Will good "company" china and flatware be stored in your kitchen?

Will you have a conventional range or built-in units?

What small appliances will you use?

Will your future storage needs change?

What height is a comfortable reach for you?

What general kitchen plan do you favor (if your present or future home permits a choice): I; H; L or U shape?

Will you have an automatic dishwasher now? Or later?

Will your kitchen be the storage space for general household cleaning tools?

Do you contemplate a "home management" disk in your kitchen?

AVOID DAMPNESS

Never let damp clothing lie around, or it is likely to mildew. Dry soiled clothes before throwing them into the hamper; wash dishcloths and hang them to dry; spread out washcloths; stretch out wet shower curtains; sprinkle for ironing only as many articles as can be ironed in a day or store them in the refrigerator to keep overnight.

Long-Range Planning Wise When Buying Appliances

Plan Kitchen With Future in Mind; Each Addition Should Fit Into Over-All Scheme.

Remember that when you install new, modern appliances, they will be in use for years. But, more than that, many families find it more convenient to set up modern living by easy stages.

Even if you can't put everything into the house at one time, there is every reason to look ahead.

You may only be getting one appliance now. Or maybe several. At the same time you can do the spade work for the others that will come in the years ahead.

Possibly you may have to make changes in plumbing or wiring to handle the new equipment. It is almost certain you will have to check up on such problems.

Plan for Later.

When the man comes to tell you about wiring or plumbing, ask him about the future. Often you can save money, fuss and trouble if you have everything done at this time. Make sure your wiring will handle all the equipment you want. Make sure that plumbing connections are available for the future.

The same thing is true about your own planning. Your kitchen or your laundry is being planned so that it will fit the equipment you will get now. When you get more next year or the year after, will you be worrying and scrambling, hunting space in which to put it?

That would be foolish. When you plan, you can lay out the space for the new freezer or the new ironer that you may not be getting this year, but will be getting later. Maybe you will want a larger or a different refrigerator. Measure up for size and allow for it.

Then when the time comes for the new item, it can be slipped into the place allotted for it with little effort or expense.

Changes Way of Life.

When you plan for appliances, you are doing more than acquiring another piece of merchandise. In a very real sense, these are servants who take over the hard labor and even some of the thinking of household tasks. You are changing your own lives.

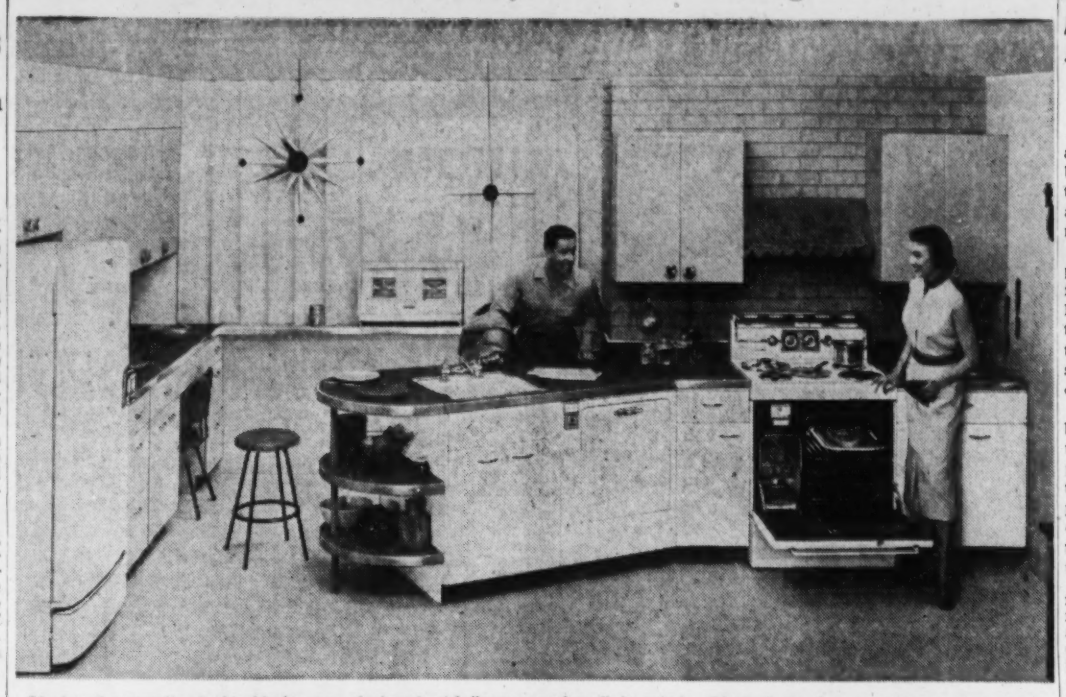
Flowers in Kitchen.

Yes, why not? Does it seem impractical to have fresh flowers in the kitchen? Not at all. Nothing will do as much to lift your spirits and give the room a homey look. When you cut blossoms from your garden for your living and dining rooms, cut a few simple ones for the kitchen. Arrange them in pitchers, cups and jugs for homespun charm.

Ambidextrous.

Do you make both hands work for you in the kitchen, or is the left one a loafer? Make a conscious effort to see that both your right hand and left hand are working at the same time. You will be surprised how many steps you can save yourself. (Honest, now, do you carry out one dish at a time when clearing the table?)

A Kitchen to Suit the Way of Life of 'Young Moderns'



Sleek and streamlined, this kitchen was designed with "young moderns" in mind. There is no fuss or clutter; just clean, simple lines. The electric range will handle all food preparation for entertaining quite adequately and the clean-up chore will be no problem. A stool of the correct height, chair with a back, and air conditioner assure the comfort of the homemaker so that her "kitchen duty" will not tire her and she will be rested and relaxed to enjoy leisure hours.

POINTS TO CHECK ABOUT APPLIANCES FOR WEDDING GIFT

If you are planning to buy an electrical appliance for a bride, you'll be interested in the suggestions that come from a University of Illinois home management specialist.

Miss Catherine M. Sullivan points out you should check first to see if the Underwriters' Laboratory symbol appears on the item. That symbol means that the appliance meets the standards for satisfactory, safe operation.

Next, look for a card, tag or booklet that has the guarantee to repair or replace defective parts for a certain length of time. Then you'll be sure to protect the bride from immediate repair bills. And are there adequate instructions for use?

If the appliance is designed for table use, be sure the table rests and insulation will give adequate protection to the top of the table. You'll also want to make sure that all the handles are made of heat-resistant materials.

Before you buy, another important point to watch for is ease of cleaning and caring for the equipment. Just ask yourself if you'd like to clean it; and, if not, don't buy it. If equipment is too hard to clean, the chances are that it won't be used.

WISE OWNER READS DIRECTION BOOKS

The wise homemaker will take time to learn what her new appliance is expected to do, and how to operate it efficiently, in order to protect the investment. Reading the direction book will help the owner of a new appliance to get more for her money in terms of long-time serviceability.

The most self-sufficient appliance deserves the few minutes it takes to read directions. Refrigerators, for example, require little maintenance.

But if the new owner fails to read directions, she may not fully understand what the new appliance is supposed to do or is capable of doing. Often minor departures from normal operation could be cleared up with the push of a button or the flick of a switch, as explained in the directions.

Some appliances, of course, require more active supervision. They have been made as simple as possible, and will become more simple as technical advances permit. The customer who gets the most out of them always will be the person who knows their capabilities and how to operate them at a peak level of performance.

Long, Narrow Kitchen Can Be Model of Efficiency

Here is a striking example of how a well-designed long, narrow kitchen can be an asset to the homemaker. It can be quite as functional as that model of efficiency—the kitchen in a railroad dining car. Incidentally kitchen planners claim that a room of almost any shape can be made into a workable kitchen. This one is a real step saver. Note how the planter (used as a room divider) and cafe curtains add to the attractiveness of the room.

DUPLICATE SETS OF KITCHEN TOOLS MAY SPEED WORK

During a housecleaning spree, most homemakers tend to streamline operations and dispose of any unnecessary gadgets. Of course streamlining equipment makes the job easier, generally speaking.

But when it comes to kitchen tools, duplicate gadgets may save time and work rather than be in the way.

Measuring cups and extra spoons are good examples of duplicated items that help. Keep a set near the sink, another near the stove, and a third near the spot where you do your mixing and food preparation.

Knife Rack.

A knife rack from the dime store will keep your cutlery at your finger tips, and keep your knives from becoming knicked and dulled from throwing them in a drawer with other metal articles.

Good Lighting Essential In Every Modern Kitchen

No matter how many new appliances and labor saving devices it may contain, no kitchen is truly modern unless it is properly lighted. Modern kitchens are made for living, and adequate lighting is necessary for any living area. Lighting engineers have found through extensive research that good lighting accomplishes three distinct things in the kitchen.

First, tasks can be done much easier and with considerably less effort; second, adequate lighting definitely increases safety; and third, new lighting devices on the market can bring out the very best appearance of the kitchen.

The ways and means of obtaining the general and specific lighting needed in a kitchen are many and varied. It can be done at a very low cost or more expensively. Consideration must always be given to the type of decor being used in the kitchen and the lighting, of course, must blend in and accentuate the feeling the kitchen is supposed to express.

The general light source is most often a center ceiling fixture. Modern kitchen fixtures accentuate the clean, functional design of our kitchens today. Fixtures should be large enough to hold at least 200 watts of

If fluorescent tubes are used, at least two 40-watt bulbs should be used. The bulbs or tubes should be completely shielded from view, and this shield should be deep enough and wide enough so that the bulbs and tubes are at least one inch away from the shield. This will diffuse the light and prevent glare.

Coves and Valances.

In many kitchens, the general light may be obtained from coves or valances. Fluorescent tubing can be used to good advantage in these elongated light sources. In coves and valances, caution must be exerted to make sure that the fluorescent tubes are not exposed to direct view. With this type of lighting, light falls on the ceiling, and from it is reflected around the room.

To obtain best results, of course a white or near white ceiling is needed in order to reflect as much light as possible. If this type of lighting is to be considered as a general light source, at least a total of 12 feet of fluorescent tubing should be provided to supply sufficient illumination.

The light that will take your work out of the shadows is the light you have directly over all the work surfaces. Under-cabinet light are, of course, one of the best ways to accomplish this. Fluorescent strips with plastic shields do a very adequate job of lighting, but if economy is the important factor, small incandescent fixtures that have metal shields that protect your eyes from the view of the bulb, will do a very good job of lighting under cabinet surfaces.

Over the Sink.

A cornice board over the sink shielding a fluorescent tube or even an incandescent bulb will provide light for the work done there. Recessed fixtures built into the ceiling over work surfaces not only provide specific lighting, but they contribute to the general lighting as well.

Special spots, such as over eating counters, may be accentuated with direct spots either built into the ceiling or attached to the wall. Because of their narrow spread of light, however, sufficient care must be taken to provide enough spots so as to eliminate shadows.

A lighted hood over the range will not only provide good light, but will provide complete elimination of all cooking odors.

In the dinette, a pleasant atmosphere can be obtained by the use of modern pull-down fixtures. This type of fixture will not only provide good general illumination for eating, but will provide plenty of direct illumination if the table is ever used for study or for working out household accounts. If a modern pull-down fixture is not the right one for your dinette, remember, the bigger the fixture, the less the glare. So purchase a big fixture for best lighting results.

Small Investment.

For the homeowner who has a llimted amount of money to spend on lighting, or for one who lives in an apartment and does not feel like buying a new center ceiling fixture, there are many inexpensive means of improving the already existing fixture. If the center ceiling fixture consists of a very small globe that will hold only a very small bulb or if it is only a bare bulb, there are adaptors on the market that can correct these conditions. Some adaptors are large fixtures that have an attachment that screws right into the old socket of the old fixture. For the bare bulb fixture, there are clip-on plastic shields that can be clipped right over the bulb. These adaptors will allow the use of a large bulb at the same time that they make the light softer and glare free.

For the apartment dweller, many times the needed specific lighting can be obtained by the use of small fixtures that can be plugged into existing outlets or even pin-to-wall lamps can be used to good advantage.

In most older homes, the kitchens are lighted only by a center ceiling fixture. This fixture usually does a reasonably good job of providing general lighting. However, specific lighting for all of the household tasks is sadly lacking. When the homemaker is doing her kitchen duties, she usually finds herself working in her own shadow.

What, is needed, of course, is specific lighting for all of the household tasks, which means direct lighting over the sink, the range and over all the work counters. Then the homemaker will have the modern lighting she needs.

Check Lighting.

One of the most important aspects of good kitchen planning is proper lighting. All work areas should have good overhead lighting that doesn't cast shadows. Lighting arrangements should be checked each time a new appliance is installed, specialists say.

KITCHEN OFFICE

A homemaker is an executive who carries on much of her office work in her kitchen. She definitely needs an office.

One may be assembled from base cabinets spaced approximately two feet apart, joined by a top. Ideally, a telephone should be installed at the "desk" so that the homemaker may telephone orders to the grocer, cleaner, etc. Be sure that the area is well lighted.

Charm of Past, Convenience of Present

There is much of the charm of a bygone era in this attractive kitchen done in brick and woods, its walls decorated with iron trivets and copper utensils. But for all of its atmosphere of the past, it is completely modern, with its built-in oven, carefully planned cabinets, and well lighted working area.

CHOICE OF COLORS UP TO HOMEMAKER

When you choose your electrical appliances your wishes rule in color as in other things. Colored appliances are ready for you if you want them.

Also there are appliances to fit the kind of house you have or the kind you want to create. You may find space for them on the second floor, the first floor or in the basement.

The colored appliances come in about 100 different shades, usually at no extra cost. About one family in 10 chooses color. Merchants have found that women who seek color usually are veteran housekeepers more than 55 years old or young brides. They believe the older women have become tired of the white kitchens they have had all their lives and the brides are rebelling against childhood kitchens.

Many Want White.

But many other customers still demand white appliances—and get them. That does not mean they must have white kitchens. Decorations in many colorful accents blend effectively with white enamel and frequently are used to lend a brighter touch to the kitchens.

Your own choice rules in many other ways.

Most women prefer to put the laundry on the first floor. In many of the new homes, large kitchens permit washers and dryers to be built in under the counters. Washing and cooking can go on at the same time. In older homes, back porches, pantries and even breakfast rooms are being converted into laundries.

Other laundries are found in the basement. Sometimes they are complete with television set, and the old stove is moved down when the new one is installed. Coffee and soup can be heated for lunch and eaten on the work table.

Wandering Laundry.

In other homes, the wandering laundry is sometimes found on the second floor. Most of the laundry originates there. Sheets, soiled clothing and other linen is popped into the washer to be washed and dried when a load accumulates.

There are appliances for every type of installation. The built-ins are one kind that are growing in popularity. Ovens, broilers, foldaway burners, refrigerators, freezers, even the ironing board are parts of the wall or recessed into storage cabinets.

Builders report that a third of all new homes are using built-in appliances.

There are sharp differences of opinion between those who like the big living-room-type kitchens and those who insist on small efficiency installations with appropriate appliances.

But home-planning experts warn that your choice should be made only after considering what different types of appliances were made to do. The manufacturers and your dealer have detailed information on performance and understand what types of equipment will work best in various locations.

Even in the matter of color, the experts have learned from experience.

University Researchers Report on Dishwashers

Ohio State Study Shows Marked Saving in Time, Lower Bacteria Count, Less Breakage of Dishes.

JUST HOW MUCH TIME will a dishwasher save? Will it get the dishes cleaner and more sanitary than hand washing? Does an automatic dishwasher step up water consumption? To answer these and other questions, a carefully controlled study of hand versus automatic electric dishwashing methods was made by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, O.

This study was sponsored by eight leading dishwasher manufacturers who are members of the Household Sink Units Section of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association. It was conducted under the supervision of Dr. Elaine Knowles Weaver, associate professor, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station and the School of Home Economics, Ohio State University, and Clarice E. Bloom, assistant professor, Ohio State University.

The most dramatic finding of the Ohio study was that an automatic electric dishwasher cuts dishwashing time by about half. The survey found that the average homemaker spends an average of about an hour and a quarter a day doing the dishes by hand.

Compared with this, time consumed getting the dishes done in an automatic electric dishwasher averaged about 35 minutes a day.

Far More Sanitary.

Dishes washed in the dishwasher were found definitely more sanitary than those washed by hand, with a much lower bacteria count indicating an important contribution to family health.

Recommended water temperatures for household electric dishwashers with an ample supply of water averages about 140 degrees Fahrenheit, hotter than the hands will stand in the dishwasher.

Another important consideration is breakage. This is a particular hazard in a household where there are youngsters who occasionally lend a grudging and naturally clumsy hand. It was found that more than five times as many dishes were broken in hand washing than machine washing.

How Much Water?

"How much water does a dishwasher use?" is a question frequently asked. It was found that the average dishwasher use of hot water by the participants was about eight gallons per day. This is less water than is needed to fill one of the new deep sinks, to say nothing of the amount of water used by women who rinse their dishes under running water.

Still another advantage of automatic electric dishwashers was found in the fact that they help lighten the laundry load by cutting down the number of tea towels to be washed and ironed.

Women varied in their automatic electric dishwashing procedures as in all household practices. But each homemaker was able to work out her own schedule in accordance with the needs of her family and her own preferences.

Most of the Ohio study participants preferred to wash dishes twice a day—after lunch and dinner. They stored the breakfast dishes out of sight in the dishwasher until ready to run through the first load.

Some preferred to leave clean dinner dishes in the dishwasher overnight, taking out what they needed for breakfast and putting the rest away after the morning meal.

Loading Dishwasher.

Always put dishes inside the dishwasher in the manner prescribed by the manufacturer. And don't overload. Also use the amount of detergent or soap specified. Otherwise, you may have a rinsing problem.

STUDY OF KITCHEN COUNTER FINISHES

Which surface finish to choose for kitchen work-counters is a question of concern to families planning new homes or modernizing their kitchens. It's a special problem today when many different ways of finishes and coverings at different costs are on the market.

To help families decide which of these many products is the best choice for their kitchen, the Ohio Experiment Station reports a study of different types of materials, including laboratory research on how they are affected by moisture, stains, cuts, scratches and heat—such as from a hot pan just off the stove or from a cigarette carelessly parked on the counter edge. The study also included interviews with more than 100 town and farm women on the service they had had from different counter coverings and their preferences.

No one finish was found "ideal," but the Ohio study showed which qualities the different finishes offer.

Good grade, laminated plastic finishes were suggested first because these seemed to come closest to meeting the many specifications of home owners. They were found to have good resistance to stains, heat and scorching, moisture and damage that may accompany it like mildew and rotting. These finishes also resisted dents and rated well in durability.

Manufactured in many colors and patterns, they fit practically any kitchen decor and the colors don't fade. Though not as resilient as linoleums and vinyls, they are not "noisy." To install them successfully requires skillful, accurate workmanship with the right tools. These good-grade, rigid, high-pressure thermoset plastics should not be confused with the low-pressure, flexible type that comes in rolls, says the Ohio station, if durability is desired.

Vinyls, postwar products resulting from the development of synthetic rubber, rated as good counter coverings at moderate cost except for the fact that they can be damaged by heat. Vinyls resist moisture, mildew and rot. Like linoleums, they are flexible, so lend themselves to installation by the home handyman. Linoleum rates high for resiliency and for "healing" cuts, scratches and surface dents. Linoleum is reasonably priced and should not be expected to last as long as some of the more durable and expensive materials.

Durability is a strong argument for tile and stainless steel counter tops. Both of these materials are hard and non-resilient. Their resistance to moisture, corrosion and heat makes them especially good choices in damp, humid climates.

How durable wood countertops are will depend on the seal, finish and care they are given, the Ohio station says. Unless well treated, wood will stain, absorb moisture readily, and roughen.

One Man's Report On 'Inside Africa'

By Art Buchwald

PARIS, June 2.

OUR friend, Al Kendrick, has just returned from a 20,000-mile tour of Africa. The excuse for the trip was to shoot 200,000 feet of film for a CBS television program, but the real reason was so Kendrick could report back to us on what is going on in the Dark Continent these days.

ART BUCHWALD . . . HIS FRIEND'S HEAD HAD SHRUNK A LITTLE.

Kendrick met us at a secret table at the Cafe de la Paix. His head had shrunk a little, so we didn't recognize him at first, but he seemed to be in good spirits.

"What's new in Africa?" we asked him.

"Plenty," he said. "The whole map of Africa is being recharted. People no longer visit countries; they go to places where movies were made. Instead of going to Uganda they go to 'The African Queen.' Instead of going to Ruanda Urundi they go to 'King Solomon's Mines.' In the 'Valley of the Kings' the guides point out where Cecil B. DeMille slept at night and in Kenya the guides point out the spot where Clark Gable said 'That's gorilla country over there.' The camera didn't show it, but Gable was pointing at one of the best golf courses in Africa.

"Special tours are made to the hammock where Ava Gardner rested between takes of 'Mogambo,' and they're thinking of hanging Grace Kelly's mosquito netting in the Nairobi Museum. Africa has finally begun to mean something to the average tourist."

"Did you meet any Americans down there?"

"Did I? They're all over the place."

"What are they doing?"

"Most of them are trying to teach African bartenders how to make really dry martinis."

● "DID YOU go on a safari?"

"Of course I did. But they're not what they're cracked up to be. The ice-making machine kept breaking down and we ran out of ice cubes on the third day. From then on it was hell. We had to drink warm gin and tonics for three days. The only one who didn't seem to mind was the white hunter, who was an Englishman, and used to melt his ice cubes over the fire before drinking anyway."

"What else did you do?"

"I went to see the pygmies. But here again the Americans have spoiled them. They won't pose except for dollars and they insist on you countersigning your travelers' checks in front of them.

● "WHAT WERE the food conditions you discovered on your trip?"

"The most interesting thing I discovered was that although the Gold Coast is the largest producer of cocoa, nobody there drinks it. Just as a test I tried to get a cup of cocoa everywhere I went, but failed miserably, until one day, 'way up in the wild Ashanti, a tribal chief produced a battered old can of cocoa that had come from Manchester. He was using it as snuff."

"What other observations did you make?"

"I noticed the European countries are unloading all their surplus food in their colonies. In French Equatorial Africa I saw natives eating Camembert and Pont l'Eveque cheese before their main course, and in Belgian Congo the natives were wearing Belgian endives as necklaces.

"The Germans, who have no colonies, are flooding the continent with German beer."

"One last question. What's the most difficult aspect of life in Africa for the white man?"

"I believe the most difficult thing is to get a shoe-shine. Between Cairo and Capetown the only place I found to get a shine was Addis Ababa, which was under Italian control for five years, and it's finally paying off. It's rather expensive to keep having to go there for a shine, however."

Shower Bath

By Christopher Billopp

A SHOWER BATH is preferred by many people to the old-fashioned tub. They maintain that the shower bath gets a person just as clean and does it quicker.

They point to the advantage of not having to wait for a tub to fill with water and if not being tempted to lie indefinitely in it. They wax eloquent over the stimulation of following a hot shower with a cold one.

On hearing the praises of the shower bath sung, conservative persons who have stuck to the old-fashioned tub may be persuaded to shift to the shower.

THEN FOR THE FIRST TIME they will become acquainted with details the pro-shower people did not mention. They will not be prepared, while adjusting the shower to the proper temperature, for first being scalded by the hot water and then chilled by cold water.

They will not know what to do when the nozzle of the shower bath is not aimed in the right direction and sprays the wall instead of the tub. Try as they may to regulate the flow, they will find it impossible to get a happy medium between a trickle and a torrent which almost knocks them down and threatens to inundate the bathroom.

BUT THE CROWNING TRAGEDY will come when, unaccustomed to the mechanics of the shower, they neglect to turn the handle back to normal, with the result that a female of the household, expecting to get water from the bathtub tap, instead gets a deluge of shower water on a new hair-do and ruins it.

It is all very well for the proponents of showers to urge their cause, but they ought to mention the shower's shortcomings so that those who follow their advice and take one will not feel that they have been made the victims of a practical joke.

'Ebbie' Anheuser

● Love of Life, Always Up and Doing in Work and Fun, Has Marked Career of Man Who, at 76, Is Calling It a Day After 60 Years With Company

By Dickson Terry

SHORTLY before the turn of the century when Eberhard Anheuser, the hero of this piece, was a young man about town, he was also quite a fancier of horse flesh. He owned a stable of half a dozen race horses which ran regularly at the Old Fairgrounds track in North St. Louis, but regularity was about their only virtue. It didn't take long for Ebbie, as he was and is known to his friends, to realize he was making several bookies financially independent.

So he decided to switch sides and become a bookie himself, to get on the receiving end for a change. But as those things sometimes happen, the situation also reversed itself. Horses with the longest odds seemed to take deliberate delight in coming in first and Anheuser now found himself providing economic security for his betting clientele.

There's no telling where this might have led, had not Adolphus Busch, president of the brewery where young Anheuser was supposed to be putting in a little time, called him in one day.

"I gather from what I hear," said that bearded, baronial brewer, "that you are quite fond of horses."

"Indeed I am," said young Anheuser with innocent eagerness.

"That's fine," said Busch, fixing him with a cold eye, "because we have 250 of them out in the stables, and you can start rubbing them down."

Anheuser didn't actually have to rub down the horses, but he got the point and settled down to his job of shipping clerk. That was 60 years ago.

On the first of May of this year, Eberhard Anheuser announced his retirement as chairman of the board of Anheuser-Busch.

"Sixty years," he said, "is a long time, but it doesn't seem long now. It seems more like a dream."

We were sitting in his office, or what had been his office. Its paneled walls and big mahogany desk, stripped of all signs of the personality of its former owner, looked bare.

"I've taken down my shingle," he said. Then he added with a grin, "I think I'll hang it on my dog house."

WE took an elevator to the penthouse on top of the office building of the Anheuser-Busch brewery and went out onto a large balcony where we looked at the scene below and around us. "Right down there where that square building is," he said, pointing to a spot a half block away in the vast conglomeration of buildings, "was where I was born. Our house stood there. And where you see those stone arches, those were the stables where we kept the 250 horses. And this building we're standing on, or part of it anyway, is the old Lyon school where I went to school as a boy."

But now stretching in every direction over 142 acres, there is nothing but brewery and more brewery. And added to beer in the scope of the company's enterprises are yeast, corn products, cattle feed, refrigerator cabinets, real estate, Diesel engines, railroad cars, pancake syrup and a major-league baseball team. The empire has long since swallowed up the home, the stables and the little school which Eberhard Anheuser associated with his youth.

Sixty years is a long time, but they've been interesting years for Anheuser, and his retirement is no signal for tears. As a matter of fact, he has always been, and still is, a man of many and varied interests, and, as he says, "I have so many things to keep me interested and occupied, I won't have time for them all."

He has nothing but scorn for men who make no preparation for retirement and have nothing to do but sit on the front porch and rock. At 76, Anheuser is an avid baseball fan. Although he can't hunt like he used to, he still has his dogs. He is fond of horses and riding.

HIS home, on the edge of Sunset Country Club, is a source of endless interest to him, especially the lawns. For years one of his chief hobbies has been grass, and he is recognized as an expert in the field. He is both an amateur chef and a gourmet, and loves nothing better than to take Mrs. Anheuser to a good restaurant to dine on lobster or steak. At one time an excellent golfer, he still follows the sport, and when it comes to trapshooting he can still put many a younger man in the shade.

His love of sports goes back as far as he can remember. As a boy he lived, as he says, in the shadow of the brewery. Despite the fact his grandfather had owned the brewery, he was not a rich man's son.

"I was just another kid," he says. "I was no better dressed, nor did I have any more than the rest of them. In fact, I had a hard time because when I was small I stuttered so badly that I couldn't complete a sentence. The other kids thought this was funny, and in the schoolyard the boys would imitate me. This always led to a fight, and few days passed that I didn't either whip someone or get whipped."

His grandfather, for whom he was named, died in 1880. Eberhard was born later the same year.

It was this first Eberhard, a German immigrant, who got into the brewery business somewhat by accident. He was a soap manufacturer. The owner of the brewery, then called the Bavarian Brewery, wanted to expand. He borrowed $90,000 from Eberhard and expanded to the then great production of 8000 barrels a year. Then he failed and Anheuser took over the brewery.

He didn't know what to do with it. He bought brewery supplies from another young German named Adolphus Busch. At the same time Adolphus was courting his daughter, Lilly Anheuser. When they were married, young Busch came into the brewery and it was later incorporated as Anheuser-Busch.

The second Anheuser was Adolph, who died six years after his father, when the present Eberhard was only 6. Young Anheuser lived in a comfortable, old 10-room house, played "Buffalo Bill" (as a result of which he still has a scar on his arm from being "knifed" by an "Indian"), swam in the Mississippi in the summer and watched them cut ice from the river in the winter.

He played the drums in the Concordia Fife and Drum Corps. The corps was available for almost any function, including political rallies, and its members didn't care which side they were on just so they got to put on their uniforms and do their stuff.

It was during those years also that an uncle took him to his first ball game. He saw Comiskey play for the Browns, and he's been a baseball fan ever since. When he was in his early teens, he played on a baseball team called "The Little Potatoes Hard to Peel." In the years since, he's been asked a thousand times how they ever came by that name, or what it meant. He doesn't know, except that it seemed like a real snappy name at the time.

In 1890, a new development was opened called Compton Heights, and the Anheusers moved to a new house there at Grand and Russell. It had 15 rooms and spacious stables and Eberhard attended a school with the rather forbidding name of The Educational Institute, which was on Chouteau avenue, and long since gone. Later he went to Washington University.

College and the years that followed were his salad days. He enjoyed the social life, but his chief interest was sports—any kind of sports. There were the horses which we've already mentioned. He still played baseball, on another team which used to have an annual game with the newspaper men, one of whom was George McManus, then a cartoonist on the old Republic, later the creator of Maggie and Jiggs.

He also belonged to a bowling team and a gun club. When they had the National Bowling Congress here, at the old Coliseum he had the honor of rolling out the first ball. He got a strike.

A retired English army officer named Captain Turner came to town, and got Anheuser interested in greyhound racing. He bought a couple of imported dogs from England, one whom was named Northern Express; he always remembered the name because she won him $1000 in a coursing meet.

He took up golf in those days, also, and became, as he admits, "quite a golfer." He shot in the middle seventies. "And you could bet on it," he adds with a grin. "I did."

MR. AND MRS. ANHEUSER AT THE CELEBRATION IN HONOR OF THEIR FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY. THIS MONTH THEY WILL OBSERVE THEIR FIFTY-FIFTH.

He also played football and handball, and he used to go to a place downtown on Locust street called the Business Men's Gymnasium, run by a man named Mike Mooney. There he used to box and wrestle. One of his frequent wrestling partners was a young man named Bernarr McFadden, who was living in St. Louis then and acquiring some of the muscles and ideas that were to make him famous.

Eberhard boxed with Mooney, who was always pretty careful not to counter punch his business men customers. But one day Eberhard uncorked a left that almost floored Mike and automatically Mike came back with a right that sat Ebbie down unceremoniously.

"I wasn't knocked completely out," he explains, "but I got a pretty good idea of how a boxer feels when he is knocked out." He is still a great fight fan, and plants himself firmly in front of a television set on fight nights.

HIS first job at the brewery, during school days, was as a guide. After college he became shipping clerk. It was his own idea to start at the bottom and learn something about every department. He worked for a time in the real estate department and then became a city salesman, visiting taverns in a horse and buggy. That was an era he looks back upon with some relish. It was a happy time, those early years of the century. He liked people and people liked him.

Those were the days, he recalls, when they used to "hang out the broom." The expression came from a practice among tavern owners and bartenders of signaling to their friends and customers and even passersby that a salesman was in the house, which, of course, meant free beer all around. The tavern owner would leave his broom leaning against the outside of the building near the front door. Any time they saw the broom, the customers started flocking in.

Later he became city and county sales manager and in 1912 was named to the board of directors. Adolphus Busch, who by this time had led the brewery to greatness and had made his name and his beer famous all over the world, died the following year.

WHEN ANHEUSER PLAYED THIRD BASE ON A ST. LOUIS TEAM IN 1904. HE STILL IS KNOWN AMONG SOME OF HIS CRONIES AS "THE OLD THIRD BASEMAN."

"When August Busch, Senior became president," Anheuser said, "I became fifth vice-president. Then," he recalls with a grin, "I later moved up to fourth vice-president, then third, then second and finally became senior vice-president in charge of all sales."

He held that post from 1945 to 1949. In 1950 he became chairman of the board. Although he has a nephew on the board, he is the last of the line in active management of the brewery.

He got married in 1901 to Elinor Siebel, whose father was a contractor, and this month they are celebrating their 55th wedding anniversary, something which many people find difficult to believe, in view of their comparatively youthful appearance and their zest for living. Their devotion to one another is something of a legend among those who know them.

"My wife," he says, "is a guardian angel. A wonderful woman. You know, the right spouse can make or break a man. Just think, married 55 years. I was 76 years old the 19th of May. I've got four old bird dogs," he laughed, "which are almost as old as I am. They walk just like I do."

A hobby which he has clung to longer than any other is bird hunting. He has 30,000 acres leased near Waterloo, Ill., where he has been hunting for 30 years. But last year, while running after one of his dogs, he got a pain in his chest. He had check-ups by heart specialists, who found nothing wrong. But he became interested in the heart, its functions and diseases and now it is one of his hobbies. He has read about everything there is to read on the subject and the chances are he could hold his own in a discussion with Dr. Charles Dudley White.

On his doctor's orders, at the same time, he has given up strenuous types of exercise. He has his weight down to 176 pounds. He stands five feet, seven inches tall, has a large head with still-thick hair combed straight back, a big chest, broad shoulders and muscular, slightly bowed legs, a physique which, at 76, still gives the impression of power.

One of the happiest days of his life was that on which the brewery bought the Cardinals. He likes everything associated with baseball, including the players. At spring training he sometimes puts on a uniform and throws a ball around. He is liked by the players and the sports writers, who call him "the old third baseman." One year he went on a trip with the team, attending every game in a half dozen cities and having the time of his life hob-nobbing with the players. It was one of the best vacations he ever had in his life, he says. At the same time he has never tried to impose his ideas on how the team should be run. He has had a hand, however, in shaping up the field.

When Busch Stadium was being refurbished a couple of years ago, they called Anheuser in to supervise the seeding and sodding. Now, two years later, it is generally agreed that it has the strongest, smoothest turf of any field in the National League.

ANHEUSER'S philosophy of living is simple. "Practice Christianity in all your daily life," he says, "and love people and you will be loved."

He is about as well liked as a man can be, by all classes. When he goes back to the brewery, which he seldom does since he retired, he goes into the private barber shop to see Henry Quentin Lewis, the Negro barber who cut his hair for a quarter of a century, and Henry Quentin Lewis beams. In a corridor he may run into Mike Marcell, a waiter up in the penthouse dining room, and they will launch into a friendly argument about who held the batting record in the National League in 1923. The secretaries and the women who run the elevators make over him. Everyone seems to brighten up when he comes around.

He is enjoying every minute of his retirement. He gets up at 6 o'clock in the morning, puts on a sports shirt and a pair of walking shorts, and strolls around his beautiful lawn which slopes down to meet the fairway of the Sunset golf course.

He goes out to the kennels and first greets old Queenie, his favorite setter, now 14 years old and too feeble to do much but hobble out of the kennel, lick his hand and wag her tail. Then he puts leashes on a couple of pointers, Cobb and Jack, and leads them out in the lawn, where he turns them loose for a good run. He plans to resume another of his hobbies, which is fishing.

HE is an avid television fan, and he has found time for something else he has neglected for many years, which is reading.

"I've gone back to the old timers," he says. "I've been having a lot of fun with Sir Walter Scott and James Fenimore Cooper, because I like romance and adventure. I'm having a good time. I never come down to the office unless I have to."

He enjoys a leisurely lunch with a glass of beer. "I still love beer," he says with a smile. "You know, I've always said that beer aids the digestion, strengthens the nerves and purifies the complexion."

The only note of sadness in Anheuser's retirement came the day he tendered his formal resignation. It was at a directors' meeting. He handed the resignation to August A. Busch Jr., president of the company. Busch started to read it, but choked up. He handed it back to Anheuser and said, "You read it, I can't."

Anheuser started to read it and he, too, choked up. But he managed to get through it, and when he finished nearly everyone present was wiping away a tear.

Which is how most everybody who has ever know him feels about Eberhard Anheuser. And 60 years is a long time.

Nature Impressions In Ozark Woodland

By Leonard Hall

WE'RE always sorry to see May slip away from us. The earlier weeks of spring have a vagrant charm which comes and goes; sunshine followed by showers, fragile blossoms in woodland and field, days with a promise of warmth which give way to frosty nights that blight the growing things. May in Missouri, however, is a hearty maiden fairly bursting with health and sunshine and the promise of maturity. It is a month of lush green growth which approaches the tropical in luxuriance. On a day or two, the thermometer may climb to give us a taste of summer ahead but on the whole both days and nights are comfortable. May is the month, in fact, when life seems at its peak; when one is aware more than at any other time of the vast complexity of the grand scheme of nature.

When we walk out along the wooded bluff above Saline Creek at this season, we try to leave behind us the cares of the day and open our senses to all the impressions we can gather in. The best way to achieve this, of course, is to make the walk a leisurely one for whatever time we have available. There's more to be seen, heard and sensed in a half-mile walk through the woods at a slow pace than in several times that distance covered at a dog trot. It is even a good idea, we find, to stop for a space just inside the border of the woodland; perhaps to find a comfortable boulder and sit quietly to see what impressions come to us.

The first impression, at this season, is likely to be of the luxuriance of the green growth around us. But then our eyes come to rest closer to home. Here on the boulder where we sit are the greenish-brown splotches of lichens and clumps of moss, while at its base on the shady side grow ferns. All these, along with several species of fungi which can be seen from where we are sitting, are old members of the family of plants, having developed on the earth long before the seed plants which are now dominant. Each of them has interesting characteristics. The fungi are a tremendously numerous family including mushrooms, toadstools, molds, mildew, smut and many others.

● LICHENS DEVELOPED somewhat later than fungi, though they are almost equally interesting. They are actually not a single plant, but a combination of two plants living together in a mutually beneficial relationship. Each kind of lichen, in other words, is made up of a fungus which does the job of supplying water and a supporting body for one of the algae.

Mosses belong to a considerably smaller plant order than fungi and are the simplest green plants which have solved the problem of living on the land, although they are largely limited to moist locations such as the shady sides of rocks and edges of small streams. They have a sort of rudimentary root and stem, while some of the liverworts have leaves; but in neither case do these really correspond to the complex root, stem and leaf structure of the higher forms of seed plants. The ferns belong to a still smaller group of plants, somewhat more complex than fungi and mosses, yet with a similar reproductive cycle based on the production of spores which grow into tiny plants containing the male and female cells of the forthcoming fern. These spores are produced in tremendous numbers; perhaps as many as 50,000,000 by a single fern during the growing season.

Thus before we've even started our walk through the woods, we've become conscious of several of the oldest orders of plants; the ferns having been dominant in the landscape of the geological past and showing up as fossils in many kinds of rock. But still we haven't exhausted the possibilities for observation from our boulder at the edge of the woodland. This rock itself is interesting; an outcrop of the dominant layer of Bonneterre limestone which covers the floor of our Ozark valley. This particular dolomitic limestone was laid down on the ocean floor during one of many inundations of the Ozark region, this one probably occurring during the Cambrian period some 500,000,000 years ago at the very beginning of biological history on our planet.

● THE CHARACTER of this limestone layer has been a dominant factor in the soils which have formed above it and, to a considerable degree, in the forms of plant life which we find here. Many of these we can see and identify from our boulder. At ground level, for example, are native legumes; trefoils, vetches, lespedezas and clovers. Redbud and the honey and black locust are tree legumes which like the limestone soils. Cedar is a common invader of the limestone glades where soil is thin, but on the deeper soils we see the real climax trees; ash, walnut and the big white and red oaks. The list of grasses, flowering plants, shrubs and trees which can be identified without even moving from our vantage point is impressive and we know this is due, at least in part, to the extreme age and complexity of the limestone soils which have developed through countless centuries.

Yet no cataloging of plants can complete our observations made from the limestone boulder. We turn over a rotting stump beside us and discover a whole new world of insect life. The song of a bird comes to us and a bit of searching with the binoculars reveals the nest of a tiny blue-gray gnatcatcher, one of our smallest songbirds. A rabbit comes hopping along the path, is momentarily startled by some movement we make, sits on his haunches to watch us for a space, then turns unconcernedly to nibble a tender young plant of the sericea lespedeza. A gray lizard inspects our foot, runs up our leg and perches on our shoulder. A box tortoise comes marching methodically past. But now it is time to hurry home to work and we resolve, on our next walk in the woods, to cover a bit more territory.

The greatest pitfall of reducing is the temptation to slip back into old habits. After you have successfully shucked off excess weight by dieting, the problem is to hold the line. This is the first of two articles taken from the book, "After Reducing, What?" telling how to enjoy eating while still holding your weight at the desired point.

Path to Weight Maintenance Not Harsh and Forbidding So Long as Restraint Is Not Tossed to the Winds After Ending Diet

By Louis Stern

THE joy that comes from stepping on the little bathroom scale and discovering that at long last the downward goal has been reached is understandably a high point, if not the highest, in the whole process of thrusting excess weight off the human frame.

If one should say that all human experiences which release feelings of gladness, nothing theretofore quite equalled this one, I would agree. My own feeling was one of thrill through my whole being as I stood on the telltale platform, eyes somewhat unbelievingly held at the mark to which the needle pointed.

I've been through it and I know. For those who stick to their dieting, there finally comes the sudden revelation on the little bathroom scale that the Reducing Road has reached its end.

It doesn't take a lot of gray matter to realize that the lesson of 2 plus 2 equals 4 can apply to more than just numbers. If what I ate before dieting gave me my original weight, which was too much, how long will it take a resumption of old eating habits to bring back the same overweight?

So, what to do? The simple answer is obvious: No resumption, from this point on, of the old eating habits.

I THINK it well to state now that my purpose here is to deal only with how to keep to a weight already achieved, not with the matter of proper foods.

It can be assumed that most readers, have, in the course of dieting, acquired knowledge about kinds of food considered best for health. Literature abounds on the subject, and so widespread, generally, has become the discussion about diet that I doubt whether many now do not have some idea of the health values of meat, fish, eggs, milk, fruit, vegetables, cheese, butter, oleo, et cetera. Only how to keep weight down is our theme.

Since calories are the guilty agents of excess weight—whether they spring from staples overeaten or foibles overindulged, or an overaddition of both—the resolve of no return to old habits must stand as the prime order of the day.

Whether the reducing regimen was based on a daily intake of 800 or 1000, or 1200 or more calories, obviously a trend must be stopped in its tracks. Now that a proper weight has been reached, an alteration must take place.

If the quantity of food you have been eating — the diet — brought your weight down, and the quantity eaten before dieting sent your weight up, then obviously a happy medium must be found somewhere between the two that will keep you at the proper weight just reached.

You cannot stick to the reduced quantities of the daily diet list because weight would continue to go down, and you can't go back to the quantities of pre-diet days, because weight would go back up and ultimately you would find yourself at the original point of overweight. You then would disgustedly give up the whole idea or, in despair, again face the task of reducing.

This exactly represents the dieting experience of many a history of downs and ups, and is precisely what we seek to avoid.

The happy medium mentioned must, therefore, be found and there should be a cautious increase in the amount of food eaten to find just the right amount.

What is meant by caution is really a sufficient degree of watchfulness, for one cannot go back to the careless pre-diet days of no restraint if weight is to be maintained.

But if restraint cannot be tossed to the winds, neither is it necessary to become its slave. What is involved is neither a slavery to restraint, nor a surrender to the flesh, but rather the exercise of a reasonable degree of restraint.

Hang onto the little bathroom scale. With dieting over, its use won't be so pressing, but as the means for an occasional checkup of what is happening weight-wise, it is the principal tool in weight control.

TO use the scale once or even twice a week is not only useful, but comforting as well. When you step on it and find the needle pointing to the right weight, it is reassuring; when it's up a little, it serves as an invaluable warning to cut down on intake for a day or two; if it points a little off, the pleasure of some extra nibbling is in order.

I do not advise stepping on the scale oftener than twice a week. Once a week is really enough to eliminate the risk of letting weight run up or off very much, but twice is the limit if it will make you feel better. To do so oftener is needless and encourages a slavish attitude.

By using the scale thus, the whole matter of weight control assumes more of the aspects of a pleasant game, with its little comforts, with its little disappointments, its little reassurances. There are no extremes, no drastic efforts, no inexorable, do-or-die tests of will; just a pleasant prospect like that of a beckoning day at the beach.

The rest is a matter of deportment. But there are several factors which help ease the path of weight maintenance for one who has just finished dieting and gotten down to a desired weight.

FOR one thing, a habit of more frugal eating has been formed which like all habit, will tend to stick, unless driven off by a persistent return to indulgent ways. Don't allow that to happen.

Too, mental outlook has become favorably addicted over the period of dieting to the healthful eating regimen. This includes kinds and quantities of food one has learned to consider best, and the times for eating.

The point is that, given the combination of good habits, wholesome outlook and the more favorable physical state which is the usual attractive lot of the "just finished dieting" dieter, it is easy to realize that one stands at a bridge propitiously placed for crossing over into a permanent realm of wholesome eating habits simply by continuing in kind, if not in degree, the good habits already formed.

At this point, let me deal with still another factor, perhaps the most potent of all for lending strength to resolve. It is that from now on you eat more.

If, before, will power had to be used and temptation resisted, because one wanted more food and some of certain kinds of forbidden food, there comes into the picture now the prospect of additional calories to help still appetite's devils.

There isn't a choice about it. The additional food must be eaten if the downward trend is to be stopped and weight maintained at its present level. The weight objective has been reached, and unless intake is increased, weight loss would continue. One would then become underweight, which is like overweight, undesirable condition.

I therefore stress this point: The path of weight maintenance is not harsh and forbidding and, as for embarking on it, there is no time like the present, when weight is just where you want it.

For our purposes here, let us use a daily intake of 2500 calories as a norm for maintaining weight. This is a good give-or-take average where activity is neither indolent or strenuous. I am not proposing that we live the rest of our days in an atmosphere of calorie calculation, but for the immediate purpose of illustrating how much more food can—nay, must—be eaten daily, 2500 calories may be used as an authoritative average.

It makes no difference to your weight whether daily eating is regular or irregular. Poundage just as surely springs skyward because of gorging at spaced meals of breakfast, lunch and dinner as from unrestrained nibbling throughout the wakeful hours. What you weigh depends not on how you eat, that is, method, but on how much you eat. Forays to the icebox or scheduled formality at candlelight tables have nothing to do with it.

For most of us, however, three principal meals are the usual thing and so, to illustrate further how much food we can eat and yet maintain weight, let us see what three average meals can look like in relation to our assumed daily average of 2500 calories.

For breakfast, let's have orange juice, corn flakes with milk and sugar, an egg (any style), two slices of toast, butter and jam, coffee with sugar and cream. Counting calories gives us: orange juice 80; corn flakes 80, with milk (whole) 150, and sugar 20 (well-rounded teaspoon); egg 75; two average slices of toast (enriched white) 150, butter (two thin squares) 40, jam (two teaspoons) 60; coffee with sugar 20, and cream (one tablespoon heavy) 50; total, breakfast, 725 calories.

FOR lunch let's have tomato juice, a ham sandwich with lettuce, mayonnaise and mustard, iced coffee with cream and sugar. Calorie count; tomato juice (⅔ cup) 40; ham sandwich, two slices bread (thin, enriched white) 100, ham (2 slices lean 4¼" x 4 x ¼") 265, lettuce (two large leaves) 5 calories, mayonnaise (1 teaspoon instead of butter) 35, mustard 5; iced coffee with cream 50, sugar 20; total, lunch, 530 calories.

For dinner, we may have chicken-noodle soup, salad with French dressing, roast beef, boiled potato with dab of butter, peas, apple pie, coffee with cream and sugar. Calorie count: chicken-noodle soup (average serving) 150; salad with French dressing (1½ teaspoons) 45, lettuce 5, tomato (⅓) 10; roast beef (three lean slices 2" x 3" x ¼") 195; boiled potato 100, with dab of butter (½ teaspoon) 15; peas (½ cup) 65; apple pie (3" slab from 9" pie) 200; coffee with cream and sugar 70; total, dinner, 855 calories.

At this point you may exclaim in wonderment that there could be so much food well within our 2500 calorie average. This is the very point I am trying to make. The total amount of food you can eat is surprising to many of us, and realizing that fact should go far toward infusing a vigorous resolve to keep weight where you now have it.

BUT until some idea is gained as to how much can be eaten without affecting weight, stay calorie conscious. It doesn't take long for the automatic reactions of habit to develop, and conscious calorie counting can then disappear.

An important principle of modern dieting is: Don't let yourself get too hungry. It should be practiced by all who wish to maintain weight.

The gastronomic pleasure of eating delicious, savory food to satisfy hunger does not escape my appreciation. Indeed, I am most partial to the experience. But there are degrees and degrees of hunger, and it is the ravenous kind to which the principle refers.

That kind just isn't good for weight control, or health either, and should be avoided. Hunger calls for satisfaction by eating; the hungrier one is, the greater the call. Consequently great hunger tempts one into overeating. A dull headache and distressful indigestion are the unpleasant twins, to say the least, of a stomach too empty. Avoid, therefore, allowing yourself to get too hungry.

Guest Takes Liquor Home With Him

By Emily Post

A READER writes me as follows: "My husband and I were invited to a large wedding reception recently at a hotel. A bottle of liquor was put on each table along with soda and ginger-ale, for the guests to help themselves. As very few of the guests at our table drank, there was quite a bit of liquor in the bottle. When it was time to go home, one of the men who was seated at our table took the bottle home with him. I was surprised at this but the other guests seemed to think it was quite all right. I would very much appreciate your opinion on this matter."

Answer: I thoroughly agree with you! It would be hard to imagine behavior more shocking than this.

DEAR MRS. POST: My mother, my fiance, his mother and I are going to receive guests at a party Mother is giving in honor of my engagement. My fiance is a stranger here and knows only a few of my best friends, and his mother is a total stranger. Will you please tell us the order in which we should stand to receive?

Answer: Your mother stands nearest the door, then his mother, then you, and then your fiance.

DEAR MRS. POST: The other day a friend and I went to visit another friend in the hospital. We took the elevator, which was a self-service one, up to the third floor. It was quite crowded and many of the passengers were women. I did not remove my hat and my friend took me to task later for not doing so. Will you please tell me if I was wrong not to remove my hat?

Answer: In a really crowded elevator the best place for your hat is on your head. Had the elevator been nearly empty, you should have taken it off.

Keeping Dogs From Freshly Planted Gardens

By Peter Boggs

MUCH neighborhood strife is caused by dogs romping or digging in freshly-planted gardens.

Most of such strife could be avoided by the use of simple common sense. If you fear that a neighbor's dog may dig in your garden, sprinkle some red pepper on the freshly turned earth after it has been planted. That will keep the average dog away.

Or, if you really are concerned, a fairly high fence of almost invisible thin chicken wire around the beds and borders will keep dogs out while the young plants get a start.

Or perhaps a request to a certain neighbor will do the trick. Ask that his dog be kept tied up because this particular animal has more than once been observed running through your garden. There is plenty of room in this world for both dogs and gardens if we all use just a little common sense.

WHEN A DOG eats grass, it doesn't necessarily mean that he is ill. A dog in the best of health will eat grass, and, strange as it may seem, such food is an important item in a canine's diet. It is a splendid tonic and conditioner and the animal himself knows best when his system requires it. We eat salads and green vegetables in order to give our system certain vital and necessary elements. Grass is the dog's salad course.

Seldom will a dog chew herbs that he himself has not uprooted, and there are only certain kinds he will eat. Never try to force your pet to eat grass, or select it for him. His natural instincts will tell him when and what grass he should eat.

THERE SEEMS TO BE a fad for sprinkling grated raw carrots through dogs' dishes of food, and some people are also pouring into such food the juice pressed from carrots. I noticed an article the other day saying that this was something new, but its essentials are not new at all. Thousands of dog men have been mixing bits of carrots in dog food for years.

Carrots are good for dogs, grated or as juice. They seem to be just as beneficial in the form of cut-up morsels. In fact, several kinds of vegetables, green and otherwise, mixed with regular rations are good for most dogs, especially in winter. These vegetables, however, do not include potatoes.

Marriage

Judging Of Men, Women

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

THE world needs more manly men and womanly women, but Mrs. D. isn't sure that she would want me to judge them.

"You write about bringing up boys to be good specimen of the male sex," she writes me. "I suppose your idea of a good specimen of the male sex would be a muscle man who is overbearing and domineering and who spends his life trying to keep women in their place."

I will take both sexes as they come, Mrs. D. What are the normal differences between men and women? There are several ways of measuring them, but the commonest one, used by Lewis M. Terman and Catherine Cox Miles, is to ask hundreds of questions of both sexes and see how the answers differ. For instance, they will ask: "Which of these two ideas appeals most strongly to you?"

"(1) To be sitting in the grandstand in the ninth inning of a baseball game, score 0 to 0, three men on base, and a famous slugger coming to bat; or

"(2) To be arranging a lot of beautiful flowers in a beautifully furnished room?"

OF COURSE, the great majority of men will vote for No. 1, women for No. 2. Thereafter, if a man votes for No. 2 he is considered to be in that respect, feminine rather than masculine in his outlook on life.

The differences which they actually found in this study at Stanford University were published in a large book. To take only a few conclusions having to do with emotional disposition, they report that:

"Men manifest greater self-assertion and aggressiveness, they express more hardihood and fearlessness, more roughness of manners, language, and sentiments.

"Women express themselves as more compassionate and sympathetic, more timid, more fastidious and esthetically sensitive, more emotional in general."

Men proved, generally, to have a more distinctive interest in exploits and adventure, in outdoor and physically strenuous occupations, in machinery and tools, in science, physical phenomena, and inventions.

WOMEN, on the other hand, "evinced a distinctive interest in domestic affairs and in esthetic objects and occupations; they distinctly prefer more sedentary and indoor occupations, and occupations more distinctly ministrative, particularly to the young, the helpless, the distressed."

Does all that sound reasonable to you, Mrs. D.?

Answers to Questions.

Q. I'M 35, married four years; my husband and I have been working to pay for a home, save money and prepare for a family. I'd like to stop work now for the latter purpose; he thinks I should work at least another year. Don't you think I have waited long enough?

A. Yes; childbearing may become more unlikely or more difficult each year after 35. You and he will have to work out the financial arrangements; but so far as the childbearing is concerned, any obstetrician will tell you "the sooner the better."

Q. I have a son, 18, tall and handsome, who thinks because I am 5 feet one and weigh 104 pounds, I'm helpless. He wants to boss me around as if I were a child. How can I assert my authority without conflict?

A. Why bother? If he'll accept responsibility, give him all the encouragement you can to act like a grownup. Most boys of 18 want to boss their mothers, even if the latter are 6 feet tall and weigh 200 pounds.

Q. After 20 years of married life my husband has suddenly become "blonde-conscious"; is always raving over women with blond hair whether it is natural or most obviously peroxide. I have thought of changing my own hair-color to please him, but my friends tell me I'm foolish to think of it. Do you agree?

A. This is a case where a mere man like myself ought to speak very cautiously. But if you want my vote I say, don't. You can find plenty of other and more natural ways to attract your husband.

Housewives: Organize Your Duties

By Ruth Millet

"I'VE got so much to do I don't know where to begin" is a frequent complaint of housewives.

When you reach that stage the best thing to do is to sit down and make a list of all the jobs that need to be done indoors and out.

Then divide the long list into three lists: 1) Those things that will have to be hired done. 2) Those that can be family projects with everybody working together. 3) Those things that you will have to do yourself.

SHOW THE LISTS to your family so they can see for themselves the necessity for everyone's pitching in on the family jobs.

Then get busy on the jobs that are yours alone and check them off as you finish them.

A housewife can worry and stew and fret for months when too many jobs pile up ahead of her. But in just a short time she can accomplish wonders if she gets the jobs well organized and enlists her family's help.

THE FEELING that there is more to do that she can possibly accomplish usually comes to the housewife who tries to do everything herself, who treats her family like star boarders and never attempts to organize family work projects.

It doesn't hurt husband and children a bit to help with special jobs. In fact, work shared gives the whole family a feeling of pride in their accomplishments and in their home.

Besides, a family that knows how much work is involved in maintaining a house and yard is likely to be less careless than are members of a family where the mother tries to do everything herself.

So get busy with your lists. Put your family to work helping you get out from under the load of too many waiting jobs.

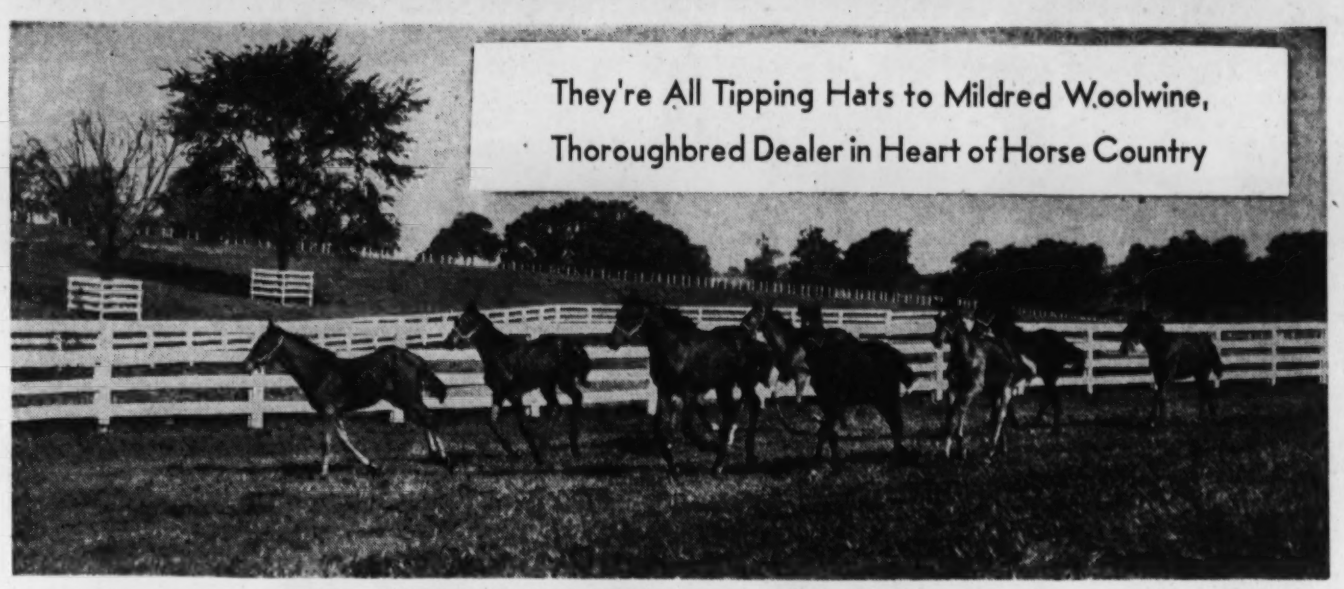
Beating Men at Own Game

They're All Tipping Hats to Mildred Woolwine, Thoroughbred Dealer in Heart of Horse Country



YEARLINGS FROLICKING ACROSS THE BLUEGRASS OF MRS. MILDRED WOOLWINE'S WHITE OAKS FARM NEAR LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.

By John Keasler

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 2—

A little gal from Lexington
Put up a healthy bet
And staggered Wall Street with the pile
Of profit that she net.

So let this be a lesson; if You'd win a betting bout
Forget your handicapping and Ignore the eager tout.

But put in with a trader from Kentucky's bluegrass soil
For playing nags the way they do
Is just like striking oil.

—RALEIGH S. BURROUGHS, Editor, Turf and Sports Digest.

MILDRED WOOLWINE is the aforesaid little gal from Lexington, a blue-chip player in a bluegrass game—a woman who moved into a field usually held down by men with cool and calculating eyes, moved in, earned their respect and, in passing, earned herself important-type money.

She, and her partners, bought up a batch of horses from the Woodward estate by sealed bid, turned right around and auctioned them off and fielded more than $500,000 profit which, to lapse into trade talk, ain't alfalfa.

The Woodward deal was an exception, one of those once-in-a-lifetime things. Miss Woolwine's year-to-year business consists largely of selling yearlings from the best possible stock. She, in effect, grows race horses from foals to auction, and her farm here is by way of being a nursery for colts.

MILDRED WOOLWINE'S story hinges on persistence, dogged intent to do the thing she felt cut out to do—breed thoroughbred horses. She started on nerve and borrowed money, bidding against six millionaires for her first mare, her beloved War Flower, and she's come a mighty long way since.

This Lexington area, Fayette county, this beautiful countryside of beautiful fields, a green canvas for the stark geometrical patterns of white fences, is the heart of the race horse country. Foals with ridiculously long legs tentatively foot the new world, yearlings toss their heads and, headlong, charge into the breeze—blindly satisfying whatever mysterious force it is that makes a thoroughbred race, to win.

It's horse country, and the folks here live for horses. When the Keeneland track is running, the hotel lobbies overflow with racing fans from all over waiting to get to the stands where studious humans pore over dope sheets. They talk with businesslike mien of complicated betting systems, while all the ghosts of horse players smile wryly; they make neat little check marks with carefully sharpened pencils, somewhat ludicrously adding up the incalculable.

But one facet of the uncertain fascination of the horse game is never known to most of the folks at the betting window, a facet where the stakes can be considerably higher—horse breeding.

This is not a game to be learned in a week, or a year. You keep learning. It's a business, scientific, closely studied; no place for the dilletante unless he happens to hate money and wants to get rid of it. These are the people who raise the racehorses, and one of those yearlings might be tomorrow's Nashua, one of those foals a Man O' War.

IT'S a high-stake game in the big, beautiful green arena of Fayette County with its spotless barns and its pampered horses. Mildred Woolwine came over from Nashville and some of her friends wagged their heads in pity, likening her unto a lamb to the shearing.

Heads still wag, but in admiration, not in pity, for Miss Woolwine now is known as one of the keenest in a canny crew, Kentucky horse breeders—those superstitious scientists who won't put their hats on a bed because that's bad luck.

Miss Woolwine's Kentucky home is White Oaks Farm, her 260 acres with its big white house, and big barns where horses dwell in immaculate comfort. We talked to her in her office off the living room, where two boxers and a pug hold forth.

While she was disposing of some other business we read a framed copy of the Racing Form on the wall; the double headline said: "Sea O Erin Best in Citation; Helioscope Suburban Victor."

These two horses which won two of the nation's top events were both bred at White Oaks, an event unlikely to the point of improbability when it is considered that White Oaks is, by no means, a large breeding farm, by comparison. Not size or volume, but quality, and the much discussed Woodward deal, is what pushed White Oaks to top-flight level among breeding farms.

THERE was a message in this framed copy from the Secretary of State of Tennessee, Miss Woolwine's home state, and it said: "Congratulations to a great gal—breeder of great horses—in full accord with her own tremendous courage and character."

Into the horse business came Miss Woolwine from a most unlikely background—the laundry business. Her father operated laundry and dry cleaning businesses in Nashville; Miss Woolwine, her mother and her sister-in-law still own those businesses and she makes frequent trips back and forth.

Her father, the late Sam Woolwine, also a tobacco man, loved horses and his daughter inherited that love. They rode together, regularly. The first time Miss Woolwine made an unscheduled childhood departure from home her parents found her in a neighborhood field — petting a horse. She learned to ride as a toddler, later won a Shetland pony.

Along with a love for horses she inherited a competitive spirit. She took a fling at raising purebred dogs, Russian wolfhounds, but it wasn't what she wanted.

"It was horses," she said, "I always knew that. I would talk to my friends about it—frankly, I certainly got no encouragement. But I studied everything I could find about thoroughbreds, everything.

"I figured with pencil and paper every yearling sold at auction. I was sure I could figure out how to breed horses and show a profit. Looking back I marvel at my own optimism."

She bought her first mare in 1940, for her White Oaks Farm, which was first in the Nashville area. Further study, trial and error—but always the fascination of it all.

In her own mind, her first real bigtime entry into horse breeding came in 1944 — she bought War Flower, the Man O' War mare.

HOWARD ENDICOTT . . . FARM MANAGER.

"I simply knew I had to have her," she recalled. "Maybe I had more enthusiasm than sense. I just kept bidding, and I'll admit my voice was a little shaky."

Six men, all of the gilt-edged persuasion, were bidding on that horse. The ante got higher than Miss Woolwine had expected. She kept bidding. It passed the limit she had set for herself. She bid on. It passed the few thousand dollars she had. And she kept bidding.

BIDDING stopped. She got War Flower, for a tremor-provoking $22,500, some of which she had to borrow.

"I later learned those six men had put their heads together, agreed to stop bidding," she laughed. "I didn't know that until years later. They had said, 'If she wants that horse that bad, let's let her have it.'"

And now about that having more enthusiasm than sense statement—don't put too much stock in it. The offspring of this one mare have totaled way over $200,000, with sale of her colts ranging in price up to $60,000 for one.

We went with Miss Woolwine out to one of the barns to meet War Flower, a dignified matron now, and Miss Woolwine hugged her and we didn't blame her one bit.

Miss Woolwine is a small, soft-spoken woman with the South in her voice and a pleasant, unhurried manner but you can sense a well tempered and resilient fiber. Skeets Meadors, a friend of hers, horse farm manager turned photographer, summed her up like this: "That little lady just doesn't scare."

She moved her horse farm to Lexington in 1949, first on leased property, now on her own. Horse breeders are a toughly competitive crew. Little quarter is given or asked. She would have to make or break on her own.

She chose the former, although she stresses that, despite the whopping prices she has gotten, she's not what you might call weighed down with surplus gold.

"A lot of money passes through this little office," she said, "but that's just the right phrase for it—passes through."

She said taxes, and winced when she said it, chop in heavily.

SHE got the keys to the Cadillac from the maid and we toured the farm where Howard Endicott, her efficient and knowledgable manager, oversees with a watchful eye.

She talks to horses, soothingly, knows each of their individual peculiarities. When an artist painted War Flower, Miss Woolwine was the one who figured out why the mare was so restless—she missed her barn buddy. So the second mare was led out for company and both stood quietly for hours.

Horses are big business; and Miss Woolwine, an alert business woman, is not one to get preoccupied with gooey sentiment. But as she drove around and walked around, she was the epitomy of enjoyment; she loves the business, obviously.

Miss Woolwine finds herself with three homes now; Nashville, Lexington and Del Ray, Fla., where she just bought a winter home. Also, she is a Tennessee colonel on the governor's staff, subject to such blessings as low license numbers. (Tenn. 88).

Does she bet the horses?

"Well, I have to put a little something down so they will know I believe in them," she said, laughing, and admitting her strongest leaning toward sentiment. She follows her White Oaks horses, after they are sold, as if they were her own. She goes to the big tracks and roots for the racers she remembers as foals. She seldom races a horse herself.

When there is a big event winner, she said, she's as excited as if the horse and purse were her own. She said she had never been prouder than of the double-barreled triumph of Sea O Erin and Helioscope.

ABOUT horse race names. They're not basically as odd as they seem to the layman. A good name tells as much as possible about the horse's forbears. And Miss Woolwine doesn't like what she calls 'silly' names. She said, "There has never been a great race horse with a downright silly name."

The breeding life of a mare starts about age seven, and eight foals is considered a fine lifetime production. Most famous stallions are owned by a syndicate. It is possible to buy an "interest" in such horses. Yellow jaundice is one worry about foals. Insurance premiums are steep on foals, costing 11 per cent of the value for the first 24 hours then decreasing on a sliding scale. Horse people argue furiously among themselves about the intelligence of horses, few insist they are smart as, say, dogs; many say a horse isn't exactly overburdened with intelligence.

The twice-a-year auction at Keeneland is a big event in the horse world. It is there Miss Woolwine's yearlings go up for sale. The atmosphere is quiet intensity, contained excitement —some of the oldtime horse-trading traditions are, indirectly, utilized. For instance, a buyer hoping for a low bid will, on pre-auction inspection, loudly bewail the most minute flaw of the yearling he secretly wants. Nobody is fooled.

It was at the Keeneland auction, where the horses are led down a long green carpet, that Miss Woolwine last January set the horsey set abuzz. Here's what happened:

The stock of the late William Woodward Jr. went up for sale after the New York socialite was shot and killed last year. The famous Nashua was among the animals sold. Miss Woolwine and her partners entered a sealed bid for 23 broodmares and 16 weanlings. (The stock was sold under certain classifications; they made no bid on Nashua. That horse, by itself, sold for a world record price of $1,251,200.)

MISS WOOLWINE'S partners were Edward Potter Jr., Nashville banker, and Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Middendorf of Boston. Their sealed bid was $410,000.

They got the stock, for the $410,000, on December 15. On January 6, less than a month later, they turned those horses into almost a million dollars, split up more than half a million profit. The stock brought $924,100 at the auction.

Segula, dam of Nashua, and in foal, brought $126,000. The auction was described as the most sensational horse sale ever held in America. Animals sold for prices like $84,000, $51,000, $49,000.

And when it was over the little gal from Lexington had nailed down securely her place in the trade; Nashville applauded its hometowner and Lexington took off its hat.

To quote further from Editor Poet Burroughs:

She took a pair of partners in
And said, "I see a spot,
Where we can make a modest bet
And win an awful lot."

To use the argot of the Turf,
I think I have a lock.
The gimmick is to bet the roll
Upon the Woodward stock.

At cashing time they called for Brink's
(Or someone else's) trucks
And carted off a profit of
A half a million bucks.

Mrs. Sam Woolwine, Mildred's mother, told us. "One thing about Mildred—she always has had plenty of nerve."

And nerve might well be the answer, but maybe it's because she knows so well how a thoroughbred should operate. She's having a fine time, in the business she loves.

We had never bet on a horse race in our life until after interviewing Miss Woolwine. Later, at a track, we made our first bet, with a novel system. Thinking of Miss Woolwine's license number, 88, we put $2 on Number Eight (and still don't know its name) to win. Well, Number Eight came in—and on our $2 ticket paid exactly $80.80.

Now this may all be coincidence but one thing's for sure. You won't catch us putting our hat on the bed.

Washington

Ten Top Women In D.C.

By Patricia Wiggins

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UP).

WHO are the 10 "most influential" women in Washington?

Even the most egotistical male admits nowadays that women in the capital play a very important — if sometimes subtle—role in government, politics and society. Some exercise their influence far longer than the men who come and go at the whim of the voters.

The 10 "most influential" women were picked in an informal poll of Wasington opinion. They include the First Lady, four politicians, three hostesses, a Government official, and the wife of a publisher.

Here, in no special order of importance, is the list:

Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower—named by everyone polled for obvious reasons: she has more opportunity than anyone else to influence the most important man in town.

Miss Bertha Adkins—said to have a "good telephone line to the White House." . . . Tall, dark-haired and quick-with-a-quip. . . . She is assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee. And the chairman, Leonard W. Hall, is often heard to ask, "What does Bertha think?"

Frances Knight—accurately pictured as a "smart cookie." . . . anything but a shadow of the passport office's former powerful chief, Ruth B. Shipley. . . . One month after her appointment last year the trim blonde trotted up to Congress with a request for $600,000 for a new passport office and top-to-toe reorganization. . . . She left with the cash.

AGNES E. MEYER—The wife of the chairman of the board of the Washington Post and Times Herald. . . . Her views are strongly felt in education and social welfare fields through her nation-wide speaking schedules and articles in her husband's paper. . . . Is frequently a witness before congressional education committees. . . . Is on a first-name basis with most of the town's top brass.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith —the only woman Senator, the white-haired lawmaker from Maine only uses her Senate rostrum when she has something to say. . . . When she does speak, she is listened to. . . . Member of Republican Policy Committee and the committees on Appropriations, Armed Services and Government Operations.

MARGARET CHASE SMITH . . . ONLY SPEAKS WHEN SHE HAS SOMETHING TO SAY.

Gwen Cafritz and Perle Mesta—these two share honors as the most influential, bipartisan hostesses. . . . Almost every official in town seems to consider an invitation from either a command performance. . . . Because of the makeup of their guest lists, one VIP says "Lots of discussions take place in their homes which undoubtedly have an end result in some kind of Government action."

Mrs. Katie Loucheim—blond, freckled director of women's activities for the Democratic National Committee. . . . Pet projects are convincing male politicians that women "aren't a foreign power" to be treated apart from men in politics; convincing women to get into the political swim. . . . In extensive grassroots travels she whipped up enthusiasm for fund-raising "Teas For TV" which has netted $40,000 in $1 contributions for Democratic coffers so far.

Representative Frances P. Bolton — Veteran Republican lawmaker from Ohio. . . . Copped some top House assignments since her 1940 start. . . . Third-ranking G.O.P. member on important Foreign Affairs Committee. . . . A "good friend" of the White House. . . . World-traveling widow on friendly terms with most of the capital's huge diplomatic corps which sometimes uses her to relay views to Administration.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman—known a "Daisy" to officials of seven Administrations, this tall, gray-haired Democratic stalwart still wields influence. . . . Second woman in American history named minister (to Norway in 1937). . . . Out of the Government now but still serves up elite "Sunday night suppers" in small Georgetown home. . . . The saying that "policy is made in her parlor" is still not far off the mark.

Classical Records

A Master Colorist

By Thomas B. Sherman

A GENEROUS and representative sampling of Maurice Ravel's music is offered in a recording made by L'Orchestre National de la Radiodiffusion Francaise with Andre Cluytens as conductor. It consists of the "Valses Nobles et Sentimentales," "Ma Mere L'Oye" and the "Menuet Antique" and as an extra dividend a chamber music ensemble plays the "Introduction and Allegro" for string quartet, harp, clarinet and flute. (Angel, one 12-inch LP.) Ravel's gift for descriptive and atmospheric writing are strikingly demonstrated in all these selections but "Ma Mere L'Oye" or "Mother Goose" is particularly charming. In fact as a musical representation of Perrault's fairy tales it is just about perfect. The color is laid in with the deftest, surest touch and the imitative effects are both explicitly descriptive and acoustically agreeable.

The "Valses Nobles et Sentimentales" suggest the more monumental and more systematically worked out "La Valse" in which the composer takes a somewhat ironic view of the waltz and its traditionally romantic connotations. Performances of all these works are smoothly blended, delicately inflected and well timed. The reproduction is highly favorable to differentiations of orchestral color.

OPERA: Mario del Monaco sings the star roles in a joint recording of Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" and Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana," the traditional gold-dust twins of opera. Del Monaco sings at par; that is he uses his trumpet-like voice with more generosity than artistic discretion. His associates are better artists with inferior voices. Clara Petrella is a satisfactory Nedda in "Pagliacci" and Elena Nicolai gives a strong, intense impersonation of Santuzza in "Cavalleria." The latter recording was made with the Milano Symphony Orchestra conducted by Fanco Ghione. "Pagliacci" is accompanied by the orchestra of the Santa Cecilia Academy in Rome with Alberto Erede conducting. Though the orchestral sound is excellent and the conducting shows full awareness of all the dramatic values involved in these works, the performances are no better than second rate. But this is not meant as a term of reproach; it merely indicates that it is not the best possible by going standards. (London, three 12-inch LPs with libretti.)

"Anush," an Armenian opera by Armen Tigranian is a definite novelty and a compendium of Armenian tunes with a folk-like character. The dramatic line is not strong; in fact the musical connective tissue is nothing more than a fairly simple orchestral continuo with songlike solos, duets and choral numbers strong thereon. The recording was made by soloists, chorus and orchestra of the Armenian State Theater. The recordings were pressed in this country from the original tape. (Westminster, three 12-inch LPs.)

PIANO: Maria Tipo, a young Italian pianist who played last year with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra brings an affecting tonal sparkle to her performances of 12 sonatas by Domenico Scarlatti. Unrelaxed control which makes for a clean, gem-like clarity of note and line comports with a complete relaxation of spirit. So these sonatas sound youthfully fresh and spontaneous. The reproduction is excellent as piano recordings go. (Vox, one 12-inch LP.)

TWO-PIANO: The two most interesting items in a selection of four pieces offered by Vronsky and Babin are Chopin's Opus 73 and the Schubert Fantasy Opus 103. The Chopin work was written at the age of 17, but revised much later. It is peculiarly lacking in that sweetness of content which one finds is so much Chopin; it is notable rather for its brilliance of movement and a generally youthful effervescence. The Schubert Fantasy is bound together by a typically mellifluous Schubert melody which is relieved from time by more serious and more imposing interludes. The Fantasy is played by Vronsky and Babin as a four-hand duet at one piano. In this as in the Chopin work their expertness indicates both a complete agreement of minds and discerning musicianship. They are equally adroit in performances of Milhaud's witty, though somewhat trifling "Scaramouche" which is representative of this composer's coffee house style. The fourth item is the "Concerto Pathetique" by Liszt. (Decca, one 12-inch LP.)

CHAMBER MUSIC: The mellow tone quality, incisive definition and generally fine ensemble shown by the Italian Quartet in most of its performances are again heard in a recording of two Haydn String Quartets, Opus 33 No. 3 and Opus 76 No. 4. The reproduction does justice to the distinctive timbre of this group. (Angel, one 12-inch LP.)

BEST SELLERS: "Paris" and "Sea Drift" by Frederick Delius; played by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, Thomas Beecham conducting; (Columbia, one 12-inch LP.) Sousa Marches, played by the Eastman Wind Ensemble, Frederick Fennel conducting. (Mercury, one 12-inch LP.)

The book by Herbert and Dorothy Fields tells how Annie, an Ohio backswoods girl, wins a shooting match from Frank Butler, the star marksman, and joins the show, but has to battle to win Frank.

Miss McCarthy was featured on Broadway in "Miss Liberty," "Small Wonder" and "Sleepy Hollow." She was a child actress in motion pictures. Miss McFarland played on Broadway in "Bus Stop," "My Three Angels" and "A Streetcar Named Desire." Miss Dunn recently danced in "Pal Joey" and "John Murray Anderson's Almanac" on Broadway. France had a starring role recently in the New York City revival of "Kiss Me, Kate." He was featured in "By the Beautiful Sea," "Seventeen," "Wish You Were Here" and "Pal Joey."

Improvements at the theater this year will include a new sound system, two new dehumidifying fans to augment the two now in use, and a new concrete roof for the upper pergola. Ten other shows will follow "Annie." The opera, in its previous 37 seasons, has presented 184 different operettas, musical plays and operas in 407 separate productions and 2854 performances. It has drawn a total attendance of 23,955,782.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

A KID FOR TWO FARTHINGS—Director Carol Reed has taken a color camera to teeming Petticoat Lane Market in London's East End and compiled a whimsical, sensitive and cheerful story of a little boy and his "unicorn" —a white kid with one horn—which grants the wishes of his friends, including a philosophical old tailor, a wrestler and his girl-friend. Expert handling of character in a Jewish setting, an affectionate humor and beautifully subdued Technicolor. The cast includes 6-year-old Jonathan Ashmore, Celia Johnson, Diana Dors, Joe Robinson, Davis Kossoff and Primo Carnera. SHADY OAK.

BHOWANI JUNCTION—Some exciting and seething scenes of mob violence and sabotage in turbulent India as the British prepare to quit it, from the John Masters novel. Ava Gardner as an Anglo-Indian caught in the middle is vivid and lushly exotic, although her acting sometimes falls short. With Stewart Granger as a tough British colonel who gets Ava in a soap-operaish ending. CinemaScope. LOEW'S STATE.

GABY—A remake of Robert E. Sherwood's "Waterloo Bridge," with the script retailored "cutely" to fit the talents of Leslie Caron as a French ballerina and John Kerr as a nice American paratrooper who meets her in London in World War II. Appealing up to a point, then it goes too saccharine for the attempted poignancy. CinemaScope. ORPHEUM.

THE PROUD ONES—Robert Ryan as a Kansas frontier marshal who finds his eyesight is failing, very embarrassing as it is just when he comes to a gun-point showdown with the town gambling czar. The only unusual angle in an otherwise conventional Western. Ryan is tough-looking enough to give some conviction. Jeffrey Hunter and Virginia Mayo are in it after a fashion. CinemaScope. ST. LOUIS.

THE MAN WHO KNEW TOO MUCH—Director Alfred Hitchcock has surpassed himself with a spine-tingling thriller about an American family caught up in a cloak-and-dagger plot ranging from Morocco to London. Excellently acted by Jimmy Stewart and Doris Day. VistaVision. MISSOURI.

THE SEARCHERS—The combination of Director John Ford and star John Wayne have come up with the best Western since "Shane," with sweep, rugged realism, VistaVision scenes like Remington paintings, and a robust humor, as it shows the bitter, relentless search for six years by two Texans for a girl kidnaped by the Comanches in a murderous raid. With John Wayne giving a top performance, aided by Jeffrey Hunter, Ward Bond and others. FOX.

THE NAKED NIGHT—Swedish picture on the familiar theme of a middle-aged man being made a fool of by a wanton young woman, done in a photographic style reminiscent of the silent film days, so gloomily arty as to be indigestable, and with sex heavily depicted. PAGEANT.

Dope Addiction Drama Sordid, Blunt, Candid

By Brooks Atkinson

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, June 2.

GIVEN some harrowing material to work with, Jack Kirkland has made it almost unbearably agonizing in "The Man With the Golden Arm," which opened at the Cherry Lane last Monday.

The material comes from Nelson Algren's novel of the same title. Reversing the usual process, it became a film before it appeared on the stage. Connoisseurs of the dope habit and of degradation in general complain that the film spares the sensibilities of motion picture audiences by refusing to face all the horrors of the novel.

Having trained himself to deal courageously with sordid subjects by dramatizing "Tobacco Road," Mr. Kirkland is not the man to spare anyone anything. This is a story of the Chicago underworld, where a highly skillful card sharpie — the man with the golden arm— succumbs to the dope habit, goes steadily down hill, inadvertently kills a man and finally hangs himself to escape dope, the police, his whining wife and most of all himself.

Although "The Man With the Golden Arm" has already been made into a film, Mr. Kirkland tells the tale as though he were also writing a screen treatment. He skips around from one quick scene to another as though he wishes he had a camera in his hands. He cannot resist local color, no matter how trivial it may be. He is in and out of police courts, gambling dens, saloons, cabarets and cheap hotel rooms as if he were making a cook's tour of infamy. Mr. Kirkland is more interested in achieving gaudy effects than in dramatizing a theme.

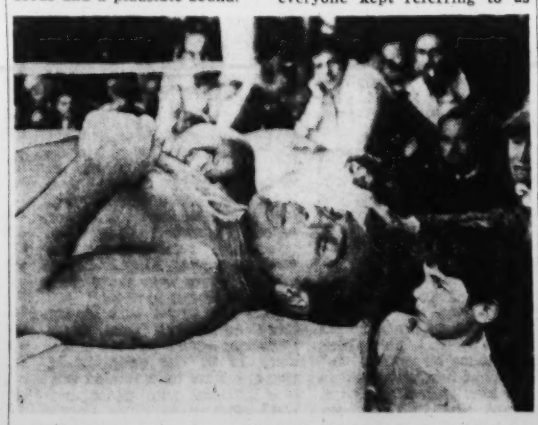
BUT THE ELEMENTARY quality of his craftsmanship does not destroy a story that seems both true and shocking. And the character of the man with the golden arm is well portrayed — not an evil man, but a slick, clever, easy-going man, who can never really shuck off the torments of his conscience and wallow in depravity contentedly. He is both charming and weak. His impulses are never vicious. On the whole, his impulses are generous. Although the subject may be morbid, Mr. Kirkland has kept it on a factual plane as if it were a commonplace disaster in a degenerate world.

In Louis MacMillan's stage direction, the principal parts are well acted. Robert Loggia as a handsome, swaggering hero of the underworld who loses his soul to drugs; Sidney Kay as his shiftless, tender-hearted pal; Peggy Feury as the crippled and vindictive wife; Dolores Sutton as a girl friend full of hope for the dope addict's reformation; Frederick O'Neal as a practical, sympathetic police captain; Gene Miller as a pitiless peddler of dope; Vincent Gardenia as a cheerfully cynical blind man— all these actors help to give Mr. Kirkland's scenes a sharp focus and a plausible sound.



PRIMO CARNERO ASSUMES THE SUPINE POSITION SUDDENLY IN A WRESTLING MATCH IN CAROL REED'S "A KID FOR TWO FARTHINGS" AT THE SHADY OAK. SIX-YEAR-OLD JONATHAN ASHMORE PIPES "YOU CAN'T WIN! MY UNICORN SAID SO."

Broadway Season Not a 'Boom,' Though Quality Up

By Jack Gaver

NEW YORK, June 2 (UP).

THE 1955-56 theatrical season ended officially on May 31. It has been a season that many observers have described as "the best in years" and one to which a national magazine recently attached the description, "Broadway boom," adding that it was the theater's biggest boom in a decade.

These are sentiments almost as extravagant as the stage itself, and they will bear some sober consideration.

"Best" may be appropriate in a certain restricted sense, but there has been no boom in the accepted sense of the word. There were, between June 1, 1955, and May 31, 1956, just 44 new truly commercial Broadway attractions. These were full-blown presentations offered as commercial enterprises without any limiting feature as to length of run aside from the economic. The miscellany of one-person attractions, limited-engagement repertory, City Center revivals and other such items is not counted.

This is the lowest figure in six seasons. There were 49 productions in 1954-55; 46 each in 1953-54 and 1952-53; 59 each in 1951-52 and 1950-51.

Obviously there hasn't been a boom in the number of productions. There is a possibility that the gross dollar intake at the box offices may be higher, but this will be no indication of a boom either—i.e., it will not necessarily mean that more customers are going to the theater, which is really the important thing. The increase, if any, will be mainly attributable to higher ticket prices, which have been sneaking up gradually in recent seasons.

A pointed example to illustrate that gross doesn't mean greater interest or patronage can be found in comparing the receipts of "South Pacific" and the current "Fanny" at the Majestic theater. "South Pacific" could take in no more than $51,000 weekly. "Fanny," playing to the same number of seats, grossed almost $63,000 at the height of its popularity. The difference was in a $6 and a $7.50 top price.

THE ONLY THEATER RECORDS that can mean anything today have to be based on number of paying customers and length of runs, not on dollars. Two current hit musicals, "My Fair Lady" and "The Most Happy Fella," have announced their top price will be raised from $7.50 to over $8 come fall. Costs of all sorts also keep going up, so the margin of profit is no greater.

Instead of calling the season "best," it would seem better to call it the most interesting in several years, for it was that. Even a number of the flops had merit and interest beyond the normal run of failures.

"A View From the Bridge," "The Young and Beautiful," "A Roomful of Roses," "The Righteous Are Bold," "Red Roses for Me," "Tamburlaine the Great," "Mister Johnson" and "The Lovers" were some of these.

It also should be noted that a few attractions which were well received initially and which everyone kept referring to as hits actually were never sell-outs beyond an early week or so. "A View From the Bridge," "The Chalk Garden" and "Time Limit!" were among these, and all three closed without paying off their production costs. "Tiger at the Gates," another highly touted work, just barely got into the black before it ended a run of six months.

THE PERCENTAGE of financial successes this season has not been higher than in recent years. Those that got into the black were: "Tiger at the Gates," "The Diary of Anne Frank," "No Time for Sergeants," "The Desk Set," "A Hatful of Rain," "Janus," "The Matchmaker," "The Great Sebastians," "Middle of the Night."

"The Lark," "Pipe Dream" and "Fallen Angels" have hopes of making the grade before their careers end. "My Fair Lady" and "The Most Happy Fella" haven't been around long enough yet to get off the nut, but seem certain to make large profits.

Three plays and five musicals were prepared for Broadway, but were closed before they could open here. They represented lost investments of between $1,750,000 and $2,000,000.

The season was below normal in the number of new musicals, only seven, because of the defection of the five cited above.

Glynis Johns Signs

HOLLYWOOD, June 2 — Glynis Johns, British actress co-starred with Danny Kaye in "The Court Jester," has been signed by RKO for one of the lead roles in "The Day They Gave Babies Away." She will be seen as the Scottish immigrant mother of six children who is widowed shortly after she takes up residence in Wyoming in the 1850s. Allen Riesner, who got his start in television, will direct the picture which is set to get underway late next month.

'Witness Prosecution' Hits 600 Mark

NEW YORK, June 2 — "Witness for the Prosecution," the Agatha Christie mystery starring Francis L. Sullivan and Patricia Jessel, hit its 600th performance last week, making it the longest run whodunit since "Angel Street" in 1945. The show closes after June 30, and will play the Biltmore in Los Angeles starting July 5; then the Alcazar Theater in San Francisco starting Aug. 6; and it will play in Chicago in mid-September.

'Magic Mountain' Finally to Be Filmed

HOLLYWOOD, June 2—The late Thomas Mann's novel "The Magic Mountain" is up for filming again. This time William Dieterle, the director, and Wolfgang Reinhardt, the producer, plan to associate in making a film version in Switzerland next fall. Several previous efforts, dating back to 1940, to film the famous novel about the hopes, aspirations and despairs of a group of patients in a Swiss tuberculosis sanitarium failed to materialize.

Advice to Young Actresses; How to Be Interviewed

By Joe Hyams

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 2.

WE have discovered to our horror that none of the dramatic schools in New York offer a course in how to meet the Hollywood press. That means that this year, as every year in the past, hundreds of young actresses are going to go to Hollywood equipped with dramatic ability but completely unequipped for the most important phase of their film careers—publicity.

As a veteran Hollywood correspondent we feel qualified to offer a few words of advice to the Hollywood-bound actress who may soon be facing her first newspaper interview.

The first thing to be considered is the type of impression the actress desires to make. Her clothing, make-up, form of speech and even her entrance are dependent on this. For example, if she's a graduate of the Actors' Studio chances are she will want to be considered "serious" and/or a "dedicated" actress.

She should not wear any make-up, should dress in blue-jeans, an old man's shirt and shabby flat shoes. She should be on time for the appointment, should shake hands firmly with the interviewer to establish at once that she is meeting him on equal grounds. Horn-rimmed glasses are a good prop for her. If possible she should arrange to have the interview conducted in her own apartment (furnished with a Japanese mat for sleeping) or at the studio commissary, where she should order a salami sandwich.

She should precede answers to all questions saying, "At the studio we. . . ." When asked if she expects to remain in Hollywood she should say, "I'm here for just one picture. I want to be free for 'theatuh' as that is where an actor can express himself."

After half an hour she should glance at her watch and announce, "Forgive me, but I'm late for an appointment with my analyst."

NEXT LET US DISCUSS the actress who wishes to be considered a new Marilyn Monroe.

She has two choices in clothing: too little or too much. If she wants to create the impression of smoldering sex, she should wear a tight turtle-necked sweater. On the other hand, if she wishes to be considered a threat to Miss Monroe she should wear a low-cut off-the-shoulder blouse.

The interview should be conducted in her dressing room at the studio, furnished in vivid colors and heavily scented with perfume. She should never be interviewed at meals because it is too difficult trying to be glamorous at the same time she is eating. She should be at least an hour late for the interview.

She should precede answers to all questions by saying "Uhhh," moistening her lips and smiling slightly. During the interview she should occasionally pause open-mouthed and stare at the interviewer as if discovering for the first time that he is a man.

She should terminate the interview by saying, "Forgive me, but I'm late for an appointment with my analyst."

James M. Cain Has Written New Play

NEW YORK, June 2—James M. Cain, who is one of the top screen writers and the author of such best-sellers as "The Postman Always Rings Twice," "Serenade" and "Mildred Pierce," has written an original play. Entitled "The Guest in 701," it is a melodrama which takes place in a New York hotel.

Cain came to New York from his home near Baltimore to confer with Robert L. Joseph and Jay Julien on the possibility of a Broadway production.

Several seasons back, Joseph and Julien joined forces to present "Mademoiselle Colombe." Last season they functioned separately, Joseph with "Tiger at the Gates," Julien with "A Hatful of Rain."

How many original plays Mr. Cain has written is a moot question, but this would be the first to reach the stage. Actually, he started writing plays back in the 20's when he was working on the old "World," but found himself unfamiliar and unsuccessful with the medium and soon turned to light fiction.

He dramatized "The Postman Always Rings Twice," which was produced in 1936, with Richard Barthlemess in the role later played by John Garfield in the screen version.

Tom Ewell Comedy

HOLLYWOOD, June 2—Anne Francis will co-star as the wife of Tom Ewell in the Metro comedy, "Father's Little Leaguer." The story is about a father who endeavors to form a closer relationship with his 10-year-old son by managing a Little League team. The picture will get under way June 11.

Paul Gregory to Film 'Naked and the Dead'

HOLLYWOOD, June 2—Paul Gregory, theatrical and film producer, will make five motion pictures to be financed by R.K.O. Radio Pictures. The program is scheduled to be worked out over a period of three years, with the first undertaking to be an adaptation of the Norman Mailer novel, "The Naked and the Dead." Gregory acquired rights to the book late in 1954. He plans to make the film on location in the South Pacific, using locales which served as the setting for the World War II book. Earlier Gregory announced "The Naked and the Dead" would be made under the banner of Gregory-Goldman Enterprises, but the producer recently terminated his association with William Goldman. They made one film, "The Night of the Hunter," which United Artists released.

Is Cookery On Way Out In Kitchen?

By Edith M. Barber

RECENTLY, a man who is an expert in at least one of the food fields, stated that cookery was on its way out in the home kitchen. He prophesied that women were interested nowadays only in prepared foods. From my own Experience, I take issue on this.

I do not go so far as a reader who recently wrote me that she objected to my article that mentioned, "Cake mixes are here to stay." According to her, "They are dead and mortified," and she quotes a well-known cooking specialist. She goes on to say, "There is nothing that compares with a butter cake for flavor and freshness."

I agree with her that there is nothing better when a tested recipe is used and followed exactly. The proportion of the ingredients as well as their quality must be exactly right for good results. I have had homemade cakes offered me that could not qualify as first-rate. Probably the balance of schortening, sugar, flour and baking powder was improper.

These points are all taken into consideration by the manufacturers of good cake mixes. Like my correspondent, I enjoy making a homemade cake occasionally. Working with the ingredients gives me a satisfaction many cooks share. At the same time, I do not discount the place that a mix has in helping to solve that three-meal-a-day problem.

CREAM FILLING: Two-thirds cup sugar, one-half cup flour, one-eighth teaspoon salt, two cups scalded milk, two egg yolks, one teaspoon vanilla extract, one-half cup heavy cream, whipped.

Mix sugar, flour and salt in top of double boiler. Stir in scalded milk gradually. Stir over hot water until mixture thickens, cover, and cook 10 minutes. Stir in egg yolks quickly, one at a time, and continue stirring over hot water one minute. Cool. Fold in vanilla extract and whipped cream. Place between cake layers, or split a cooled angel food and place between layers.

Note: For chocolate filling—Melt two squares chocolate with the milk, and increase sugar to one cup.

For the lunch-toters with hearty appetites, prepare a sandwich of chopped corned beef, chopped onion, chopped dill pickle and tomato juice. Spread filling on caraway rye.

Great Season for Reruns

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, June 2.

IF you missed anything on television this season, you will probably get to see it this summer. This is going to be a great summer for running everything all over again, as was—come to think of it—last summer and the summer before. These rheumy old eyes can recall when the summer shows were a period of tryout, when young comics like George Gobel cut their eyeteeth and sharpened their techniques for a try at the big time in the fall. But all that was long ago. Of course, the way television burns up material, the idea of reusing kinescope or film was inevitable but it's going to make a tough summer for those of us who earn a living commenting on what's on the air. It would be pleasant if we could just rerun some of our old columns but editors, I'm afraid, would not take kindly to the idea.

We'll just have to scrounge around the reruns, hoping to find something that didn't strike the eye the first time. There are, of course, many excellent shows during the regular season that I'd thoroughly enjoy seeing again—some of the better plays, some of the documentaries, some of the better Sid Caesar or Gobel sketches—but somehow these things never get repeated.

WHAT DOES get repeated is—well, here is a partial list of NBC reruns for the summer months: "Medic," "Dragnet," "Life of Riley," "People Are Funny," "It's a Great Life," "Loretta Young Show," "Fireside Theater," "Big Town," "Screen Director's Playhouse," "Father Knows Best," "People's Choice," "Ford Theater," "Star Stage," "Captain Gallant," "This Is Your Life," and "You Bet Your Life."

Apart from the Groucho Marx show there isn't much there I'd like to see again. As a matter of fact, many of these shows had the unmistakable air of being reruns the first time around.

Among the big NBC shows that go off for the summer, "Caesar's Hour" will be replaced by the Ernie Kovacs show July 2. It'll be sort of wacky variety with a little more production than his daytime show. The Robert Montgomery drama Monday nights will be succeeded by his summer show which generally means the scripts will be a little lighter in tone and substance. Just as we are supposed to like light reading in the summer, so we are supposed to demand lighter TV drama—a theory I have never found supported by any evidence at all.

The slot Tuesdays usually sacred to Milton Berle, Bob Hope and Martha Raye will be occupied jointly by "Dear Phoebe" and "The Paul Whiteman Show." "Playwrights 56" that night will be replaced by another drama series sponsored by Kaiser Aluminum which ought to be pretty good. Worthington Miner will be executive producer in company with three of the best director-producers in the business—Franklin Schaffner, Fielder Cook, and George Roy Hill.

PERRY COMO will be replaced by a succession of other singers, including Patti Page, Julius La Rosa, and Tony Bennett, from June 15 to Sept. 8. Gobel will be replaced by something called "Encore Theater" and you can bet your bottom dollar those will be reruns. About the only genuinely exciting thing on the NBC summer schedule will be the new Steve Allen show which will replace the NBC Comedy Hour on June 24.

Over on CBS, that network's powerful Sunday night lineup—Ed Sullivan, Alfred Hitchcock, "$64,000 Challenge," and "What's My Line," all stay on for the summer but otherwise the story is pretty much reruns and more reruns. Among the reruns will be Burns and Allen, Phil Silvers, "Navy Log," "Twentieth Century-Fox Hour," "Four Star Playhouse," Jackie Gleason, "Our Miss Brooks," "Playhouse of Stars," and "Gunsmoke."

About the only new entrants on CBS-TV will be two half-hour situation comedies—one starring Charles Farrell which will have a Palm Springs setting and will replace "I Love Lucy," and "Joe and Mabel," a comedy series that CBS has been trying to find a spot for all season long.

Big Problem: Money

Husband Is Sweet, But Won't Pay Bills

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I AM becoming desperate. My big problem is money, or the lack of it. I have been married five years and have a beautiful baby and a husband I love deeply. He is sweet and loving but he won't pay bills. In the five years of marriage we have gotten in debt. He makes a fair salary but won't spend a cent of it unless forced to do so. We owe many people and with tears and pleading I've given him money to pay some of them but others are still unpaid and are over a year old. Last year our baby was rushed to the hospital for an operation and that set us back plenty. Now the hospital has notified us that it is starting legal proceedings. Martha, I am living a life of terror. Every time the mailman comes or there is a knock on the door I'm afraid to answer as nine times out of 10 it's someone wanting to be paid. I have begged my husband to let me get a job but he says my place is at home. Last year I told him I'd leave him and take the baby. He reformed for awhile but things are worse than ever now. He gives me so little household money that I'm going without a meal a day in order that our baby can have the food she needs. I have sold much of our furniture to pay bills. My pastor has suggested a budget counselor but my husband will have no part of that. I have no money for legal advice but I do need help. Please tell me where I can go for help before my marriage and my nerves give out. A.

Maybe if you arranged for your husband to miss a good dinner occasionally, rather than make all the sacrifices yourself, he would realize how desperate the situation is. But he is responsible for the support of his family, so as rough and nerve-wracking as it is to see bills in the mailbox and a collector at the front door, just keep referring all of them to him and refuse to open those window envelopes until he gets home and can face them himself. However, even if he won't seek budget counseling, it would help you a great deal and support you in whatever steps will be necessary to preserve your home and your health to seek professional assistance on your own. At such an agency as Family and Children's Service or the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, you can find counselors who will gladly work with you and analyze your whole situation so you can see what would be best to do under the circumstances. Don't try to carry the burden alone.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 26 YEARS OLD and live with my parents. I have been dating a boy who is the son of some good family friends. He is a fine person, Martha, but I don't love him and yet his parents and my mother are trying to persuade me to marry him. They point out that he has a good job, is attractive and cares for me and say nothing else matters. But I think they're wrong. I don't believe mere attraction and security—as important as they are—are the only things to be considered. I want to marry a man I can respect as well as love, with whom I share mutual interests, who has the same convictions I have about how to make a marriage worthwhile and truly happy. This boy has no respect for my religious beliefs and laughs at what he calls my "starry-eyed idealism." I'm tempted to go away where I can lead my own life without parental interference. What do you think? MISERABLE.

Don't let anyone ridicule your idealism. Stand by your convictions. Your letter certainly reflects a mature concept of marriage and I hope you won't let yourself be pressured into a marriage that you instinctively know would not be right. If you have no obligations toward your parents which would make it wise to stay at home, I think you might consider a job elsewhere. However, it isn't necessary to turn your back on your parents and their counsel in order to be independent. Even though I agree your mother is wrong in this case, she undoubtedly is motivated for the most part by concern for your happiness. Remember, too, that you should be grateful for a wholesome home atmosphere which apparently gave you the good basic philosophy you are displaying in this case and which will help you continue to make wise decisions as an adult.

Dear Martha:

● WHAT IS THE MATTER with our feminine population? Why do they love to hang on the telephone? Just read where a woman's home burned down because the women on her line would not get off. When one calls a friend, she does so because she has time to spare. That doesn't mean that the person called has time to spare. Why don't they use their heads and say to themselves perhaps Mrs. So and So is head over heels in work or has to go somewhere? I like to talk to my friends on the telephone also. But I don't like to hold the conversation for a half-hour. Some of my friends call late in the evening. As there are several of us at home, some retire earlier than others and the jangling of the telephone does not do them any good. It's about time that women got next to themselves and learned to limit their conversation over the phone so it will be agreeable to the one called as well as to the one who does the calling. MRS. J. S. M.

You're right. Telephone manners are just as important as face-to-face courtesy, and when a person telephones another for a friendly conversation, he or she should ask first if it's convenient for the other to talk. The telephone is a great boon to mankind, of course, to be used to bring joy and friendly greetings as well as business conversations or emergency messages. But because of those possible emergencies, it's important to be considerate and not keep the wire tied up too long on meaningless chit-chat. Just another of the many opportunities to apply the Golden Rule.

Dear Martha:

● I AM GOING STEADY with a boy whom I intend to marry in a year. We have exchanged class rings as we are both out of school. My mother does not approve of my giving him my ring but has no objections to our marriage. Should I ask him for my ring or just let my mother disapprove? He is leaving for active duty next month. CONFUSED.

I don't understand why she would disapprove of exchanging rings as long as you plan to be married. But if she does have some serious objection, why not talk it over with your fiance, explain the situation and perhaps you can give him some other gift, an identification bracelet, or a cigarette case, in place of the ring.

A TWO-PIECE SUIT DRESS FOR THE SUMMER TRAVELER HAS A GORED SKIRT AND A FITTED JACKET WITH CRISP INTERLINING OF PEPLUM, COLLAR AND CUFFS TO KEEP IT LOOKING WELL-PRESSED.

By Sylvia Stiles

THE summer traveler who has a wardrobe that is the envy of her contemporaries may have an "inside" story to tell. This story concerns the way she packs her clothes, and the clothes she selects for packing.

Luggage designers are revising their ideas as to what constitutes perfect packing cases because the travelers, themselves, have contributed their suggestions on the basis of their experiences. Today we have an increased number of the long, flat cases that require a minimum of folding of garments, and versions of the "car case" that folds or hangs upright as the owner finds more convenient. Many of the large flat cases no longer have stiff interlining but use the new "wonder unders" of Pellon to keep them lightweight. Small cases utilize plastic containers for all toilet articles, not only because these are lighter in weight but are non-breakable. Synthetic materials are used extensively in the materials of the cases.

When it comes to gadabout clothes for summer, the designers have utilized many new fabrics that are crease-resistant and lightweight without sacrificing diversity of styles and silhouettes. Not only are there dress fabrics in abundance this summer that may be packed carefully with a minimum of creasing, regardless of pleated skirts or bouffant hemlines, but there is a recognized appreciation of the recent invention of pellon for light interlining to reduce creasing. Women who make their own clothes became familiar with the pellon even before most women who purchase ready-made clothes because the fabric retailers have demonstrated its merits and suggested its use.

As an example of the way this type of lining enables a traveler to have a wardrobe varied in silhouette without danger of arriving at the journey's end with a badly mussed conglomeration of clothes, typical costumes are shown. Especially noteworthy is the printed evening dress with the back accent—a type of dress that formerly would have been left at home because of the difficulty of packing. Pink pellon is used to underline the skirt, so that it springs back into shape after packing.

With the special linings, it isn't necessary to pack full petticoats for full-skirted dresses—the lining takes the place of the petticoat. Many designers creat a stand-out effect with the lining and help the traveler solve her packing problems. As for that special care in packing which makes it possible to include more clothes in the allotted space as well as to assure the neat appearance of all garments, this packing advice provided by the creators of the pellon material may prove of value:

1. Don't pack at random but assemble first your entire travel wardrobe. Study the complete lineup in relation to the things you plan to do, then start eliminating. There usually is something that should be left at home.

2. Invest in a shoe bag for every shoe, a waterproof case for cosmetics, lightweight plastic bottles for liquid toiletries, a fabric stocking case, and four padded hangers for your best clothes.

3. When you are certain you have everything you need and nothing that you do not need, place your biggest dress at the bottom of the suitcase, with the padded hanger in the shoulders. Fold the skirt inward from each side and fold the bodice on top. Push the hanger toward the center of the suitcase just enough to clear the edge. From then on, reverse the packing so that the shoulders alternate at either end.

4. After packing two or three garments, arrange a row of shoes in their bags at the back of the case with the soles against the case. The lining in the skirts will keep creases from forming permanently, and the shoes will flatten the clothes to provide more room.

5. Lay a piece of tissue paper next, then arrange a layer of lingerie and small accessories. Top with another piece of tissue paper or a handy, thin layer of cleansing tissues. This can be lifted out as a unit and into a hotel drawer.

6. Now repack the rest of the clothes in the same way, with shoes placed at either end of the suitcase the next time. Do not pack shoes at the front of the case because the weight forces unnecessary wrinkles into the clothes.

7. Top your suitcase with your first necessities, such as your dressing gown and slippers.

Answers to Housewives' Questions

By Dorothy Brainerd

CURTAINS, silverware, decorating problems and food — of such things are a homemaker's world composed, and of such things do we write today in response to inquiries from readers.

Writes Mrs. B. H.: "Please help me; I washed two pairs of nylon panels and they turned out all wrinkled. I have tried every way to get them smooth; I stretched them on curtain stretchers and tried using a steam iron, but to no avail. I also have tried starching them."

Sorry, but once wrinkles have "set" in nylon it is difficult, if not impossible, to remove them. This frequently happens if the nylon is wrung or spun too hard.

I am afraid that I have nothing to suggest if the wrinkles would not come out with a steam iron.

One reader wrote me that she washed her nylon curtains and then hung them on the line and turned the hose on them, and let them hang and drip dry with the happy result that she got no wrinkles. I have not tried this nor have I heard of it except from her, but she assured me that it really helped.

Has anyone else found a solution for removing these wrinkles? If so, do let us in on the secret.

MRS. D. L. McD. is unhappy about her flat silver.

"I have cared for my sterling tenderly, for it is one of my prized possessions," she explains. "Lately, I have noticed small black pit marks on the stainless steel blades of the knives. I've heard that salt will do this to silver, but why would it happen to stainless steel blades? Is there anything I can do to prevent this in the future? I've had the silver about six years, if that makes any difference."

Occasionally salt or vinegar will have this effect upon stainless steel blades in sterling handles, although it is the exception to the rule. This is just one of the reasons why homemakers are urged to wash their silver as promptly as possible after a meal.

What is more probable, however, is that these blades are silver plated and not stainless steel. During World War II it was common practice to put plated blades in sterling knives, purely as a war measure because stainless steel was a priority item.

In either event, if you will take the knives to a good jeweler they can have the damage repaired.

MRS. V. L. C. of Florissant writes that she has an enamel lined iron pot which she wants to use at one side of the fireplace as a planter, but the handle and outside are rusted in spots.

"After the rust is removed, can you tell me how to get a dull black finish, such as old iron cooking vessels have?" she asks. "Also, can you suggest what I might use as a base, since the pan is flat on the bottom and I thought perhaps it would be more attractive if I raised it slightly."

As long as it is not going to be subjected to any heat, a flat black paint which comes in a spray can should give you the desired effect. You might raise the pan by placing it on an iron trivet or, if necessary, on two trivets placed one at each end.

AND NOW for the question on food. It came from Mrs. G. W., who writes:

"I wondered if you could tell me how to take salt out of margarine, and whether it has less calories than butter?"

We passed this inquiry along to the National Assoc. of Margarine Manufacturers, and quote the reply:

"We do not know of any way of taking salt out of margarine short of some carefully regulated melting and refining process.

"You are correct in your understanding that all fats such as butter and margarine contain the same number of calories. Shortening however, contains more calories. The reason is that butter and margarine are 80 per cent fat, or about 3300 calories per pound while shortenings are approximately 100 per cent fat.

The letter also suggested that Mrs. W. get in touch with a certain company in Arkansas, where such a product is available.

We are not permitted to give you the name of the company through the column, Mrs. W., but if you care to send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope I will be glad to send it to you.

MRS. L. G. V. has purchased some bamboo shades and now wants to finish them in some way.

"They are inside bamboo slats, and we would like to know if we can stain or varnish them satsifactorily, or if they would warp."

They can be stained very nicely if you use a regular canvas awning stain, Mrs. V. If you were to paint them it might make the cords brittle so that they would crack, but the stain should work quite well.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of this newspaper. She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Rock Hudson to Be In 'Something of Value'

HOLLYWOOD, June 2 — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will borrow Rock Hudson from Universal to co-star in "Something of Value," a dramatization of the Robert Ruark novel inspired by Mau Mau uprising in Africa. Hudson will play the role of Peter McKenzie, a young South Africa farmer who grows up with a native who joins the Mau Mau.

Secrets of Charm

Always Be Fastidious

BATHING is a luxury every woman should enjoy. In her quest for charm, good looks, and well-being, the fastidious woman must master immaculate cleanliness.

One cannot be clean, sweet and completely feminine unless a daily bath is a habit. In warm weather the skin needs more-often-than-usual bathing. Normally, the body perspires constantly . . . at the rate of one quart of moisture daily. Perspiration tends to clog the pores and spoils the fine skin texture if allowed to dry on the skin or clothing. It may become unpleasant, and it is especially objectionable when the body is toxic.

The bathtub is an important aid to glamor. A clean skin is a younger skin. It has been said that our American habit of frequent bathing is one reason our women of fifty look younger than European women. New skin is constantly being made while the old skin is constantly being sloughed off. This dead material must be washed away. Keep a bowl of plain, rough salt in the bathroom. Give yourself a quick rubdown with it before stepping into the tub. Moisten it slightly with a damp wash cloth. This will loosen all the little scaly, dried skin particles.

After bathing, give yourself a brisk rubdown with a big soft

Turkish towel. All this will wake up your sluggish circulation after a night's rest, and your skin will glow all over. It is important to keep the skin of the body soft as your face so complete with a rubdown with a good body lotion.

A new, lighting calculator that tells you how to compute your own individual ideal weight. Write to Secrets of Charm in care of the Post-Dispatch, enclosing 10c (in coin) and a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Ask for "How Much Should You Weigh?"

Medicine

When Worried Persons Visit the Doctor

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D.

MORE than you realize, people come to their doctor with problems that don't seem to have anything to do with medicine. They wonder if they are in the right place for advice. And yet, what better place than a doctor's advice for peace of mind as well as for strenrth of body?

Lately, at least, we have come to realize that the mind is an integral part of the body. As one goes, so does the other.

I recall a girl in her twenties who came in a few years ago wondering if I could help. She had wanted to come months earlier, but thought that a doctor's office was not the place for her. At last, not knowing where to turn, she made an appointment.

"My trouble is this," she said. "I can't seem to stay in one job more than a few weeks. My bosses like my work well enough. It's always my decision to leave and look for another place. It all begins with my being so sensitive.

"Whenever I see two girls' heads together I am sure they are talking about me. I begin to shiver and blush and get so nervous I have all I can do to finish out the day. From then on my days and nights are horrible. Rather than go on living like that, I look for another job, hoping I'll find a group of people who will not make me feel so insignificant and timid. But the same thing always happens."

THIS GIRL was sent to a psychiatrist. After sympathetic and understanding treatment, she improved. She is still shy but normal enough to be holding down the same job for about two years. And what's more, she is engaged to the office manager.

Many more who ask for the doctor's advice do so hesitatingly. People think we doctors have room in our day only for heart and cancer patients. I keep telling people this is not so. Doctors prefer to see the "little things" in disease (mental or physical) rather than be faced with unsurmountable problems.

Along the same lines, here is a letter I received in today's mail: "I don't know whether mine is a question for a doctor, but if something isn't done soon I will need a doctor for physical reasons.

"I am unable to make or carry on a conversation and am thereby losing a friendship which I value very highly. This friend has told me frankly that she gets nothing out of being with me.

"Feeling that there is nothing I can do about it has me in such a state of misery I am almost ill. I am not by nature a fluent talker and have always suffered from an extreme degree of shyness. When I am with two or more persons I remain silent, speaking only when addressed directly.

"If I am asked what the news is I cannot think of anything to say, though I have just read the paper. And when I go to a play or hear a sermon I cannot comment on it.

"I am 47 and of at least average intelligence: read, write poetry, have completed a book manuscript, am interested in music, psychology, animals and people. I say 'people' last because my greatest mental suffering has come through personal conacts.

"Must I be cursed with being inarticulate for the rest of my life? Dr. Steincrohn, if you can help me you'll be saving my life, for I feel that I cannot go on this way." Miss V.A.

ANSWER: I believe you have already taken a giant step towards recovery. And I use the word "recovery" advisedly. You will agree that you are more than just shy. Call it sensitive if you will.

But your feelings are like the branches of a tree. Its trunk takes root deep down in your conscious. Whatever I say or may try to do to help will be ineffectual. Whatever you try to do at this stage will not help either. What you need to know and discover is what it is "that is eating you."

That's not my job nor yours. I think it belongs strictly in the sphere of psychiatry. I have seen so many (not all) patients like yourself helped—but only by being put on the right road by a psychiatrist. Otherwise, like you have been doing, patients flounder helplessly. Patients fight their weakness courageously; but if they are not given the true direction of recovery, they travel in circles of frustration and discouragement.

This is the best advice I can give: go to somebody who is trained to give better advice than I can. And please remember that I am offering you no easy and sure cure. How well you do will depend not only upon your doctor — but upon how much gumption you bring to the effort.

Eddie Foy Repeats

HOLLYWOOD, June 2—Eddie Foy Jr., currently appearing on Broadway in "Pajama Game," will repeat his role as the pajama factory foreman in the movie edition of the musical to be sponsored by Warner Brothers. Filming is tentatively set to commence in the early fall, and the plan is for Foy to step out of the stage cast only long enough to do the movie.

Offer to Buy Republic For $8,125,000 Up

HOLLYWOOD, June 2 — An offer to purchase the working control of Republic Pictures Corp. at a price of $8,125,000 to $10,000,000 has been made by Cantor, Fitzgerald & Co., Incorporate investment bankers of Beverly Hills. The company announced it has obtained a 60-day option to buy at $12.50 per share all the stock held by Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic, as well as the shares owned by a number of his associates. A minimum of 650,000 and a maximum of 800,000 shares are involved, it was stated. The shares covered by the transaction represent more than one-third of the 2,000,000 issues of Republic stock outstanding.

In addition to studio facilities here and distribution offices in many parts of the country, Republic also owns Consolidated Film Industries, Inc. The latter is a film processing company, with laboratories here and in New York. Consolidated has been doing boom business, developing black-and-white as well as color prints of films for theatrical and television use.

Republic, it became known this week has canceled all production plans for a period of at least three months. Both studio and home office employes in New York received layoff notices, effective last week.

Two Movies About Three Personalities

HOLLYWOOD, June 2 — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be competing with 20th Century-Fox in bringing out a movie about a woman with three personalities. In the pre-wide screen days, producers were content to settle for characters with only two personalities.

Metro got into the act by agreeing to sponsor distribution of "Lizzie," to be produced by Bryna Productions, independent company owned by Kirk Douglas. Eleanor Parker will be the confused heroine of the screenplay written by Mel Dinelli from the novel, "The Bird's Nest," by Shirley Jackson. Miss Parker will be required to portray a woman with two hysterical personalities and a normal side in the film. It is scheduled for production in August.

Fox was the first with the announcement it would make "The Woman With Three Lives." Nunnally Johnson, who will write, direct and produce the psychological drama, is developing his screenplay from a clinical report presented in 1953 by Drs. Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Clackley. It is scheduled to be published in book form soon by McGraw-Hill Co. under the title "A Case of Multiple Personality."

Brod Crawford to Star in War Film

George Burns Back

HOLLYWOOD, June 2 — George Burns, busy with radio and television these many years, will put in a brief appearance on the screen—his first since 1944—in Columbia's adaptation of "The Solid Gold Cadillac." He will take part in a sequence about the daily doings in Wall Street which will open and close the picture, starring Judy Holliday and Paul Douglas. The comedian's last movie work was in "Two Girls and a Sailor," produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Rod Steiger Film

HOLLYWOOD, June 2—Rod Steiger, now vacationing in Europe, will star for R.K.O. in "Run of the Arrow," to be directed and produced by Samuel Fuller. Photography is set to commence June 18, with Steiger portraying an embittered Confederate army soldier who fires the last shot in the Civil War. He then goes west, joins a Sioux tribe, marries an Indian girl and continues a one-man war against the Union.

Nervous Tic In Girl; Is It Inherited?

By Frances L. Ilg, M.D., and Louise Bates Ames, Ph.D.

"SYLVIA is 4½ years old. Lately we have come up against a problem that to us is tragic. She is having nervous tics, such as eye blinking and nose twitching. We have consulted our family doctor and his advice is calmness, rest and occupation and it will pass away.

"I was afraid to have a child because I had always, since childhood, had these tics and was afraid a child of mine might inherit this weakness. Many doctors assured me this was not so.

"From the first, Sylvia was a tense baby, suffering from pyloric spasms until she was past four months old. Then at about six months of age, she developed a terrible fear of people to an extent which I would call extreme. My husband and I have analyzed each other's manner and neither of us can figure, except for my own nervous tics, a reason for this inner tension which must be present to cause her to do the same.

"THESE BOUTS of nervous tics can occur for a few minutes and then not happen again for hours or days. They can come when she is calm, or over-excited about something. We can't pinpoint the cause. We never call her attention to it, but do try to divert her attention. We try to give her as much rest as possible and keep her away from any upsetting situations.

"I have had this all my life. Doctors assured my parents that if they were calm and didn't harp on the matter it would pass away. But it never did. What do you advise us to do? What do you think is the cause?"

WE'RE AFRAID that we don't entirely agree either that your daughter's tic-ing is not inherited, or that it will soon stop. We have found that this very type of behavior you describe often is inherited, and often continues for a long time. The very tension that produced pyloric spasms is related to your daughter's total personality.

But this doesn't mean that she can't work through these tics. She may express them in different ways at different ages. Eye-blinking is very common at 4 years of age. As you say, it often seems not to have any specific relationship to what is going on.

You, of course, will feel tense when you see her tic-ing and will want to do something specific to help her. Actually, the less you do the better. Growth is on your side, and you have to sit back as much as you can and let it take its course. What we like is to see the form of the tic change from age to age. Then the child doesn't get stuck in one pattern which becomes a habit.

YOUR DAUGHTER seems to be in an excellent home situation and she seems to be thriving. Now, whether the greater demands of school and learning will produce further tic-ing we can't say. Sometimes a child like this does better in a small private school.

The important thing is that you don't attack the behavior directly. You just do everything you can to make the child's life comfortable and relaxing but, if possible, interesting. If the behavior hasn't improved by the time she is seven, you might like to seek more specific and individual help.

Bolero Jacket

The bolero jacket is proving its worth as a little wrap for cool days. Knitted versions and numerous cotton types are available this season. Pique and linen are materials used frequently for the separate boleros which may be obtained at the blouse departments. A small amount of yardage is needed to make one of hese frief jackets. Patterns are simple so that the sewer need not be an expert. Embroidered linens, eyelet embroidery, cotton damask, and all-over flowered cottons are among the fabrics to consider.

Proper Way to Sew Laces Is Outlined

AS AN aid in sewing, the Lace Institute offers suggestions on the proper way to sew laces. Most laces have a right and wrong side, the side on which the cord outlining of the pattern stands out or lies on top is the right side. Three easy ways to seam laces are:

Stitch twice and then trim close to second stitching.

Finish a regular seam by binding it with a fine net for more strength.

To prevent a seam from showing, the design of the two pieces may be matched, laid flat on the right side of the sewing machine and stitched around the pattern. It is then trimmed, thus giving the appearance of a continuous design.

In applying lace by hand to another fabric, best results are obtained by using an embroidery applique stitch which will enable the one sewing to catch the net and patterned portions.

When using lace for a trimming, a fine overcast stitch catching the lace edge and fabric is most successful. Along the sewing edge there is a thread that can be pulled to shirr the lace, saving extra operation of shirring the lace by additional stitching. In machine stitching, the stitch on the machine should be regulated by testing before sewing. Often, in seaming two pieces of sheer lace, sewing a piece of thin paper with the lace prevents puckering and gives an even line of stitching. The paper can be removed easily after the seam is completed.

When lining a lace garment completely, the lining and lace should be treated as one fabric. Delicate lace often is lined completely with net or a sheer fabric to give it more body.

Bloused Look

The bloused look is increasing in fashion importance. Shirtwaist dresses for summer wearing have given an impetus to this trend. Not only have the bodices bloused at the waistline, but big sleeves have accentuated the bloused line. For fall, overblouses that blouse over wide waistbands are scheduled as are jackets with this same silhouette. Middy types that have drawstring at the hipline also are in accord with such a fashion.

Alliances Popular

Alliances of black and white are increasing in popularity for summer. Not only are there many cool-looking fabrics in this combination but accessories also emphasize the vogue. White calfskin pumps trimmed with black patent leather are typical. These may be chosen with matching handbag. White gloves have black stitching as another evidence of this fashion.

Dark Plaid for Sports

Dark summer plaid sports clothes featuring the Black Watch pattern are popular for summer. Shirts made of this plaid cotton are paired with matching shorts or skirt, or are attractive worn with a white canvas skirt. White cotton gabardine shorts also are worn with the plaid shirts.

Different Versions Of Printed Cotton

THREE different versions of the carefree Bandana printed cotton are featured this season for swim suits, sun dresses, separates and sheaths. The most casual of the three varieties called "bandwagon bandana" lines a cotton poplin raincoat that has a bandana scarf tucked into the pocket. It also is used for a swim suit with cuffed bodice and little-boy shorts.

Another bandana print group has been named "bandana split" and includes a group of separates featuring a white Chino car coat lined with the print, a slim white Chino skirt and a Bandana blouse with full white skirt. "Royal Bandana," the third group is a sophisticated adaptation of the print and is done in two versions: a striped print and a circle print, each fashioned into a blouse, skirt and sundress. The Bandana colors are the traditional bright red and dark navy.

Coat Dress

The coat dress made of black and white checked cotton is a practical addition to the summer wardrobe. Sheer cottons as well as the heavier ones are available. A sheer gingham, for example, is an excellent choice for town wear on a hot summer day. One dress, moderately priced, is belted across the back.

Carol Goessling Married At Church to E. S. Gatch II

THE marriage of Miss Carol Catherine Goessling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Goessling, to Elias S. Gatch, II, highlighting the early June season, took place at noon yesterday at the Church of the Annunziata. Msgr. Charleville B. Faris performed the ceremony. Red roses arranged in huge bouquets in gold vases stood in the sanctuary and greenery banked the altar rail. The side aisles were softly lighted with seven-branch candelabra while the center aisle, down which the wedding party proceeded, was covered with delicate pink.

The former Miss Goessling wore an ivory-toned satin gown. Heirloom rosepoint lace from her mother's wedding gown was appliqued over the molded bodice forming a deep neckline and short sleeves. The voluminous skirt featured back fullness extending into a petal-shaped train. More rosepoint lace fashioned the bride's veil which, arranged in madonna style on her hair, fell over a long, full tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Attendants for the bride carried armsful of red roses. They were her sister, Mrs. Peter Hamilton Bunce (Gail Goessling), matron of honor, and their cousin, Mrs. P. Taylor Bryan III (Diane Goessling), Mrs. Thomas F. Eagleton (Barbara Smith), Miss Carol Gissy, Miss Joan Macken, Miss Donna Smith, and the bridegroom's two sisters, Mrs. Joseph A. Hellmuth, Wellesley Hills, Mass., and Mrs. Edward T. Powers, Old Greenich Conn., bridesmaids. Gowned alike, they wore beige lace sheaths over taffeta in the same shade. The dresses, which featured deep, round necklines and short sleeves, were worn with matching taffeta headbands with flat bows at back.

Miss Elizabeth Jamison Smiley Is Bride of Townsend Foster

ATTENDED by her six godchildren, their ages ranging from 14 down to 3, Miss Elizabeth Jamison Smiley was married yesterday evening to Townsend Foster of Utica, N.Y. The setting was, weather permitting, the wide pillared porch of Second Baptist Church, large colonial mansion at Clayton and McKnight roads, formerly the L. Wade Childress home. In the event of a spring downpour the wedding was to move to Ladue Chapel.

To accommodate several hundred wedding guests the broad lawn was covered with rows of chairs facing the house, while the bridal party proceeded down the red brick walk from Clayton road to the porch. The Rev. Dr. Leon Robinson performed the ceremony in the front doorway where the pulpit was moved for the occasion from the chapel inside. Greenery blanketed the portico and two tall standards holding bouquets of white peonies marked either side of the pulpit. The organ was also moved to a room upstairs so that its music, played by Howard Kelsey, could be heard over the lawn from second story windows.

The bridesmaids were Miss Stannye Musson, 14, of Louisville, Ky.; Susan Ekberg, 12; Susan Caspari, 9; Ellen Griesedieck, 8, and Anne Taussig, 5, all dressed alike in crisp lace frocks over aqua organdy skirts, which were short and full. Tiny bandeaux of yellowed-centered daisies crowned their heads and they carried colonial bouquets of the same flowers. The sixth godchild, Alexander (Sandy) Podmaniczky, who is 3, wore a white suit and served as ring bearer.

Honor attendant was Mrs. Frank J. Pollnow Jr. who wore aqua lace with a large filmy hairbraid hat. Her gown was designed with an off-shoulder neckline, tiny cap sleeves and very full terrace-length skirt which flared from an empire waist emphasized by a double band of matching velvet ribbons, simulating a cummerbund, and ending in streamers down the back. Johnson-Howell Church Wedding

MISS BARBARA ANN HOWELL became the bride of Stanley Wright Johnson Jr. last night at Union Avenue Christian Church with the Rev. Dr. G. Curtis Jones performing the ceremony by candlelight. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert William Howell, 7171 Waterman avenue, University City. Mr. Johnson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley W. Johnson, came from their home in Henderson, Ky., for the wedding.

Both aisles were marked with tall lighted candles which were repeated at the altar between bouquets of white flowers against a high mass of greenery.

Mr. Howell gave his daughter in marriage. Her chantilly lace and tulle gown was fashioned with a short-sleeved bodice, the square neckline studded with iridescent sequins. The lace and tulle skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a fingertip illusion veil, gathered to a band of pearls and sequins, and carried a bouquet of white rosebuds and stephanotis.

Miss Susan Sommerick was maid of honor and Miss Janet Bentrup, Mrs. Ernest Hazel III and Miss Margaret Dillingham, Shreveport, La., the bride's roommate at William Woods College, were bridesmaids. They were in white eyelet embroidered ballerina dresses over ice blue taffeta. A band of taffeta accentuated high waistlines and came to a point at back in a large bow. The young women held white lace fans adorned with blue ribbon and white spring flowers and wore a band of the blossoms in their hair.

Stanley Roger Smith, Greenville, Ill., the bridegroom's roommate at Washington University, was best man. Ushers were the bride's brother, John McWilliams Howell; Mack Lee Hunter, Henderson, and Frederick Joseph Simmons, Monroe City, Mo.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Howell gave a reception at the Gatesworth Hotel. She wore a beige linen sheath dress, a small matching hat and a corsage of yellow and brown orchids. The bridegroom's mother chose a powder blue taffeta and lace costume, a white hat and a corsage of lavender orchids.

After a wedding trip in the South, Mr. Johnson and his bride will live here.

pale blue shantung sheath gown with a lace bodice. Her blue straw hat was trimmed with blue and lavender flowers on the brim. Orchids matching the flowers formed her corsage. The bridegroom's mother was in navy blue chiffon with which she wore a matching chiffon pillbox, trimmed with veiling and white orchids.

A green and white striped marquee partially covered the garden. Guests were received before a stone wall covered with roses shading from dark red at one end to pale pink at the other. Small tables for the guests were adorned with red carnations and rose trees bearing red blossoms decorated the front porch. The buffet table was centered with a white epergne from which spilled a profusion of white spring flowers.

Here for the wedding were an aunt of the bride, Mrs. George B. Barnett of San Francisco, and her son, William H. Barnett of Kansas City, Mo. The bride's brother, Paul H. Goessling Jr., who completed his final examinations at Princeton University, arrived late in the afternoon.

Mr. Gatch and his bride will spend their honeymoon at Sea Island, Ga. They will return here to live in an apartment in Clayton.

Miss Schoknecht Late Spring Bride Of Dr. R. R. Dewey

MISS JUNE LOUISE SCHOKNECHT, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Schoknecht Jr., was married yesterday morning in St. Luke's Catholic Church to Dr. Richard Ryder Dewey. Her brother, Henry A. Schoknecht III, came from Walnut Creek, Calif., to escort her to the altar. The Rev. John Freiberger performed the ceremony in a setting of white blossoms and palms.

Mrs. Phillipp Strittmatter (Mary Woodruff) was matron of honor and Miss Nancy Statton, Fulton, Mo., Miss Gloria Sims, Moberly, Mo., and Mrs. Thomas F. Brown (Janice Dewey), Saugus, Mass., were bridesmaids. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Dewey of Elizabeth, N.J., the bridegroom was attended by Dr. James R. Green Jr., best man, and Dr. Daniel B. Moore, Dr. Edward S. Moore and Dr. Malcolm L. Peterson, ushers.

The bride, a nurse at Barnes Hospital, wore a white taffeta gown made with a short-sleeved, moulded bodice, the neckline trimmed with seed pearls and crystal beads, and the expansive skirt ending in a chapel train. A veil reached her fingertips from a jeweled coronet. The bride carried a prayerbook topped by a white orchid.

The bride's attendants were gowned alike in white embroidered organdy, self folds forming scooped necklines bound in red velvet ribbon which continued in streamers down the back. Matching red velvet bands were worn in their hair and red carnations were combined with white button chrysanthemums for their bouquets.

After the ceremony was given at the Missouri Athletic Club with Mrs. Henry A. Schoknecht III and the bridegroom's mother receiving with the wedding party.

Miss Smiley Bride Of Townsend Foster

maids she carried yellow-centered white daisies.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Charles Douglas Smiley, 2 Wydown terrace, Clayton, and the late Mr. Smiley, was escorted by her uncle, Woodlief Thomas of Minneapolis. Her summery gown of chantilly lace and tulle was fashioned with a molded torso-length bodice of lace appliqued on tulle over satin buttoning up the back. The wide round neckline extended into soft cap sleeves and the fluffy full skirt was finished with a deep circle of lace at the knees below which a shirred tulle flounce tapered into a short train. A fingertip illusion veil held to a crown of orange blossoms completed the ensemble and the bride carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

The corps of ushers who seated the guests included the fathers of the six children in the wedding party — the Rev. H. Sheppard Musson, Louisville; J. Paul Ekberg Jr., Charles E. Caspari Jr., Joseph E. Griesedieck, Frederick Taussig and Charles Benjamin Podmaniczky; J. Douglas Streett and Dr. William H. Masters. Mr. Foster had as his best man his son, Scott P. Foster, of Utica, and as groomsman his brother, H. Torrey Foster of St. Louis. They are sons of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Orson Foster of Utica.

Immediately after the wedding a small number of relatives and close friends reassembled for a reception at the Smiley home, where large boughs of huckleberry and masses of summer flowers—daisies, larkspur and delphinium — were used in decorations. Mrs. Smiley's gown had a white lace bodice with short sleeves and a beige tulle sheath skirt with which she wore a pink lace hat and a pink orchid corsage.

Coming from out-of-town for the wedding was the bridegroom's cousin, Mrs. Norton Reusswig of Ridgewood, N. J., and from Louisville, Mrs. Musson, who accompanied her husband and daughter.

The bride, who is known to her friends by the initial of her first name, will receive her B.S. degree from Washington University this month. A former debutante and maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball, she is a graduate of Community School, John Burroughs and Bennett Junior College, Millbrook, N.Y. She belongs to the Junior League and the National Society, Colonial Dames of America.

Mr. Foster, also known by his first initial, has another son, Townsend Jr., who is in the Army. The bridegroom is a graduate of Cornell University and a member of the Utica Curling Club, the Fort Schuyler Club and the Yahnundasis Golf Club, also in Utica. He and his bride will go directly to Utica where they will live in his recently-built home and July 1 will take a trip thrpugh the Scandinavian countries.

Island-Hopping Doctor Cares for 40,000 Scattered Over Bahamas

Physician Travels by Plane, All Kinds of Boats — Business Leaders Formed Group to Finance Him.

NASSAU, Bahamas, June 2 (AP)—There's an island-hopping bush doctor here who regularly servies a region approximately the size of New England.

Dr. Stevan George, 56-year-old mild-spoken, British physician and surgeon who took his medical degrees at Glasgow University, is constantly on the move among hundreds of islands scattered over 70,000 square miles of ocean. He is the only doctor for many of the 40,000 people who live on these islands, some of them tiny spots of land that are little more than big sandbars.

They are the outer islands of the Bahamas chain—British-owned, sandy islets that begin a scant 50 miles off the coast of Florida.

Dr. George travels by plane, mail and freight boat; he hitchhikes on millionaire yachts headed his way; and he sometimes sails in Bahama native sloops, small sailing vessels that carry tiny cargos of vegetables, fish and maybe a goat or two. Often he must wade ashore at his destination.

Dr. George was brought to the Bahamas by a group of Nassau business leaders who formed an organization they called Community Welfare. There are a few scattered, resident physicians here and there in this island chain—very few. But the majority of the people cannot reach a doctor.

It was for them that Community Welfare brought Dr. George to the Bahamas.

With the limited funds at their command they brought a traveling clinic and dispensary—two packing cases—into being.

Dr. George carries his "hospital" with him from one island to another. He'll plan a week's visit to one of the major groups, avoiding the few areas where there might be resident medical service. In a typical seven-day period spent touring the Abaco group—a primitive outpost of civilization only 100 miles from the United States mainland of Florida—he treated 412 patients and emptied his dispensary case of medicines.

Typical of his stops was Grand Cay, a tiny community of thatched huts, fishing nets and graceful palm trees. Here willing hands helped set up his clinic in a little church.

First in line was a tall, elderly native who complained of a backache. Although he was 76 years old, it developed he still worked actively as a crawfisherman, delving into the sea all through the day for the succulent crawfish which sell in the markets as rocktail lobster. Vigorous and continuing exercise had taken its toll, and he was suffering from lumbago.

"Take it easy," the doctor told him. "You are no longer a young man." A liberal supply of alleviating medicine, with instructions, was given him.

Patients filed silently into the church. The line dwindled finally and, long after dark, Dr. George leaned back to smoke a cigarette. But even as he smoked a fishing cruiser came in from Walker's cay, an island a dozen miles away, with nine more patients.

In all, he saw 42 patients, some with trivial complaints, some with quite serious medical problems.

So it was for a week—travel from one island to another, open up his clinic, treat an average of 10 patients an hour, then back to boat or plane and on to another isle.

Some patients offer a few shilling but the doctor courteously refuses them telling them they may send a contribution to Community Welfare if they wish.

Time Out of Joint.

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 2 (AP)—Air force rebels who engaged in an Amazon jungle revolt last February got a break in their recent amnesty. Their flying time against government forces will be computed in their merit promotion records.

AMERICAN RED CROSS SESSION OPENS TODAY

Plans to accelerate and simplify American Red Cross services will be formed at the agency's seventy-fifth anniversary convention, opening today at Kiel Auditorium.

Increased efficiency is needed to meet problems of population growth and today's rapid communication systems, E. Roland Harriman of New York, national Red Cross chairman, explained.

About 5000 delegates from all parts of the United States, its territories and Cuba are expected to register. They will meet and discuss talks on how technological advances have opened new horizons for the Red Cross's disaster work, blood uses and other services to members of the armed forces and veterans.

Today's projected activities, in addition to registration, include tours of "The Family of Man" photographic exhibit at City Art Museum, open house beginning at 2 p.m. at the Midwestern Area Headquarters office, 4050 Lindell boulevard, and a reception starting at 8 p.m. at Kiel Auditorium.

The convention, which will continue through Wednesday, will include an "international relations" luncheon tomorow at 12:30 o'clock at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson.

Speakers will be Bonabes de Rouge, Geneva, Switzerland, secretary-general of the 75-nation League of Red Cross Societies, and James T. Nicholson, Washington, D. C., Red Cross executive vice president.

College and Junior Red Cross members will begin their activities today with visits to Washington University, Fontbonne College, Concordia Seminary, St. Louis University and the Schools of Medicine of Washington University and St. Louis University.

Miss Nina Kassing of Fontbonne and Miss Jay Milne of the University of Missouri will address the members' dinner Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. at the Jefferson. National Junior Red Cross speaker at the dinner will be Carolyn Caskey of Independence, Mo., a third-year high school student.

FREE X-RAY PROGRAM AT COUNTY NURSING HOMES

More than 30 nursing homes in the county will be surveyed tomorrow through June 15 in a free chest X-ray program of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis in cooperation with the County Health Department. Remaining homes will be visited in August.

Dr. John C. Murphy, county director of chronic disease control, said the survey was being made to determine whether the local area adheres to the patterns of the national tuberculosis trend.

He said it was revealed in a recent magazine article that the majority of patients in tuberculosis hospitals 15 years ago were young persons and the principal problem was enforcing some degree of bed rest. Now, the majority of patients in hospitals are over 40 years old and more than one-fifth are 60 or older, he said.

STATE PROHIBITION PARTY TO CONVENE HERE TOMORROW

The Missouri convention of the Prohibition party will be held here tomorrow at the Lighthouse Free Methodist Church, Tower Grove and Norfolk avenues.

Speakers at day sessions will be Virgil C. Finnell of Winona Lake, Ind., executive secretary of the party's national committee, and Earl Dodge of Boston, a national field representative.

Tomorrow night the speaker will be Dr. E. A. Holtwick of Greenville, Ill., this year's candidate for President.

Englishman Going Without Sleep For 48 Years Shows No Ill-Effects

Farmer Has Tried Everything From Counting Sheep to Slumber-Inducing Sedatives.

By WALLACE HULLETT

LONDON, June 2 (INS) — Sleep, the balm of the weary, has eluded Eustace Burnett, a 78-year-old retired English farmer, for 48 years, with no apparent ill effects.

Burnett has tried everything to induce slumber—sedatives, hard work, intensive study and even counting sheep—in an effort to drift into blissful insensibility.

The long hours of wakefulness have given Burnett a philosophical outlook. At his 12-room rambling house at Hose, a quiet village near Melton Mowbray, Leceistershire county, Burnett said:

"At first I was irritated, annoyed and then worried. I had read of people suffering from insomnia who had ended up by committing suicide.

Doctor Laughs.

"But my doctor laughed at me and said that I was 'not the type' to do such a thing. He said 'Don't worry, just relax.'

"Today, I don't even bother to go to the doctors. Apparently there's nothing they can do about it and it just seems a waste of their time."

Burnett explained that he had "slept like a top" until he was about 28 years old. Then spells of wakefulness increased from one night a week to two nights and by the time he was 30 to perpetual consciousness.

In 1954, Burnett went to a hospital for a week but the doctors were baffled.

A nurse was constantly by his bedside and Burnett neither nodded nor slept although on one occasion he was given a sleeping draught of double strength.

Burnett's handicap has been a boon to the adult members of the 450 population in Hose to whom he is known as "Ewi." One villager explained:

"You can call at Ewi's house any time of the day or night and you will be sure of an answer. Whenever we have any problems we always go to Ewi."

Burnett turned his big house into an air raid warden post at the start of World War II and villagers agreed that he could always be found on duty.

He has devoted his 420,480 hours of wakefulness mainly to reading, gardening, village affairs, and more lately, to watching television.

"I suppose I get through about 10 books a week, apart from newspapers, and keep up with affairs of the day," he said. "I have nothing special in taste but the book or magazine must be interesting.

"It makes me laugh when people say they feel tired because they were late going to bed the night before.

"Sleep is only a habit—you can do without it."

A doctor who attended Burnett said:

"Lack of sleep does not appear to have interfered with his health. I wish I had more healthy patients like him."

Burnett has lived alone since his wife died. He said:

"When I was younger I did wish I could sleep like other people. I used to work in the fields until late at night until I almost dropped with fatigue. But directly I hit the pillows, I was wide awake again.

Trained to Relax.

"I have now trained myself to relax and think pleasant thoughts when I lie on the bed and the time passes serenely."

Asked how life seemed without sleep and what advice he could give other people suffering from insomnia, Burnett said:

"Life without sleep is wonderful. My advice to those who suffer from lack of sleep is the same as the doctor gave me 48 years ago:

"'Stop worrying. You'll remain fit if you stop worrying and learn to relax.'"

Stringfellow on Lecture Circuit After Hoax Cuts Political Career

Admission of Falsifying War Record Cost Him House Seat — Utah Mormon Rebuilds His Life.

OGDEN, Utah, June 2 (AP) — Tears streaming down his face, Representative Douglas R. Stringfellow faced the telephone cameras and radio microphones.

"Here are the facts," he told his audience from Salt Lake City that dramatic night of Oct. 17, 1954.

"I never participated in any secret behind-the-lines mission for our Government.

"I never captured Otto Hahn or any other German physicist. . . ." He struggled on through speech, fighting to control his emotions.

Only a few moments, Stringfellow had stood as an inspiration for thousands of Americans—a patriotic, articulate veteran who had overcome terrible wartime wounds and now was a respected member of the United States House of Representatives.

Rewards of many kinds had fallen upon the Congressman, then only 32. The National Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1954 had named him one of the country's 10 outstanding young men. He held awards from the Freedom Foundation and the American Legion. He was one of the best paid lecturers on the circuit and gave as many as 200 talks a year. He had been the surprised star of the television program, "This Is Your Life."

War Record Challeneged.

But in October of 1954 the Army Times — an unofficial Washington publication said in print what long had been rumored: that Stringfellow's war record was not all he claimed.

As late as Oct. 16, Stringfellow, campaigning for re-election, denied the charge. He called the attack politically inspired.

But suddenly, the next night, the strange case of Douglas Stringfellow reached its climax: "I come before this radio and television audience tonight a humble, contrite and very repentant individual. I have made some grievous mistakes for which I am truly sorry. . . . I wish before my Heavenly Father that I might undo this wrong. I ask your forgiveness and I assure you I will spend my lifetime repenting and trying to make amends. . . ."

Several days later Stringfellow withdrew as a candidate for re-election. The Utah Republican party chose Dr. Henry Aldous Dixon as a last minute replacement. Dr. Dixon campaigned and won. Stringfellow dropped from sight.

But how now? What is a lifetime of repentance like? Could Stringfellow without protest exchange his place in the sun for a lifetime of obscurity? And his wounds—from a land mine in France—were real. He would walk only with the aid of canes and a heavy brace on one of his two paralyzed legs. How—still crippled—would he support his wife and family?

Discusses New Life.

In an interview to discuss his new life, Stringfellow at first was reluctant.

Then he started to talk of himself, prodded by an occasional question.

"I made a serious mistake and I faced up to it in the best way I knew how," he said. "Things snowballed. I was guilty of planting the seed, then it got magnified. But I was guilty of tampering with something important to the American people—patriotism."

He told of closing his affairs in Washington, returning to Ogden and starting to look for a job.

"I went to an old employer," he said, "and they told me: 'Never set foot in this place again.' But that's the only kick in the face I ever got."

He said he applied for employment with the Federal Government, wanting to work for the information service, but it didn't work out.

"I once was one of the highest paid speakers on the lecture circuit. And Ben Franklin, head of the Associated Clubs—in the west that's the Knife and Fork Club — asked me if I wanted to try speaking again. I did.

First Address in Detroit.

Early in 1955 he gave his first address since making his confession. It was in Detroit's Town Hall. "Everybody who heard my talk liked it," Stringfellow said. "There were two questions at the end. One was, 'Where can I get a copy of your speech?' The other was, 'When are you going back into politics?'"

He made several other speeches that season, then worked for an insurance company between lectures while his wife helped by selling dinner china. But the strain was too great on his legs and now he is gambling his talks will be a success so he can continue in that field.

"What do I talk about? The title of my speech is 'I believe.' It's a hodgepodge of my personal philosophy. I talk on current events, with spiritual overtones. It's the same speech I gave before, with elimination of the war story. I never make reference to what happened.

"I say the greatness of America is not what we achieved but the way in which it was done. I tell them of our greatest lack and our greatest need—that more people should know how to address the throne of God and how to inspire people with the word of God. And I say the real challenge is not so much in where we are, but in the direction we are going to head in the atomic age. I emphasize the family unit, and the necessity of teaching children respect for authority and the good things in life."

Devout Mormon.

A devout member of the Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) church, he also has given some talks in the church.

He admitted financial difficulty.

"These have been rough times for us economically," he said, 'Never set foot in this place again.' But that's the only kick in the face I ever got."

He said he applied for employment with the Federal Government, wanting to work for the information service, but it didn't work out.

"I once was one of the highest paid speakers on the lecture circuit. And Ben Franklin, head of the Associated Clubs—in the west that's the Knife and Fork Club — asked me if I wanted to try speaking again. I did.

First Address in Detroit.

Early in 1955 he gave his first address since making his confession. It was in Detroit's Town Hall. "Everybody who heard my talk liked it," Stringfellow said. "There were two questions at the end. One was, 'Where can I get a copy of your speech?' The other was, 'When are you going back into politics?'"

He made several other speeches that season, then worked for an insurance company between lectures while his wife helped by selling dinner china. But the strain was too great on his legs and now he is gambling his talks will be a success so he can continue in that field.

"What do I talk about? The title of my speech is 'I believe.' It's a hodgepodge of my personal philosophy. I talk on current events, with spiritual overtones. It's the same speech I gave before, with elimination of the war story. I never make reference to what happened.

"I say the greatness of America is not what we achieved but the way in which it was done. I tell them of our greatest lack and our greatest need—that more people should know how to address the throne of God and how to inspire people with the word of God. And I say the real challenge is not so much in where we are, but in the direction we are going to head in the atomic age. I emphasize the family unit, and the necessity of teaching children respect for authority and the good things in life."

Devout Mormon.

A devout member of the Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) church, he also has given some talks in the church.

He admitted financial difficulty.

"These have been rough times for us economically," he said, "but there have been compensations. When I was in Congress I used to leave the house at 6 a.m. and not get back until midnight. Now I have a wonderful family life. I have my daughter that came last Father's day," he said, nodding to a happy baby playing nearby. He has two older boys, 3 and 4.

What were the most important things bolstering his morale after he left Congress?

"Well, my wife and her understanding. My spiritual background. And the goodness of people."

What about returning to politics?

"A segment of the Chamber of Commerce asked me to run for the Ogden City Council last fall, but I felt it was premature. I feel everything will take its natural course. I surrendered by right to actively seek office —but if it's there it'll come."

"I miss Congress," he said. "I still correspond with my former colleagues. Whenever they run into my old staff members, they always ask about me and how I'm doing.

"I get letters from the White House occasionally."

He got up from his chair and found a letter, then read it aloud.

"It's from Jerry Persons, a deputy assistant to the President," he said. It asked of Stringfellow's health and family.

Stringfellow looked at the letter.

"You know," he said and laughed wistfully, "he still addresses me as 'honorable'."

SUMMER PARISHES TO BE SET UP IN NATIONAL PARKS

NEW YORK, June 2 (UP)—Thousands of vacationing Americans will be given the chance to worship outdoors in the scenic wonderlands of 23 national parks, the National Council of Churches announced yesterday.

More than 100 specially trained young seminary and college students will establish summertime parishes in Yellowstone, Glacier, Mount McKinley and 20 other national parks in 11 states and Alaska. The preachers and religious workers include both men and women, representing 21 denominations.

Each has completed an intensive two-day training course to equip him for the job. They will conduct both morning and evening Sunday services and during the week they will hold campfire pow-wows, vacation church schools and Bible study groups.

In the day, the men will be bell-hopping, driving trucks and doing general chores for the hotels and other park concessions to earn their keep. The girls will work as waitresses and maids.

The program is carried out by the National Parks Ministry which was established four years ago by the National Council of Churches to serve some 200,000 tourists who visit the sites each summer.

BACKLOG OF WORK IN U.S. COURTS IS GRAVE PROBLEM

Seriousness Recognized Widely but Congress Is Not Aroused by Long Delays.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 2 — Since the days of Magna Charta the delay of justice has been increasingly regarded as a denial of justice. The force of that view with respect to the alarming congestion in federal district courts is being recognized and emphasized by leaders of the bar, the judiciary and the Administration as they seek to stem a rising tide of unadjudicated litigation, some of which may require as long as five years to reach the trial stage.

Congress obviously is not aroused to the seriousness of the situation. For the operation of the entire federal judiciary system, from the Supreme Court down, about $36,000,000 will be appropriated this year. This is a little more than half of what the Navy would spend on a cruiser and about half of what the Government allots to the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., Deputy Attorney General William P. Rogers and Chief Justice Earl Warren have been sending up danger signals in recent months in an attempt to gain recognition of the hardships of delay suffered by many litigants. What they seek is not short-cuts to justice, but ways of expediting procedures which are in accord with the fundamental pattern of American law and customs.

Concern on Civil Cases.

Criminal cases in the district courts have priority under the rules of criminal procedure and usually are disposed of promptly. Civil cases are what cause concern.

Within the last 50 years, civil actions started in district courts have increased four-fold. In the last 15 years, the backlog of civil cases has increased from 29,000 to 69,000, an increase of 134 per cent. The increase in the backlog has resulted from the fact that year after year more private civil cases, that is, those between private parties, have been filed in the district courts than have been terminated. These private cases are important in appraising the backlog because, on the average, they take three times as much of the judges' time, both in court and chambers, as do government cases.

The median time from filing to disposition for all civil cases tried in the district courts has jumped in the last 13 years from nine months to 14.6 months. This means that half the cases tried took longer than the median period. In 24 of the 94 district courts in the United States and territories, the median for filing to disposition exceeded 15 months.

Those who are attacking the congestion problem recognize that there is no simple solution. Many steps have been recommended in the past and some have been taken, but the problem grows more complex.

Not Enough New Judges.

One of the moves has been creation of additional judgeships in districts which are manifestly undermanned on the bench. This is a slow process, however, and is never enough to catch up with demand.

Between 1941 and 1945, the number of federal judgeships was increased about 26 per cent, bringing judicial strength at the district level to approximately 270. In this same period, however, the number of civil actions started in the courts increased 54 per cent and the pending caseload went up 134 per cent.

Moreover, a district is never recommended for an additional judgeship until its situation is demonstrably desperate. Many months are required for Congress to recommend a new judgeship, additional time is required to nominate and confirm the new appointee. Meanwhile, the caseload and backlog situation becomes increasingly worse.

Those struggling with the problem have expressed doubt that there will come a time in the near future when the number of judgeships will equal the number required to move the cases along at a normal clip. Hence, they are looking to other means for cutting the backlog.

These include a more flexible system of transferring judges from districts where the case load is light and putting them to work in districts which are congested and the mandatory use of proved pretrial procedures that up to now have been left to the discretion of the court.

Pretrial Plan.

The pretrial procedure has been used with noteworthy results in the Southern District of New York. There the attorneys in every case are required to appear before one of two specially designated judges to discuss their cases. The discussions are informal, but firm, and hundreds of cases have been decided under the guidance of the judges without trial.

Another suggestion has been a tighter rein on continuances, so that the flow of cases before the bench will not be thrown off a fixed schedule except for compelling reasons.

There have been rumbles of discontent, not reflected in high-level discussions of the court problem, that the federal tribunals are weighted down in some areas with judges well beyond the permissive retirement age who should resign and make way for younger men physically able to carry a heavier work load.

There are 54 district judges eligible for retirement who are hanging on. Judges with 15 years' service are eligible to retire at 65. Those with 10 years' service may quit at 70. Retirement carries full pay of $22,500 for life. Judges may not be removed except through impeachment.

Aside from any altruistic considerations relating to justice, the Government has a monetary interest in prompt disposal of civil cases, the people being especially litigious in their dealings with the Government.

In the federal courts now there are suits against the Government for claims totaling two billion dollars, involving income tax refunds, just compensation, patents and legislation relating to veterans, among other things. It is estimated that the claimants will win in 15 to 30 per cent of the cases and most of the claims will have to be paid with 6 per cent interest. If the time required to dispose of these cases could be reduced, on the average, by one year, conservative estimates place the saving to the Government in interest payments at $11,000,000.

PROSPECT OF RISE IN YEAR-AROUND PRICES FOR MILK

U.S. Breaking of Seasonal Pattern Brings Sharp Protest by Dairy Industry.

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP —Americans face the prospect of higher year-around prices for milk. But, if the increases come, it will not be without a fight within the dairy industry itself.

In many urban areas consumers already are paying from one-half to two cents a quart more for their milk than they had been scheduled to pay this spring and summer.

Acting under threats of producer strikes in many milk marketing areas, the Department of Agriculture recently set aside normal seasonal declines in producer prices which had been scheduled to take place under federal milk marketing orders.

These orders, which generally set the pattern for most fluid milk markets of the country, are designed to stabilize supplies and prices in the regulated areas. The department sets minimum prices which milk distributors must pay dairymen. But it does not set retail prices.

Pattern for Prices.

The milk orders have followed the principle that prices should decrease during the spring and summer season of heavy production and should increase in the fall and winter when production falls off.

The lower prices in spring and summer are designed to encourage greater consumption, while the higher prices later in the year are intended to encourage dairymen to produce more.

In suspending the normal spring-summer price decline the department departed from this pattern. The question now is whether the department will return to it when fall arrives.

The department's action has brought sharp criticism from a big dairy group — the Joint Committee of the National Creameries Association and the American Butter Institute.

This committee reflects the viewpoint of dairymen who for one reason or another do not have access to the city fluid milk markets. They must depend on manufacturers of butter, cheese, dried milk, ice cream and similar products for an outlet. These markets offer much lower prices than others.

Letter to Benson.

In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson just made public, the joint committee—through Otie M. Reed, its Washington representative—said the department's action in suspending the seasonal price declines threatened to bring new troubles to the dairy industry.

Reed said that in setting fluid milk prices at "arbitrarily high" levels, the department would stimulate production in the fluid marketing areas beyond consumer needs. Surplus milk produced in these areas would be diverted, he said, into the production of dairy products which would compete with products made from milk supplied by dairymen denied access to the higher-priced fluid markets.

In fact, he said, this action would increase surpluses of butter and cheese which the Government would be obliged to buy under its dairy price support program.

In indicating that the committee will fight for a departmental return to the pricing pattern used in the past for fluid milk, Reed struck at the reasons for departing from it.

He said the department should not have bowed to the threat of dairy strikes.

"This is not to say," he said, "that the department should try to do forbid strikes. On the contrary it should have nothing to do with them, either to forbid them or to try to outmaneuver the striking elements by juggling the price structure under its orders."

Termination of Order.

Reed said that in even of producer strike against Government-set prices, the department should terminate its order in the affected area. This would leave it up to producers and distributors to settle their differences, with the Government being out of the picture and not subject to pressure from one side or the other.

"The maintenance of an order in the market in our view unquestionably contributes to the success of a strike," he said.

Reed said that in establishing fluid prices at higher levels than can be justified by economic factors, the department "aids and abets the strike."

In addition, the creameries-butter institute spokesman said, the department sets up a "double standard" for the two types of milk sold by dairymen —one, a higher price for fluid milk, and a lower one for milk used for manufacturing purposes.

The big question of whether the department will return to the long-established pricing pattern must be answered by its officials in August and September. That is when the spring-summer prices end.

In making its decision, the department may be faced by new threats of producer strikes if it does not allow higher fall and winter prices than are presently scheduled under the federal orders.

Possible Election Influence.

Certainly, any decision by the department could be expected to have an influence on the national elections to be held in November. Areas which produce much of the manufacturing milk—milk which Reed says the department is discriminating against—is produced in such politically-important Midwestern states as Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa.

This area long has been under the impression that dairymen in the regulated urban markets have been getting a much better deal out of Government dairy programs than have they. The manufacturing milk producing area contends that the federal orders are being used to raise walls against the flow of their milk to the fluid markets where prices are higher.

Furthermore, it dislikes the idea of the fluid markets producing more milk than their consumers will drink and then turning the surplus into manufactured products.

Reed took the view that by boosting the fluid milk prices, the department is "throwing very effective road blocks" in the way of the dairy industry's efforts to promote greater consumption. He said increased prices lead consumers to buy less.

The department acknowledged receipt of Reed's letter but made no comment other than to say that what he had to say "should be helpful" in its determination of future pricing policies.

Universal Match Breaks Gro und for Building in Ferguson

Sketch of new office building being erected for Universal Match Corp., adjacent to its engraving department building on the east side of Paul avenue in Ferguson. The structure was designed by Arthur Rathert and G. R. Kiewitt, Associates. General contractor is I. E. Millstone.

Office Building Started

Ground was broken the past week for the new office building, which will house Universal Match Corp.'s general and executive offices, on the east side of Paul avenue in Ferguson, adjacent to the company's engraving department building.

Start of construction was timed with the thirtieth anniversary of the company, which produces advertising match books in its Match Division plants in Ferguson, Los Angeles, Calif., and Hudson, N.Y.

Diversified and subsidiary interests of Universal include: An Armament Division with plants in Ferguson, Marion, Ill., Maynard, Mass., and Los Angeles, Calif.; the Ferguson Machine and Tool Co., Inc., Unitronics, Inc., and Impax, Inc., all in Ferguson; National Vendors, Inc., in St. Louis, and International Tag and Salesbook Co., Chicago, Ill.

The new office building, scheduled to be ready for occupancy before Christmas, will occupy a site on the east side of Paul avenue in Ferguson, between the passenger and freight lines of the Wabash Railroad.

The two-story structure, 75 by 160 feet, will rest 98 concrete piles driven to a depth of 40 feet. The first floor will be two feet above grade and of reinforced concrete construction.

Concrete columns will support the second floor concrete slab. Plans are for roof framing of structural steel and steel open web joists, with metal form deck and insulating type concrete, covered with a tar and marble chip roofing.

All exterior walls will be of masonry construction, with rust colored rubble stone on the first floor west elevation and pale cream-colored brick in Flemish bond for the projecting north, west and east elevations of the second floor. The rest of the exterior will be finished in a warm-tone old sand-brick.

The main entrance, and reception vestibule, will be accentuated by projecting in circular shape beyond the main front, with access from an arcade formed by the projecting second floor, carried on stone columns.

The projecting vestibule roof slab will be supported by stone piers, with large plate glass panels between. Inside planting boxes are designed for the base of the glass panels. The floor will be terrazzo, with a Mosaic mural on the wall opposite the entrance doors.

A large parking area for employees will be in the rear of the building.

Ceilings throughout will be of suspended acoustical mineral tile, with flush-type fluorescent lighting fixtures.

The first floor will house purchasing offices, electronic computer and recording machines, personnel department, dictaphone, addressograph and mailing departments. In addition to utility room for heating and air-conditioned equipment and electrical system, the main floor will have a cafeteria and kitchen. Adjacent to the cafeteria will be a conference room.

Executive offices, sales, bookkeeping, auditing and filing departments and special offices for promotional work and production research will be on the second floor.

The building will be equipped for year-round air-conditioning with multi-zone control.

Windows of the west side on the second floor will be shielded against sun glare and heat by vertical louvres, adjusted to the movement of the sun by automatic controls.

The building was planned and designed by Arthur Rathert and G. R. Kiewitt, Associates. I. E. Millstone is the general contractor.

Brewery Starts New Building

A $1,000,000 expansion and improvement program has been started by the Carling Brewing Co. at its St. Louis and Belleville, Ill., plants, accordto an announcement by Ian R. Dowie, president. The capital expenditure will be made during 1956.

The major part of the program is at Belleville, where construction has started on a new $400,000 warehouse building, adjoining the present plant. Other improvements at Belleville will total $350,000, including a quarter of a million dollars for additional brewing and bottling equipment and $100,000 for refrigeration.

Carling's St. Louis plant and office buildings on North Florissant are being modernized at a cost of approximately $250,000. Principal expenditure is on new equipment and facilities for brewing, bottling, warehousing and loading.

The new warehouse at Belleville will provide 75,000 square feet of floor space at dock-loading height. It is designed to permit maximum utility of fork lift trucks in loading and unloading at nine truck docks and three rail car docks without any changes in floor level.

The building will have a concrete floor, structural steel framework with corrugated asbestos siding and a flat metal roof covered with tar and gravel. One end of the building will have a brick facing.

The structure will measure 300 feet on the longest side, along a railroad spur, and 250 feet on Sixteenth street. The roof will be 25 feet high.

Bauer Bros. Construction Co., Inc., Belleville, is the general contractor for the building, scheduled for completion about Sept. 1.

Technical School Will Open Sept. 4

Construction of the 120-room, 60-department O'Fallon Technical High School at 5101 Northrup avenue is nearing completion and the opening has been set for Sept. 4, according to the Board of Education of the City of St. Louis.

The basic design of the building, which will contain 5,523,175 cubic feet of space, was planned to separate, as much as possible, areas where academic subjects will be taught from space designed for training in industrial and commercial fields.

The two upper floors will house most of the facilities for subjects taught to girls. Classes for trade apprentices will be on the ground floor.

The building is in the shape of a cross, with a one-story wing attached to the east arm of the cross, where aeronautics and auto-mechanics will be taught. The central portion of the cross plan contains the majority of rooms designed for technical training. Radiating from this central portion are the four wings which will contain approximately 40 typical classrooms.

Subjects for boys of the All-day Trade Preparatory group will, for the most part, be taught below the third floor.

The O'Fallon school will provide technical education for three general groups: boys and girls who attend all-day trade-preparatory classes; building trades apprentices, who attend school part of the day and devote the remainder of the day to on-the-job experience, part of the Adult Education Program for those who attend either day or evening classes.

Industrial courses will include aerial mechanics, architectural drafting, auto-mechanics, commercial art, cosmetology, electricity, fashion tailoring, machine drafting, machine shop, millinery, printing, radio, welding, and wood-working. Some of the trade and industrial courses include shop sketching and blue print reading, home economics, English, general mathematics, general science, physics, chemistry, world history, music, and elective subjects of a pre-industrial nature, such as drawing, textiles, printers' arithmetic commercial art, and ninth grade industrial arts classes.

The school will offer business courses, including general clerical, stenographic, and bookkeeping with the students learning to operate modern office machines.

A high school co-operative program developed through co-operation between the high schools and O'Fallon school

Persons Over 60 To Get Government Aid On Housing, Experts Say

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP—The nation's 21,000,000 persons over 60 years old will soon get help from the Government on their housing problems, authoritative experts predict.

President Eisenhower has proposed one system of aids, the Senate has approved another and a House committee is at work on a third.

All agree the problem exists—elderly persons with low income, unable to support themselves adequately who are dependent on relatives or public funds.

But there's disagreement on the remedy.

The President proposes that older persons be permitted to borrow money for down payment on a home and that mortgage terms on rental housing for the elderly be liberalized.

The Senate's bill would authorize Government insurance on a mortgage for the full price of a home an older person buys for himself with 40 years to pay. It calls for more liberal rental housing mortgage terms than the Administration's plan, and 75,000 units of public housing for persons 65 and older.

21,000,000 Persons Over 60.

Proposals being considered by the House include a loan program, but less public housing than the Senate bill.

There are more than 21,000,000 persons over 60 in the nation today compared to 18.3 million in 1950. They represent a larger proportion of home owners than younger age groups.

A survey taken a few years ago showed that two-thirds of the older persons live in decently maintained homes with all modern conveniences.

However, the percentage of older families living in rundown housing was somewhat larger than for younger families. One Government economist says this situation is due in part to sentiment, inertia or economic necessity, which leads some to struggle on with a house beyond

New School Started in Ballwin, Mo.

Ground has been broken and construction is scheduled to start in six weeks on the $180,000 Westridge elementary grade school in Westridge Acres subdivision, according to Morgan Selvidge, superintendent of School District R-6.

The school, with 17 classrooms, is the first of a group of schools and churches planned for construction in Westridge Acres, a 500-home community being developed by the St. Louis Construction Co.

The 12-acre site of the school is in Ballwin, south of Clayton road, in section five of Westridge Acres subdivision. The building fronts on Hillcrest drive, with School drive as the northern boundary.

Bonsack and Pearce, Inc., architects, designed the contemporary-styled, one-story, L-shaped structure, which will be supported by a concrete slab foundation on beam construction.

Red brick walls with two large aluminum framed window-walls across each classroom will set the exterior design. Colored panels of porcelain enameled metal will be placed sill height below each window. The roof will be flat decked, built-up with tar and gravel, and supported by steel bar joist with a two-foot eight-inch overhang.

There will be a canopied area for bus loading at the main entrance.

Construction of the Westridge school has been planned in three phases. The first will be the main building, measuring 208 by 121 feet. It has been planned to include seven classrooms, an administrative office, faculty room, cafetorium, two toilet rooms, kitchen, furnace room, public reception room, dispensary with waiting room and a large storage area.

The other two phases of construction will include the addition of a west wing with eight classrooms and a building for use as a kindergarden. The addition will complete the "L"-design and the kindergarden will be attached to the south end of the main building by a covered passage way.

Construction of the first building of the project is scheduled to be completed early next year.

Swimming Pool For Subdivision Residents Opened

A $60,000 swimming pool, conceived and paid for by residents of the Berkeley subdivision of Frostwood, was opened Wednesday.

The pool, 72 feet long, is on the south border of the subdivision.

The idea of the pool stemmed from a small group of homeowners in the subdivision and a corporation was formed, called "Frostwood Swimming Pool, Inc." Purchase of a share of stock by a resident entitled his family and guests to swimming privileges.

Fischer and Frichtel, Inc., developers of Frostwood, donated the ground, then designed and built the pool and ajacent bathhouse at cost. They purchased the outstanding shares of stock, for resale to buyers in the final section of the subdivision, now under construction.

James Monroe is manager of the new plant.

More Cool Rooms

St. Louis hotels have installed additional air-conditioning equipment during the winter and now have 5000 air-conditioned rooms. Most of the hotel equipment consists of central cooling systems, but some hotels have package units taking care of one or two floors. Others use individual room-cooling units.

A larger percentage of air-conditioned rooms is available in St. Louis than in any other large city, according to John K. Bryan, executive vice president of the Hotel Association of St. Louis.

Seniors in the last term will be permitted to work in industry on a half-day basis. They will work on jobs that include activities in their major fields and receive school credit for this work experience.

When the school is opened in September, ground will be broken for a $1,500,000 addition which will include an auditorium, a field house, a swimming pool, and remaining facilities necessary to complete the project.

Housing Aid

their physical and financial means.

Home designers have come up with a set of standards for what an older person's home should and should not have; no steps; maximum daylight and artificial lighting; no slippery floor surfaces; kitchen cupboards which don't require ladder-climbing or stooping; bathtubs with plenty of grab bars; automatic heat and absence of drafts.

Actually, many of these features are also suitable for young families with small children. The similarities of standards make it easier to mix housing for old and young in the same building or development. Government experts say the mixture provides greater flexibility in operation of the housing, and avoids the undesirable segregation of aging families.

Prosperts of Aid Good.

The planners are quick to concede that not every family becomes a housing problem when the breadwinner turns 60. But the statistics indicate a large percentage with low income and a heavy concentration of older families renting quarters for less than $30 a month.

Federal housing chief Albert M. Cole said he is "deply concerned" with the Senate proposal for solving this particular housing problem. He calls it paradoxical that this bill permits a 60-year-old to take out a Government-backed mortgage with a smaller down payment and a longer time to pay than is allowed for young people who are just setting up housekeeping. On the eve of the Senate bill's passage, Cole said the Administration's recommendations were "reasonable and practical."

The nation's legislators apparently feel the Eisenhower proposals do not go far enough, but the Senate-House-White House agreement on the need for aid points to prospects that aid is forthcoming.

Avoid Dull Colors.

70 Graduates Of Plasterer, Lather Class

More than 150 lather and plasterer apprentices have attended apprentice training classes sponsored by the St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Industry Council at Hadley Technical High School since the start of the apprentice school in December 1953.

The apprentice training program, conducted by the Industry Council in co-operation with the St. Louis Board of Education, has graduated 70 students. The Industry Council is comprised of the St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Contractors Association, the AFL Lathers District Council of Greater St. Louis, and the AFL Plasterers Union, Local No. 3. Its purpose is to promote higher standards of workmanship and more and better use of lath and plaster in the metropolitan area.

The program, first of its type conducted in the St. Louis area for more than 25 years, has raised the standards of craftsmanship and added to the number of skilled mechanics in the area, according to Albert H. Meinert, executive director of the Industry Council.

"We are proud of the high standard of instruction at our apprentice school," he said. "In its short existence, it has received national recognition as one of the finest schools of its type in the country. Three of the best skilled men in our trades are serving as instructors of the apprentices and giving them the benefit of years of experience in lathing and plastering"

Steve Gordon, a veteran of more than 40 years in the plastering trade, is instructor for the plasterer apprentices. Raymond Knapp and Bernard Rauch instruct the lather apprentices.

Apprentices of both crafts combine instruction with on-the-job training in their trades. They work for local lathing and plastering contractors and are required to attend classes regularly as a condition of their employment. Tuition at the school is paid by the Industry Council, and salaries of the apprentices are paid by their employers during their class attendance.

Instruction covers phases of the trade from the original interpretation of architect's blueprints and specifications, development of layout plans for the lathing and plastering, to actual execution of the finished demonstration projects.

Extension Program Sponsored Locally By Elected Council

The Agricultural and Home Economics Extension program is now sponsored locally by an elected council of one man and one woman per township. County and home agents are employed by the University of Missouri and placed in the county to give advice in agriculture and home economics, including insect and disease control, varieties, soil management and testing and nutrition.

The council in St. Louis county is composed of the following: Richard McNulty, Mrs. Harvey Coles, Airport township; Walter Lowe, Mrs. William Kirchoff, Bonhomme township; Rodes Clark, Mrs. Clara Clark, Clayton township; Dr. K. C. Sullivan, Mrs. Victor Weir, Creve Coeur township; Walter Berekemeyer, Mrs. William Viehring, Gravois township; Jerry M. Gers, Mrs. Paul Justus, Hadley township.

Clarence Barbre, Mrs. C. G. Henry, Jefferson township; Joseph A. Lodoly, Mrs. Otto Rathbone, Lemay township; Nelson L. Clark, Mrs. Lester Smith, Lincoln township; Alvin Steines, Mrs. Edward Dohrmann, Meramec township; Adolph Byers, Mrs. C. L. Edscorn, Midland township; V. N. Cornelius, Mrs. E. N. Kilgore, Normandy township, and Harry Steinmann and Miss Aldine M. Koester, St. Ferdinand township.

The central office of the council is at 15 North Meramec, Clayton, and the telephone number is PArkview 7-8010.

FRAME HOUSES LIKED

United States home builders are demanding more wood-frame construction for their new homes, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics which points out that there was a 20 per cent increase in wood framed homes in the first quarter of last year. Best news for home builders of the future comes from the West Coast lumber industry which reports that there will always be an adequate supply of the nation's prime structural lumber. Extended G.I. Loan Program Gets Support

WASHINGTON, D.C. (INS)—Administration support has been thrown behind a limited extension of G.I. home loan benefits with a full-scale study of Government policy on overall housing needs of the nation.

The Budget Bureau endorsed a House-approved plan to allow one year for completion of G.I. homes on which applications are filed by the July 25, 1957 deadline, instead of cutting the program off sharply at that point.

It said this would solve the immediate problem and provide time for a "separate consideration of long-range housing needs and policy in the light of circumstances existing when the veterans' program expires."

The Administration stand was expressed this week as demand grew for blending the liberal terms of the G.I. benefits into the Federal Housing Administration's mortgage insurance available to all home buyers.

Indications point to at least a tapering off in the program that was responsible for 30 per cent of all new homes built last year.

Senate approval of a flat one-year extension opens the door for a compromise which some observers expect to include something like an extra six months' time for each six months of military service.

Limited Support.

In addition to the Administration, some important segments of the industry have come around recently to limited support of the much disputed bill introduced by Representative Olin E. Teague (Dem.), Texas. Teague, chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, maintains there is no justification for continuing a program designed to help World War II veterans readjust to civilian life.

He argues: "If a liberalized guaranteed or insured housing credit program is necessary for the nation's economy and the security of the real estate and allied industries, the time has arrived to create a nation-wide program for all citizens which will accomplish the objectives."

His bill would liberalize the insurance and reduce the down payments for one-family residences under the FHA program.

These "general principles" have been endorsed by the national associations of home builders, real estate boards and mortgage bankers. Opposition springs from the U. S. Savings & Loan League and veterans organizations which favor extensions of the G.I. program.

LEAVES From a Gardener's NOTEBOOK

By Eleanor B. McClure

Captious critics who carp about the weather in this heart of the Mississippi valley are prone to overlook an important asset our often long and very beautiful spring seasons, with a period of bloom that extends from mid-February to June. This year, for instance, while eastern and northern states were still buried in snow, we had a truly fabulous season of bloom.

To begin with, cooler-than-normal weather kept the spring bulbs, azaleas, dogwoods and other flowering trees in a sort of suspended animation, giving us many extra days of bloom. Favorable weather brought one of the finest Maytime shows in many years, with really breath-taking displays or iris, peonies and other perennials.

Roses, too, have been spectacular. With virtually no die-back or winter kill of the canes, plants sent out husky, buxom growth and have been loaded with king-size blooms.

It may be tempting fate to comment on the fine May showers. Even though the statistics show that we will have a rainfall deficiency of about three inches, the figures fail to tell the complete story. Our late spring rains have been nicely spaced, and for the most part they have penetrated into the ground, with a minimum of run-off.

As a result, trees and shrubs have shown unusual development in the past few weeks, and lawns and gardens are lush and green.

This fine growing season is surely a boon to the plants that have been damaged by a succession of dry years, plus a number of sudden and severe freezes.

Such convalescents can be speeded to recovery (and protected from future hazards of drouth and cold weather as well) by a program of feeding and mulching at this season. For the feeding program a three-course "meal" will give finest results, if care is taken to "set the table" with the type of food which each class of plants prefers.

The acid-loving plants need separate consideration, but most other flowers, shrubs and trees will benefit from soil applications of a balanced fertilizer, topped with an organic much. Then should follow, as needed, supplementary leaf feedings with a fertilizer solution.

For example, roses and perennials can be pepped up with an application of fertilizer at this season. A balanced chemical fertilizer should be scattered around the plants at the rate of about two pounds to each 100 square feet. Cultivate the soil lightly and then, if possible, add a mulch of some organic waste matter such as grass clippings, partly rotted compost or manure, partly rotted leaves, spoiled hay, corncob dust, sawdust or the like.

The compost, manure or cob dust will offer a richer diet, to be sure, but any of these wastes help build up the organic content of the soil. The surface of the bed may then be "dressed" with a light mulch of buckwheat hulls, agricultural peat or pecan hulls.

A similar system of mulching may be used in the vegetable garden, as well as for most shrubs and trees. The exception, of course, is the group of ericaceous or acid-loving plants, which includes azaleas, rhododendrons, hollies, mountain laurel and pieris japonica.

These acid-lovers should be fed with a special azalea-camellia fertilizer, or with iron sulphate. They will also respond enthusiastically to an application of cottonseed meal, and they are especially appreciative of a heavy organic mulch, preferably leaf mold and sawdust.

Large trees, especially those of great value in the planting, may need special attention, since the subsoil is still distressingly dry. If a tree hasn't been fed in the past two years it might be advisable to call on an arborist for a deep fertilizer application. Surface feeding and mulching will also be of some benefit. There is little doubt that feeding and watering will help trees recover from drouth damage and protect them from disease.

All garden plants may be aided by supplementary feedings of liquid fertilizer. We started using fertilizer solutions on vegetables during victory garden days. For the past seven years we have been experimenting with leaf-feeding fertilizers and have found them to be an unqualified success.

A recent article in Popular Gardening reports that supplementary leaf feeding not only added several feet of additional growth each year to apple and plum trees, but increased the harvest by more than 100 per cent, and the fruits were larger and finer. Tomatoes, lettuce and cucumbers will grow faster and have finer flavor.

The fertilizer can be added to insecticides, too, so that roses are fed each time they are sprayed. Leaf feeding seems to wheedle extra growth from yews, boxwoods and hollies. Such supplmentary feeding can also be used to encourage rapid early season growth on azaleas, and then may be withheld after midsummer, so that plants can harden off, with less winter damage.

Liquid fertilizers are more effective if applied when the ground is moist. It is important to have even distribution and just the proper dose. Although more frequent applications may be made, a 10-day interval is usually about right.

A change in name for the nation's organization of professional real estate counselors has been announced by Philip W. Kniskern, president of the group. Founded in 1954, the Society is affiliated with the national Association of Real Estate Boards.

Subdivision Started On Warson Rd. Site

Construction on Tennyson Manor, a subdivision of luxury-type homes on a 19-acre site at 450 Warson road, four blocks north of Ladue road, was reported yesterday by Melvin H. Glick and Co.

Houses will be of one-story ranch-style contemporary design, air-conditioned, with three plans for three and four-bedroom arrangements. Exterior construction will be of decorative combinations of brick, stone and wood.

Paved streets and sewers are nearing completion and a display house is scheduled to be opened soon. "Tennyson Manor will incorporate many of the conveniences desired for modern living in an attractive St. Louis County area," Glick said.

Lumber Men Want Title One Boosted

FHA's Title I home modernization program should be made permanent and should be revised to permit repayment of loans over a five-year period instead of the three years now authorized, according to H. R. Northup, executive vice president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association.

"In addition, the maximum loan should be increased to $3500, so as to finance major additions and improvements," Mr. Northup said in a statement to the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

"The Title I program has demonstrated its soundness over the past 20 years and has provided a means of financing home repair for nearly 20,000,000 home owners.

"This program, which is entirely self - supporting, has played a leading part in improving the comfort and livability of American homes. In 1954 alone, over 1,500,000 borrowers used property improvement loans insured by FHA.

"By insuring lenders against loss on these loans, the Title I program has had the effect of lowering and stabilizing financing charges on property improvement loans and has greatly stimulated the interest of private lending institutions in this type of loan, which now enables home owners to borrow up to $2500.

"Many families have used Title I loans to expand their living quarters because of an increase in the size of their families or for other reasons. Others have used the program to prevent deterioration of their property."

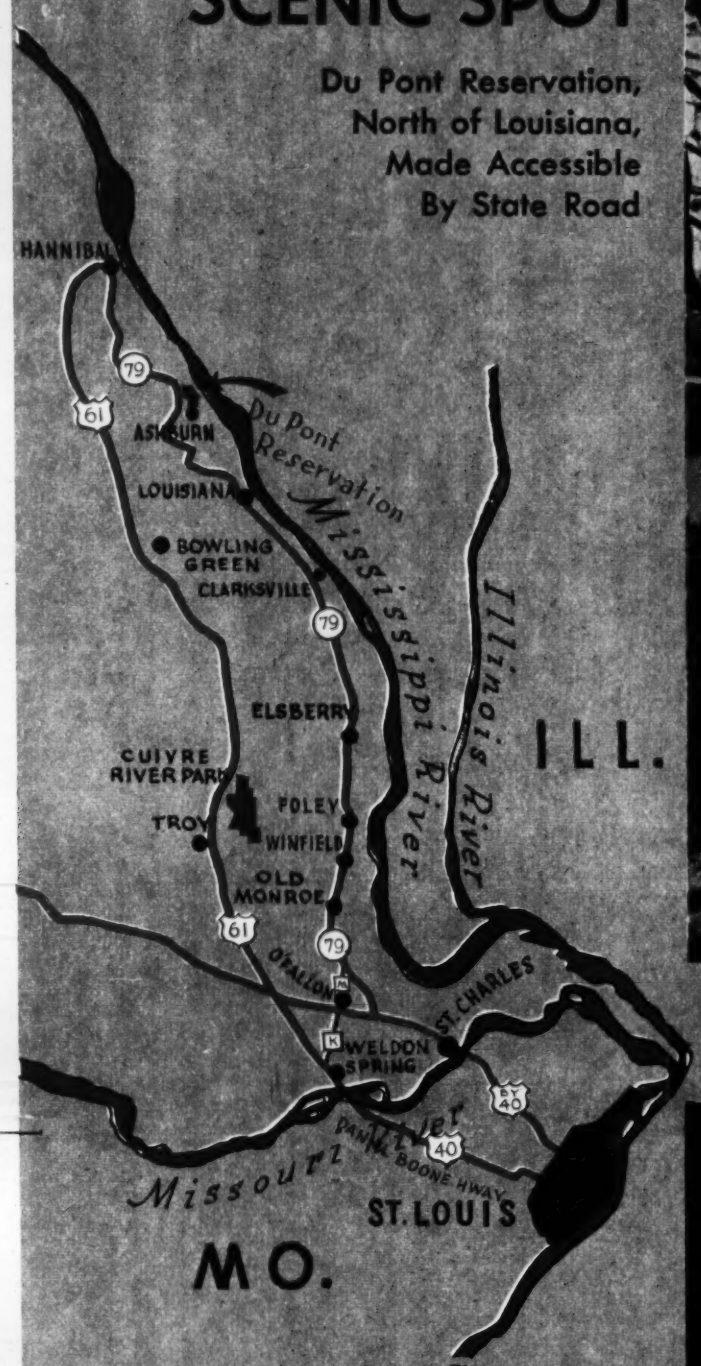
NEW MISSOURI SCENIC SPOT

Du Pont Reservation, North of Louisiana, Made Accessible By State Road



The reservation road winds through a cut in a rocky hilltop. This route was designed for possible inclusion in the Mississippi River Parkway, the long-proposed scenic highway from the river's headwaters to its mouth.

From a scenic parking area on the new highway through Du Pont Reservation, visitors look downstream at a Mississippi Valley panorama. On flood plain at river's edge, cottonwood trees have been planted extensively in experiment to see whether they can be grown profitably on bottomlands too wet for farming. Twenty-one miles of road between Louisiana and Hannibal are gravel, will be blacktopped this summer.

WITHIN EASY DRIVING DISTANCE FROM ST. LOUIS, the state's little-known Du Pont Reservation has been opened up by construction of a new road. A trip to the area has many scenic bonuses. There are magnificent views of the Mississippi River Valley, and visits to historic places can be worked in easily to round out a pleasant one-day journey.

The hilly, 1200-acre reservation fronts on the river for more than a mile. Former site of an explosives plant, the acreage was given to the state in 1938 by the Du Pont firm. Subsequently, it has been used by the Missouri Conservation Commission as a wildlife refuge and forestry experimental area. Until the new road, part of State Highway 79, was completed late last year, the reservation was inaccessible to motorists.

The loop tour shown on the map covers about 230 miles from downtown St. Louis. The reservation itself is 95 miles from St. Louis. Picking up Highway 79 west of St. Charles, the route leads through rolling farm and wooded country to Clarksville, then alternately follows the river and winds inland the rest of the way to Hannibal.

Among the points of interest are the dam and locks at Clarksville, the old riverfront section of Louisiana and the Mark Twain Boyhood Home and Museum at Hannibal. On the return leg, a stopover at Cuivre River Park would not add appreciably to the distance. The park, with its fine streams and hardwoods, is reached from State Highway 47 between Troy and Winfield.

Photos by ARTHUR WITMAN of the PICTURES Staff

Upriver from the reservation, a chain of wooded islands and sandbars extends into the distance. Railroad tracks are part of Burlington line between St. Louis and Burlington, Iowa. Residents of the area near the reservation are seeking to have the facility made into a state park so that it can be developed for recreational purposes.

Young Athletes Shine Shoes to Raise Money for Olympic Fund

While two customers are being waited on, Richard Ruppel, holding sign, and Roger Gruen Jr. seek to drum up more business at a shoeshine stand operated by the Granite City High School Lettermen's Club. The stand, at Nineteenth street and Edison avenue, was one of three run by the club to raise money for the 1956 United States Olympic Team.

At stand in the Bellemore Village shopping center Harold Boyles puts final touches on a pleasant polishing task. Customer is Eva Bruton.

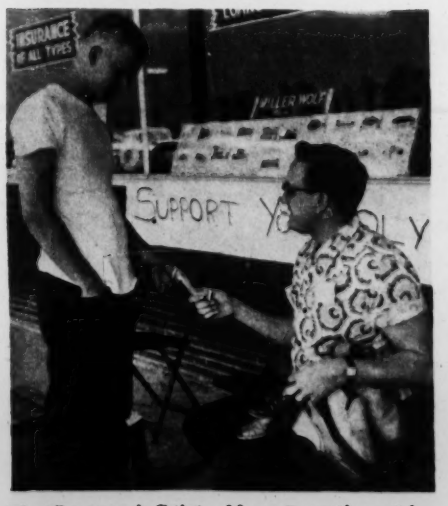
Ernest Bickhaus, sporting goods dealer, watches the progress of Richard Wade's brush work.



The Reverend Calvin Marcum settles with Ranney Rich for shining the three pairs of shoes he holds and the pair he is wearing. One customer had six pairs polished.

TO RAISE EXPENSE MONEY for the 1956 United States Olympic Team, members of the Granite City High School Lettermen's Club spent a Friday and Saturday shining shoes. During the day on Friday the club members—holders of letters for athletics—worked the school trade, raising $37 by putting polish on their classmates' shoes. Friday evening and Saturday they operated three stands in Granite City shopping districts.

Any lack of skill with dauber and brush was compensated for in energetic application and a vigorous hawking of the service. There was a brisk turnover in slogans. At one stand a youth chanted: "We'll shine your shoes, any color. If we don't have the color you want, we'll do it free." But owners of off-shade shoes apparently desire to keep them that way. The offer had no takers.

Prices were set by the customers and generally ran about 10 cents in the school and a quarter or half-dollar at the three stands. Receipts for the two days totaled $107, all going in the profit column. The club members had donated supplies as well as time to their enterprise.

Record-Breaking Photo Show Comes to St. Louis

City Art Museum Director Charles Nagel points out an amusing feature in one of the photographs in the exhibit which opens tomorrow. With him are Museum Building Superintendent Harry G. Weiss (left) and Anil Roy Choudhury, director of the All-India Fine Arts and Crafts Society, a museum visitor. In India, the show will open in September at the society's headquarters in New Delhi. Nagel is examining a picture of an American family. Beside it is a photograph of a family in Bechuanaland, Africa. The pictures have been set out preparatory to hanging.

By GARY W. FERGUSON of the PICTURES Staff

THE FAMILY OF MAN EXHIBIT, one of the most significant photographic collections ever assembled, will be at City Art Museum from tomorrow until June 25. Selected from more than 2,000,000 pictures, the show's 503 prints represent 68 countries and are the work of 273 photographers.

But these statistics, impressive though they are, represent only a facet of the display's import. The heart of the exhibit is the way the photographs capture its central theme: the essential oneness of human beings throughout the world. Beneath the differences that economic conditions make, that varying cultures create, people are neighbors at the core of life—in their smiles and in their sorrows. That is what the pictures portray. In so doing the photographs are an acknowledgment that all over the world photography has attained maturity, has become a major form of expression and is one of the arts.

The show was conceived and the pictures selected by Edward Steichen, dean of American photographers and director of the photography department at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. He chose pictures "of the gamut of life from birth to death." There are scenes of toil and leisure, of lovers and mourners, of babies and the aged, of primitive hunters and atomic scientists.

Opening at the New York museum in January, 1955, the exhibit attracted 270,000 visitors in 105 days, a record attendance. Since then five copies of the collection have been on tour, three in this country and two overseas. The showings abroad are sponsored by the United States Information Agency and have set attendance records in many museums, as have the editions in this country. In Tokyo the photographs drew 243,000 persons in 24 days; 100,000 saw it in Amsterdam, 50,000 in Guatemala City. A book containing the photographs has sold more than 500,000 copies, and was on a best seller list for 38 weeks.

"To find an exhibit with a wonderful theme of universal interest illustrated by world-wide photographs of superb quality is something unique," said Charles Nagel, director of City Art Museum.

Steichen will give a public talk at the museum at 8 p.m. tomorrow. The St. Louis showing is sponsored by the Post-Dispatch.

Huge Job of Keeping the Nation's Military Records

West facade of Military Personnel Records Center overlooks 1500-car parking lot. Modern installations include reversible escalators, building-wide public address system, 24-hour clocks; offices are to be air conditioned. Because they do great deal of business with the Center, the Veterans Administration, Civil Service Commission, National Resources Council and Federal Bureau of Investigation maintain branch offices in the building. The Center was dedicated last April.

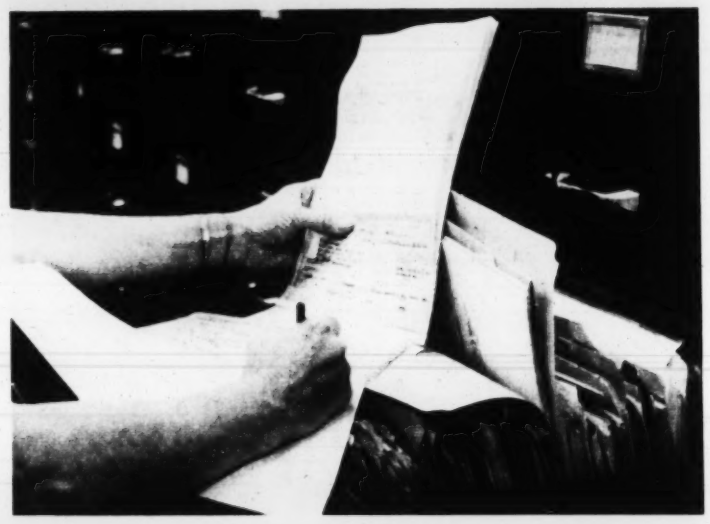
Sea of filing cabinets covers most of Army's fourth-floor storage area; clerk in foreground checks a service record in one of the 12,300 cabinets on floor, which contain about half of the 6,000,000 post-World War II (after 1945) files. Records are filed alphabetically by last names. World War II branch (1940-45) has 10,000,000 records; World War I branch (1912-1940) has 5,525,000.



Clerk of Section I (files A-D) of p-WW II branch makes notes from service record without removing file from cabinet. Records are confidential, may not be seen even by veteran himself.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

EVERYTHING ABOUT ST. LOUIS' new United States Military Personnel Records Center is enormous—from its physical dimensions to the volume of activity that it houses. The building is among the 20 largest in the world, its 1,349,148 square feet of usable floor space exceeding that of New York's famed Empire State building. Among government buildings, it is surpassed in size only by the Pentagon.

The six-story, concrete-and-glass structure shares a 45-acre military reservation with the Army Publications Center at 9700 Page avenue in Overland. The $15,000,000 building is almost two blocks long and a block wide—728 feet by 282 feet, to be exact—and is enclosed by almost seven acres of glass. It is, essentially, a huge filing cabinet, for its function is to safeguard the military records of millions of Americans who have served in the nation's armed forces.

These are not simply historical records that are stored away in musty vaults to gather dust and be forgotten. Every one of the 38,525,000 individual service records now filed in the big building will, on the average, have some significant data added to it or some vital information extracted from it every six months.

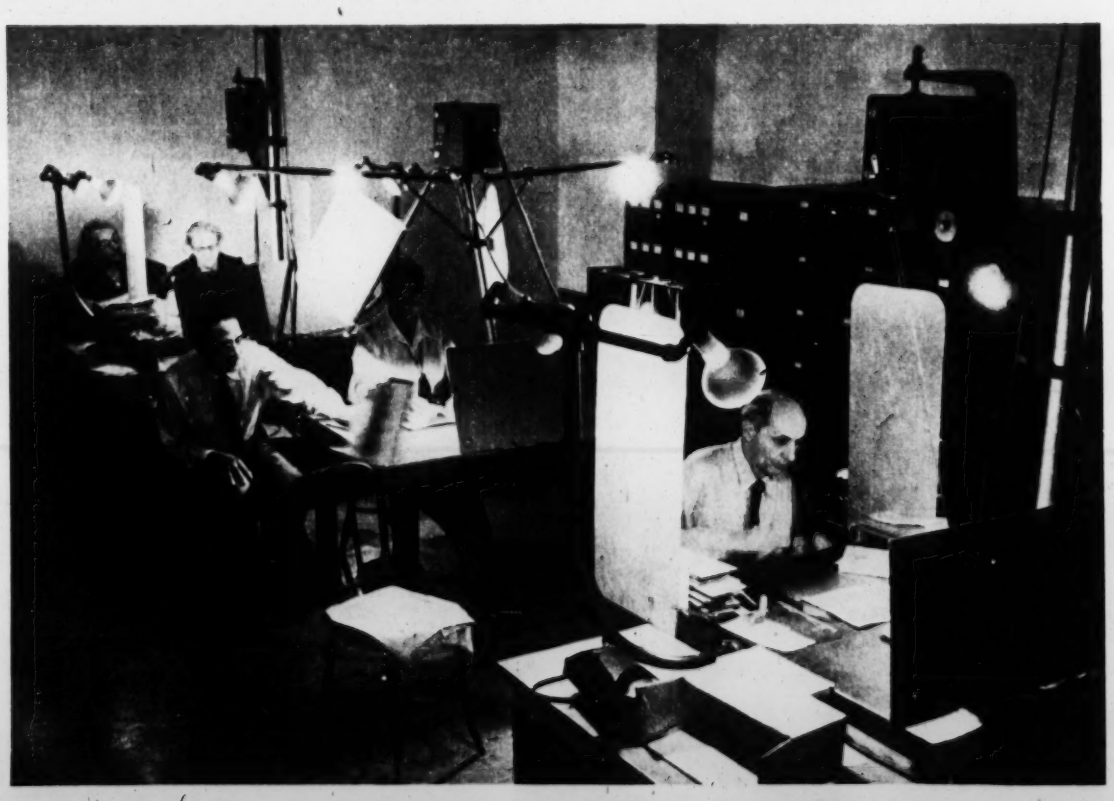
Important to the life of one of every four Americans now living, the records are the primary supporting documents for $3,500,000,000 in benefits paid annually to veterans, their widows and children. They must be available for ready reference to prove claims for pensions, citations or hospitalization; to afford transcripts of educational and training courses in service schools; to verify service dates and combat participation; to authenticate skills and proficiencies.

The Center actually is composed of three centers, for the Army, Navy and Air Force maintain separate commands with each administering the records of its own veterans. The Army Records Center, which occupies three floors, contains the service files of approximately 21,525,000 former soldiers and officers demobilized since 1912 (older records are in the National Archives in Washington). The Naval Records Management Center covers one and one-half floors, has files on 16,000,000 former Navy and Marine Corps personnel back to 1885, in addition to school and medical records. The Air Force Records Center, to open officially on July 1, has one floor and 1,000,000 records dating from the establishment of the Air Force in 1947.

All of these personal records are in paper form, in folders in filing cabinets; they do not lend themselves to microfilming because data must be added to them from time to time. But the Army Center has microfilmed 150,000,000 unit personnel records, such as muster rolls, sick reports, morning reports and ship passenger lists, dating to 1912. If the original documents had been kept they would require 5500 five-drawer letter-size filing cabinets. On microfilm (52,410 reels) they are contained in 58 cabinets, a reduction of almost 100 to 1 in space requirements.

About 2000 civilians and 35 military personnel work at the Center, including the Army complement in charge of the building, a Department of Defense facility. Each week the Center receives from military units all over the world: 90,000 morning reports, 135,700 medical and clinical records, 12,600 files and service records, 7300 miscellaneous papers (of which half are destroyed), and 35,000 pieces of incoming mail and correspondence that require 160,000 references to the stored records.

And each week the Center prepares 49,000 pieces of outgoing mail, furnishes 16,000 medical and clinical records to the Veterans Administration, issues 1800 certificates in lieu of lost or destroyed discharge certificates, processes 160 decorations and awards requests, and prepares some 15,000 photostatic copies of records.



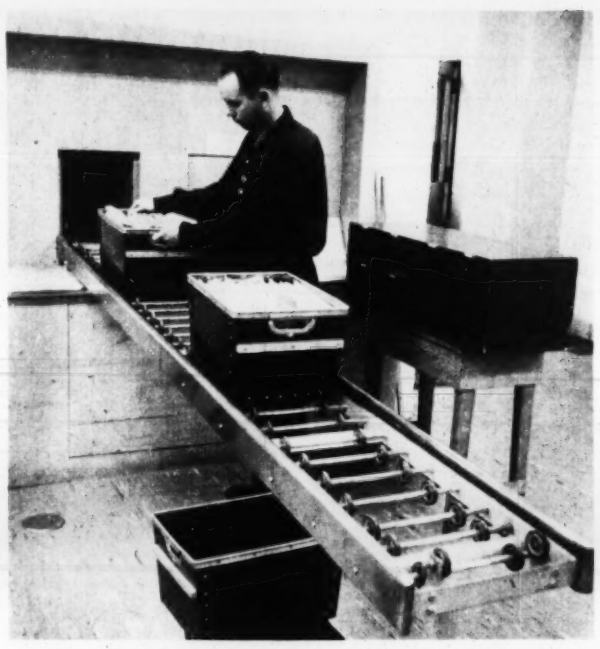
In basement of building, Army sick reports for World War II are microfilmed with overhead cameras, a job that will take two more years to complete. Rotary type microfilming machines also are used to photograph unit personnel reports. Original microfilm reels, from which duplicates are made, are kept in special vault in which temperature and humidity are rigidly controlled to preserve the film. Original records are destroyed after microfilming.

In forest of reading machines, searchers from miscellaneous records section of Army's p-WW II branch look for specific data on microfilm reels of organizational documents. This section alone handles about 450 requests a day for information; it has 90 searchers, 43 reading machines.

New St. Louis Building Is One of World's 20 Largest; 2000 Employes Service 38,525,000 Personnel Files

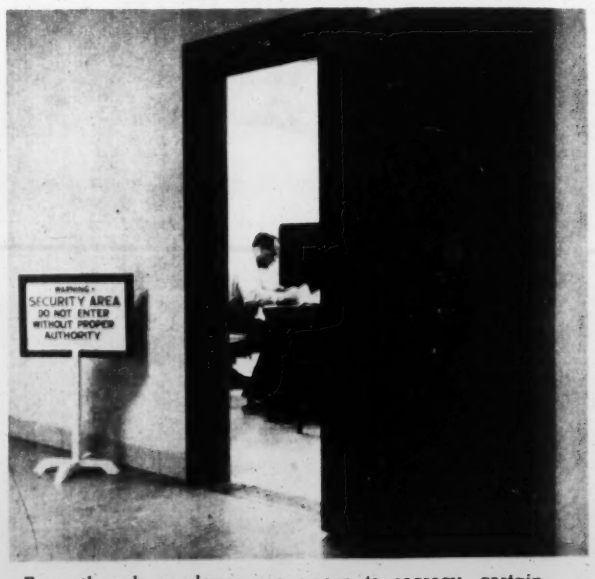
Special actions branch of the Army Records Center occupies vast office in which 115 correspondence clerks, claims examiners, stenographers, review clerks and supervisors work. This branch expedites replies on urgent inquiries, and handles cases of a special nature.

Cafeteria in adjoining one-story building seats 800, serves almost 2000 budget-priced meals between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. daily. Half-hour lunch periods are staggered so dining facilities will not be overcrowded. Employes get 15-minute "coffee break" in midmorning and midafternoon; work hours are 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.



Unique mechanical conveyer system takes mail in "tote boxes" to and from seven subdistribution points in building. Here in mail room, where system terminates, boxes with outbound mail are disgorged from conveyer through wall panel.

Mail room does as much business as post office in fair-sized town, receiving 55 to 60 sacks a day and sending out that many. Clerks sort and route in-coming mail to various offices and branches in building; weigh, sack and apply postage ($3000 a month) on out-going mail.



Even though employes are sworn to secrecy, certain records are kept in confidential file room to shield them from possibly curious eyes. These include records of high-ranking officers, of former military personnel now working in the building, of persons whose files contain information of delicate or derogatory nature.

WHY IT'S FROZEN:

When people sit down to a first serving of the very special Oyster Stew Campbell's now has for you, someone around the table nearly always asks why the Campbell's chefs didn't think of this years ago.

They did, of course—Oyster Stew being the great and favorite soup tradition that it is. And they've known the secret . . . the art . . . of making this classic soup for years, as few people ever learn it.

The problem was to keep all the flavor and goodness until you are ready to use it. Only by the quick-frozen method was this possible. It took freezing to bring you this soup with all that fabulous flavor intact.

This is the reason why you will find Campbell's Oyster Stew in your grocer's freezer, instead of on the shelf. This is why you'll find it measures up to the finest you ever came across in the best seafood restaurant, where it's a specialty of the house. Only difference is, this one's all ready for you, so you can serve it any time, any season.

The new Campbell's Frozen Soups . . . not only Oyster Stew, but three other exciting kinds as well. All with an elegance of flavor that was simply not possible before in prepared form.

French Fried Onions, With Hamburgers

1. Mrs. Koch removes outer skin from jumbo-size onions. They are cut in thick slices and separated into rings.

2. Milk is added to beaten egg yolks, then the flour and salt are stirred in to make a batter.

3. Onion rings are dipped in batter, excess is allowed to drip off. Rings are browned in deep hot fat, drained on paper.

By MERNA LAZIER

FRENCH FRIED ONION RINGS, considered an accompaniment, frequently take the spotlight from the hamburgers with which they are usually served. Mrs. Lois Koch of Florissant, home economist for a utility company in St. Louis, serves them with an assortment of condiments to whet the appetite.

Mrs. Koch slices the onions one-fourth-inch thick, then separates them into individual rings. A batter for coating these is made by mixing together egg yolks, milk, salt and flour. Rings are dipped in this, excess batter is allowed to run off, and rings are immediately dropped into hot fat, 365 degrees, to brown. As rings are fried they are placed on paper towels, which absorb the fat. Rings may be placed in a large colander set in a warm oven with door partly open, if it is necessary to keep them hot. For the hamburgers, a small amount of packaged pancake mix is added to the ground meat to give the patties an attractive brown as well as lightness. Grilled hamburgers are served in split rolls, lightly warmed. They are arranged on a large platter with a bowl of hot crisp onion rings placed in center. Catsup, pickle relish and mayonnaise are suggested condiments to serve on the side. Any cold drinks such as root beer, milk shakes or bottled soft drinks are the usual beverages served with this combination.

INGREDIENTS

- Two large Bermuda onions
- Two egg yolks
- One-half cup milk
- One cup flour (less if preferred)
- One-half teaspoon salt
- Two tablespoons pancake mix to each pound ground meat
- Salt and pepper as desired

AL FRESCO ART

ROADBLOCK IN APPEAL FOR AID

To dramatize their pleas for more government aid, French farmers pile up heavy holiday traffic near Toulouse. With many tourists on the move over the Pentecost weekend, farmers barricaded key highways of France with logs and vehicles. They passed out samples of wine and cheese along with leaflets to publicize the governmeht's refusal to give them more money to compensate for wheat and fruit crop losses caused by last February's disastrous freeze. There was no serious violence but at one Toulouse roadblock, tear gas was used to move the farmers back and let the motorists through.

ROBOT GUIDE FOR SUBWAY RIDE

A native of East Pakistan, Miss Razina Atiqullan, and Charles L. Patterson, chairman of New York's Transit Authority, demonstrate the Directomat in Times Square subway station. The Directomat is a machine which, after a subway passenger pushes a numbered button that identifies his destination, produces a neatly printed card of directions. It tells which train to take and what transfers may be necessary. If this pilot model of the press-a-button-and-get-directions device works successfully, Patterson plans to have similar machines installed at the city's major subway stations.

SUMMER STRAWS

For a relatively minor investment, straw hats allow indulgence in an off-beat fancy in headgear for occasional wear. This year's straws, for home, street and resort, are made in shapes that give protection from the hot sun and add variety to leisure-time outfits. Hats in this photo are identical coolies of raffia palm and straw, equally at home with summer dress or shorts. Tiny flowers are scattered over the crowns.

Wide-brimmed straws, fashioned as witch bonnets, are trimmed with felt cutouts and worn with matching purses. Chin straps protect against loss in brisk summer winds.

Cloches in casual raffia are shown above and at left. They are trimmed with full-blown roses in contrasting colors. These close-fitting straws have chin straps to hold the light hats in place.

Two-tone pixies have pointed crowns and long side flaps. Top tones of the straws are white, flaps are red. Notch in back leaves room for a pony tail.

Hat of woven raffia is edged with a lei to give it a bright halo of color and the flavor of its Polynesian influence. A cluster of berries is attached at the peak. This style is made up in fuchsia, yellow, blue and wheat.

Broad-brimmed sun hats are set off with oversize palm leaves. Hats are in natural colored straw; the leaves are bright red.

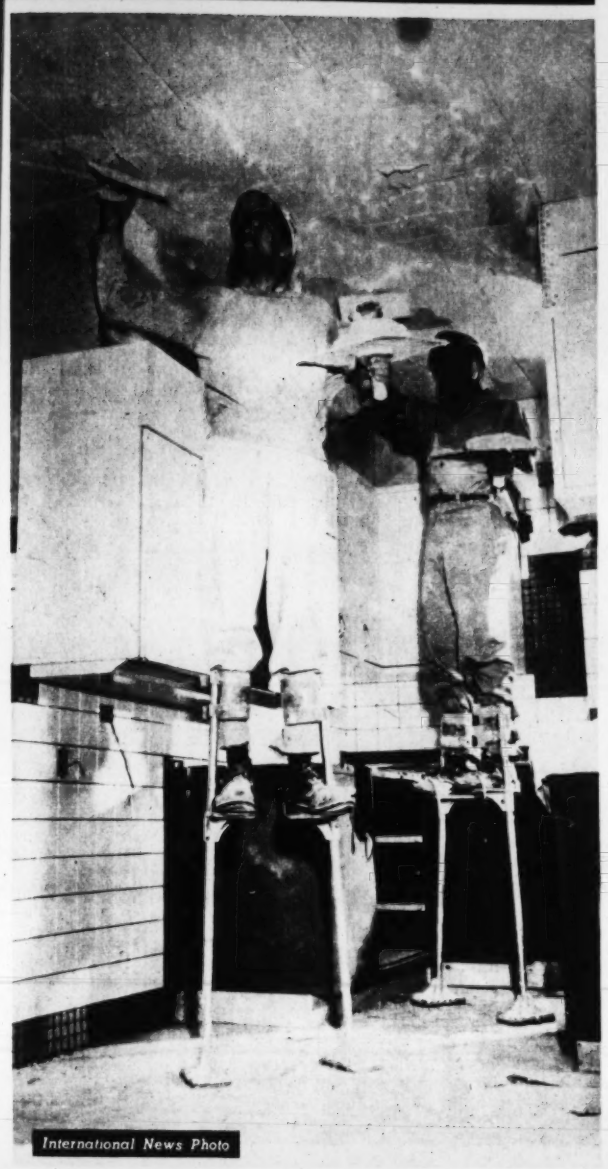
STILTS INSTEAD OF LADDERS

Workers Use Them to Gain Altitude Without Losing Their Mobility



International News Photo

RIVALRY ON A TRANSPORT

Jeff Chandler, George Nader in Film Version of Novel "Away All Boats"

1. A new ship, with a green crew, heads for the South Pacific in World War II. Captain Jebediah Hawks (Jeff Chandler) commands the attack transport, U.S.S. Belinda. A stern skipper, he turns the Belinda's shakedown cruise to Hawaii into a backbreaking training program. He drills officers in efficient combat landing procedures. Crew members become openly hostile.

2. Off beaches of Hawaii, Captain Hawks stages landing operation drills, reprimands his officers for not staging landings in less than allotted time. Lieutenant Dave MacDougall (George Nader) is injured and the ship's medical officer advises that MacDougall be sent ashore. Hawks refuses, confides to MacDougall that the ship's executive officer is not as valuable as MacDougall on the bridge.

3. Captain Hawks' strict training pays off during a bloody amphibious landing at Kwajalein, in which the Belinda's men distinguish themselves. But Hawks becomes bitter over his failure to move up and get a cruiser command because he is considered too valuable in the amphibious force. He acquires a pet monkey, orders the ship's carpenter to build him a personal sailing sloop for yachting when the ship is not engaged. His men think such eccentricities result from the captain's frustration at having to be on the Belinda.

4. When Lieutenant MacDougall is ordered by the captain on a yachting cruise, he learns Hawks' real reason: The monkey and yacht, he thinks, will stir the men out of lethargy resulting from their last battle and keep them keyed to a fighting pitch. The captain tells MacDougall he is the only capable officer aboard ship except himself and, for this reason, he will never recommend MacDougall for transfer to a command of his own.

5. The Belinda is hard hit by kamikaze dive bombers. Hawks is seriously injured. Lieutenant MacDougall orders the captain to his stateroom and takes charge of the ship. The damaged Belinda is further endangered when her propeller shaft breaks. MacDougall sends the landing craft overboard and the Belinda is towed to safety. Hawks manages to stand and look out a porthole to see his ship is safe at anchor. Before he dies, the captain names MacDougall to command the Belinda.

Johnson Is Texas Democrats' Favorite Son

Delegates to the Democratic state convention in Dallas, Texas, stage a noisy demonstration for Senator Lyndon B. Johnson. The Senate majority leader is a Southern dark horse possibility for the Democratic presidential or vice presidential nomination at the forthcoming national convention in Chicago.

SENATOR LYNDON B. JOHNSON of Texas, fresh from his victory over Governor Allan Shivers in a bitter intraparty fight, has been cast in a favorite son role by Texas Democrats. At the Democratic state convention in Dallas, he not only was named leader of the state delegation to the national convention but was pledged the support of the 56-vote delegation for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Johnson-for-President boom got under way with a rousing demonstration by many of the 4500 Democratic partisans at the Dallas fairgrounds auditorium. For 15 minutes the formal program was interrupted by a spasm of parading, singing and whooping by the banner-waving delegates.

In his hour of triumph—and in the interest of party harmony—Johnson adopted a policy of moderation toward the vanquished Shivers, who bolted the party and led Texas into the Republican column in the 1952 national election. Johnson stopped a convention move by the party's "liberal" faction to oust the pro-Shivers state executive committee.

United Press Photos except as noted

Johnson waves to delegates demonstrating in his behalf. A short time later his forces beat down a resolution that would have expelled the state executive committee, composed of members of the conservative wing headed by Governor Shivers.

Carrying their county banners, delegates parade through the convention hall after a keynote speech asking for favorite son backing for Johnson.

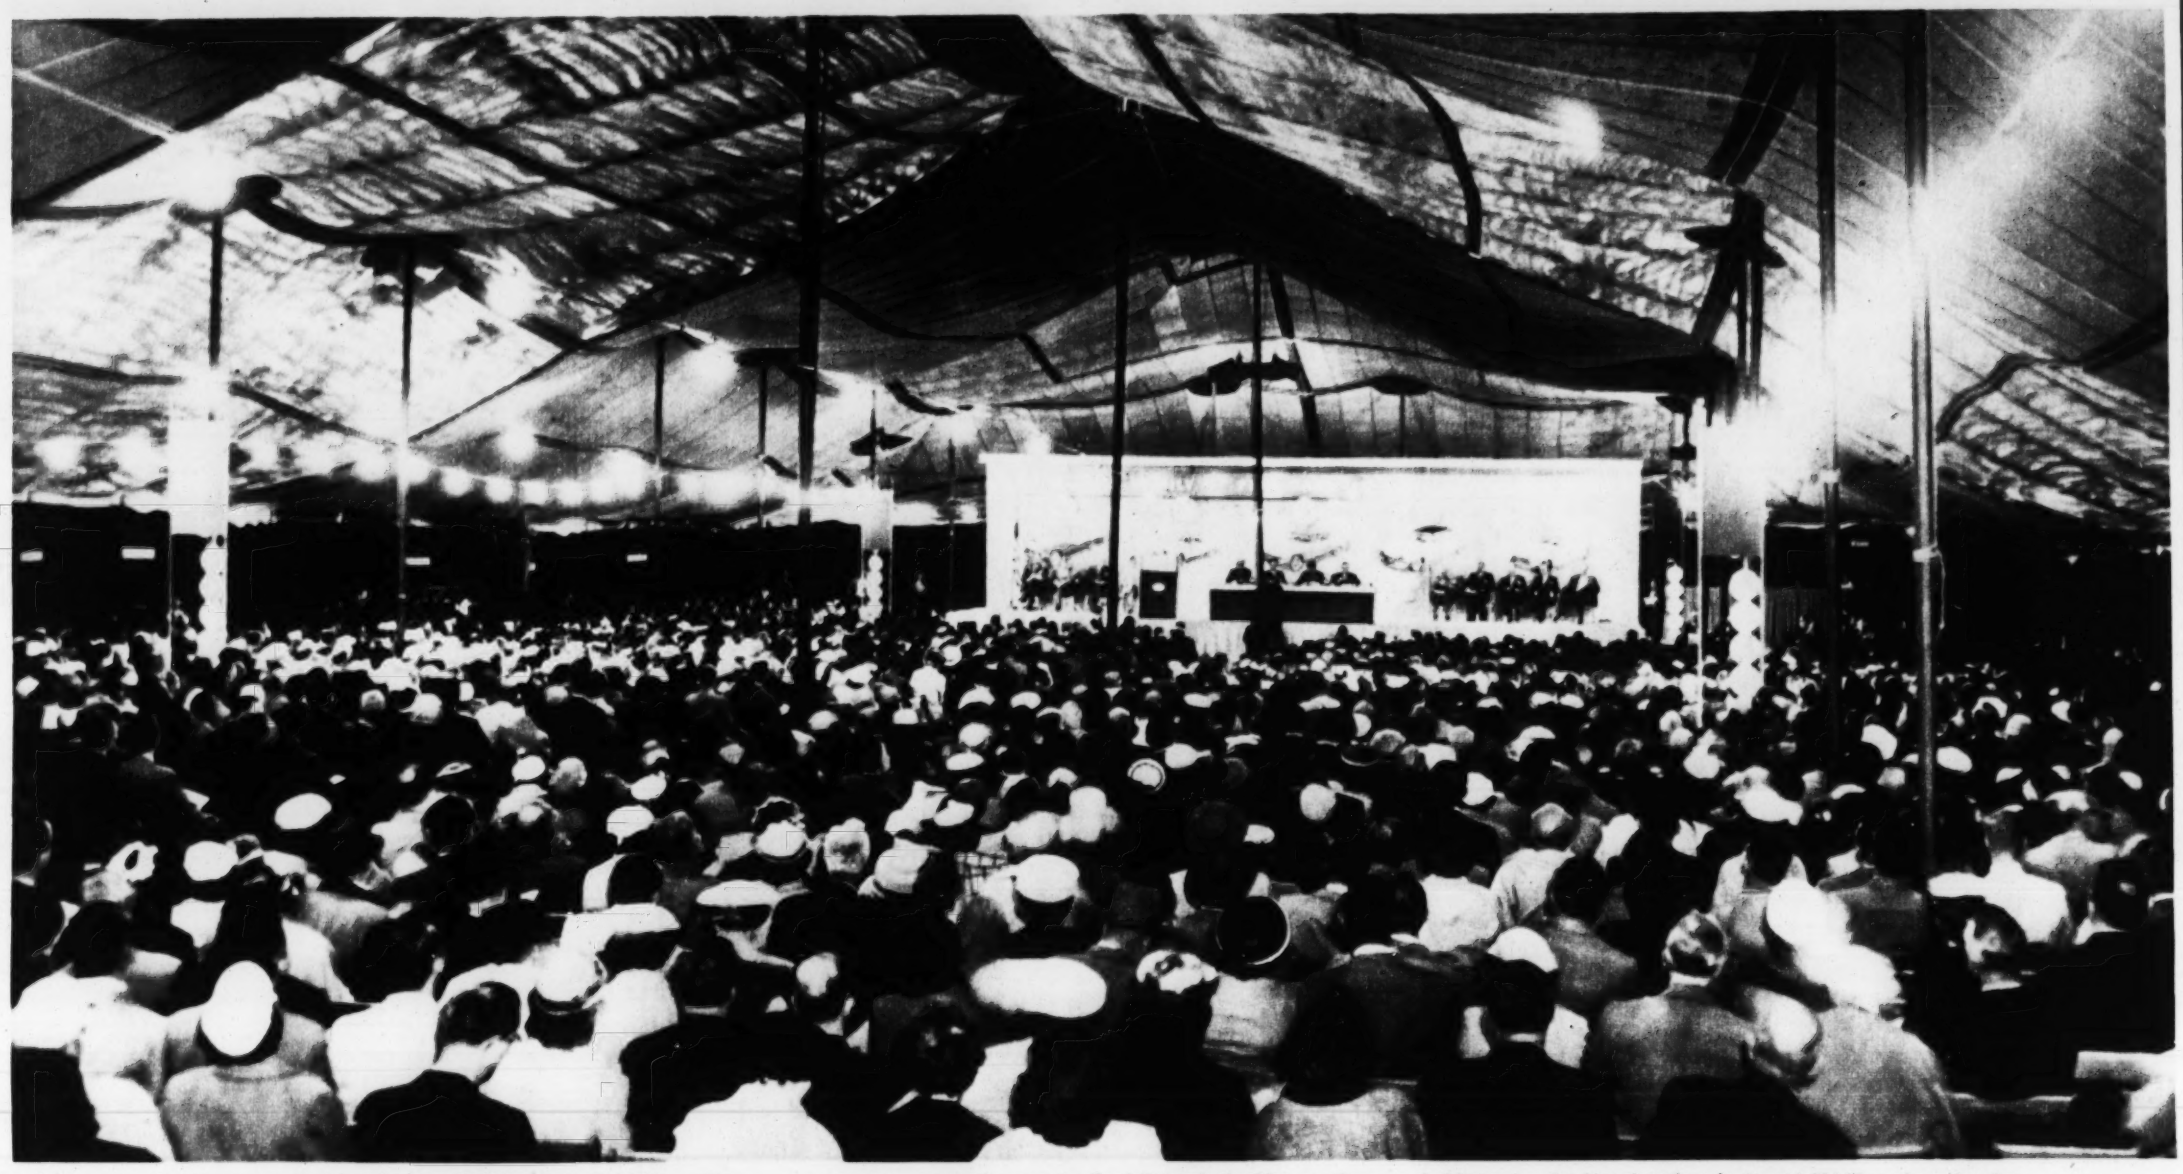
FORD STOCKHOLDERS MEET UNDER CANVAS

New Part-Owners of Automobile Empire Hear Reports of How Their Business Is Doing



In a huge, circus-like tent, stockholders of the Ford Motor Company sit on wooden folding chairs as they listen to reports by company officials (on stage in background). It was the first Ford stockholders' meeting since the company founder, Henry Ford, sold stock in the original company 38 years ago, and also the first such meeting since the company offered 10,200,000 shares of common stock to the public last January. The tent was set up on grounds near the Ford Rotunda building at Dearborn, Michigan. About 2700 stockholders from around the nation attended the first annual meeting. A number of them explained they included the meeting as part of an outing to see sights in and around Detroit. They came from as far away as St. Petersburg, Florida, from Athol, Massachusetts, and Pullman, Washington. There was no general alarm among stockholders over the fact that they had paid $64.50 a share for the stock last January 18, and that on the day of the meeting it hit a new low of $54.16 on the market. Henry Ford II, company president, told stockholders that while 1956 sales and profits will decline, the long-term future is "particularly bright." Stockholders were taken on a tour of the Ford plant before the meeting, were provided with box lunches afterward.

Municipal Opera 1956

By CHARLES MENEES
of the PICTURES Staff

FOR THE THIRD straight summer, Municipal Opera has reaped for its repertory a bumper crop of Broadway musicals of recent vintage. Four such shows are on the 1956 calendar, all playing St. Louis for the first time. Last season there were four, in 1953 five shows that were given for the first time either in the city or in Forest Park.

Also on this season's schedule is another of Municipal Opera's concert "firsts"—this one of music and ballet from grand opera. Completing the year's program are six encore productions, two being postwar musicals presented only once previously by the civic theater. One of this pair, "Annie Get Your Gun," opens the opera's thirty-eighth season Thursday, will run 11 nights.

Shows new to St. Louis are "Paint Your Wagon," "Wish You Were Here," "Peter Pan" and "Kismet," the latter to be the closing two-week attraction. All 11 shows except "Annie" and "Kismet" run one week.

"Paint Your Wagon," a story of the California gold rush, has book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner, music by Frederick Loewe. They are the collaborators of the earlier "Brigadoon" and of the current Broadway sensation "My Fair Lady," a musical version of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion."

"Wish You Were Here" is an adaptation by Arthur Kober and Joshua Logan of Kober's play "Having Wonderful Time." The setting is a Catskill summer resort. In the Harold Rome score is the title song which topped the hit parade for weeks.

"Peter Pan" will be the same musical version of the James M. Barrie play which starred Mary Martin on the stage and on TV. The Forest Park theater will be specially wired so Peter can sail through the air.

"Kismet" tells of a beggar-poet who, in one day, rises to rule Baghdad. Its music, based on that of Alexandre Borodin, includes the popular hit "Stranger in Paradise."

"An Evening of Great Music" will be made up of excerpts from 12 grand operas—"La Boheme," "Tosca," "Pagliacci," "Faust," "Carmen," "Samson and Delilah," "Lohengrin," "Tannhauser," "Jewels of the Madonna," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Thais" and "La Gioconda." Included will be the entire first act of "Tosca," and the famous ballet from "Faust."

Cole Porter's "Kiss Me, Kate," here in 1953, is returning, as are Sigmund Romberg's "The Student Prince," Vincent Youmans' "Hit the Deck," Oscar Straus' "The Chocolate Soldier," and "The Great Waltz," the story of the Viennese waltz kings, the Johann Strausses.

This will be John Kennedy's fifteenth anniversary as the opera's productions director, Edwin McArthur's twelfth as musical director. Other staff members are: Paul C. McGuire, art director; Alan Green, stage director; Anthony Nelle, choreographer and ensemble director; Dan Eckley and Ted Cappy, splitting the season as modern dance and ensemble director; Rene Wiegert, associate musical director; John Scott, general stage manager; John E. Peters, stage manager; James O'Neill, Richard Platt, David H. Tucker, assistant stage managers; Jerald B. Stone, assistant musical director; Leo B. Meyer, assistant to Mr. McGuire.

The season schedule: "Annie Get Your Gun," June 7 through 17; "Paint Your Wagon," June 18-24; "The Student Prince," June 25-July 1; "Hit the Deck," July 2-8; "The Great Waltz," July 9-15; "The Chocolate Soldier," July 16-22; "Wish You Were Here," July 23-29; "Kiss Me, Kate," July 30-August 5; "An Evening of Great Music," August 6-12; "Peter Pan," August 13-19; "Kismet," August 20-September 2.

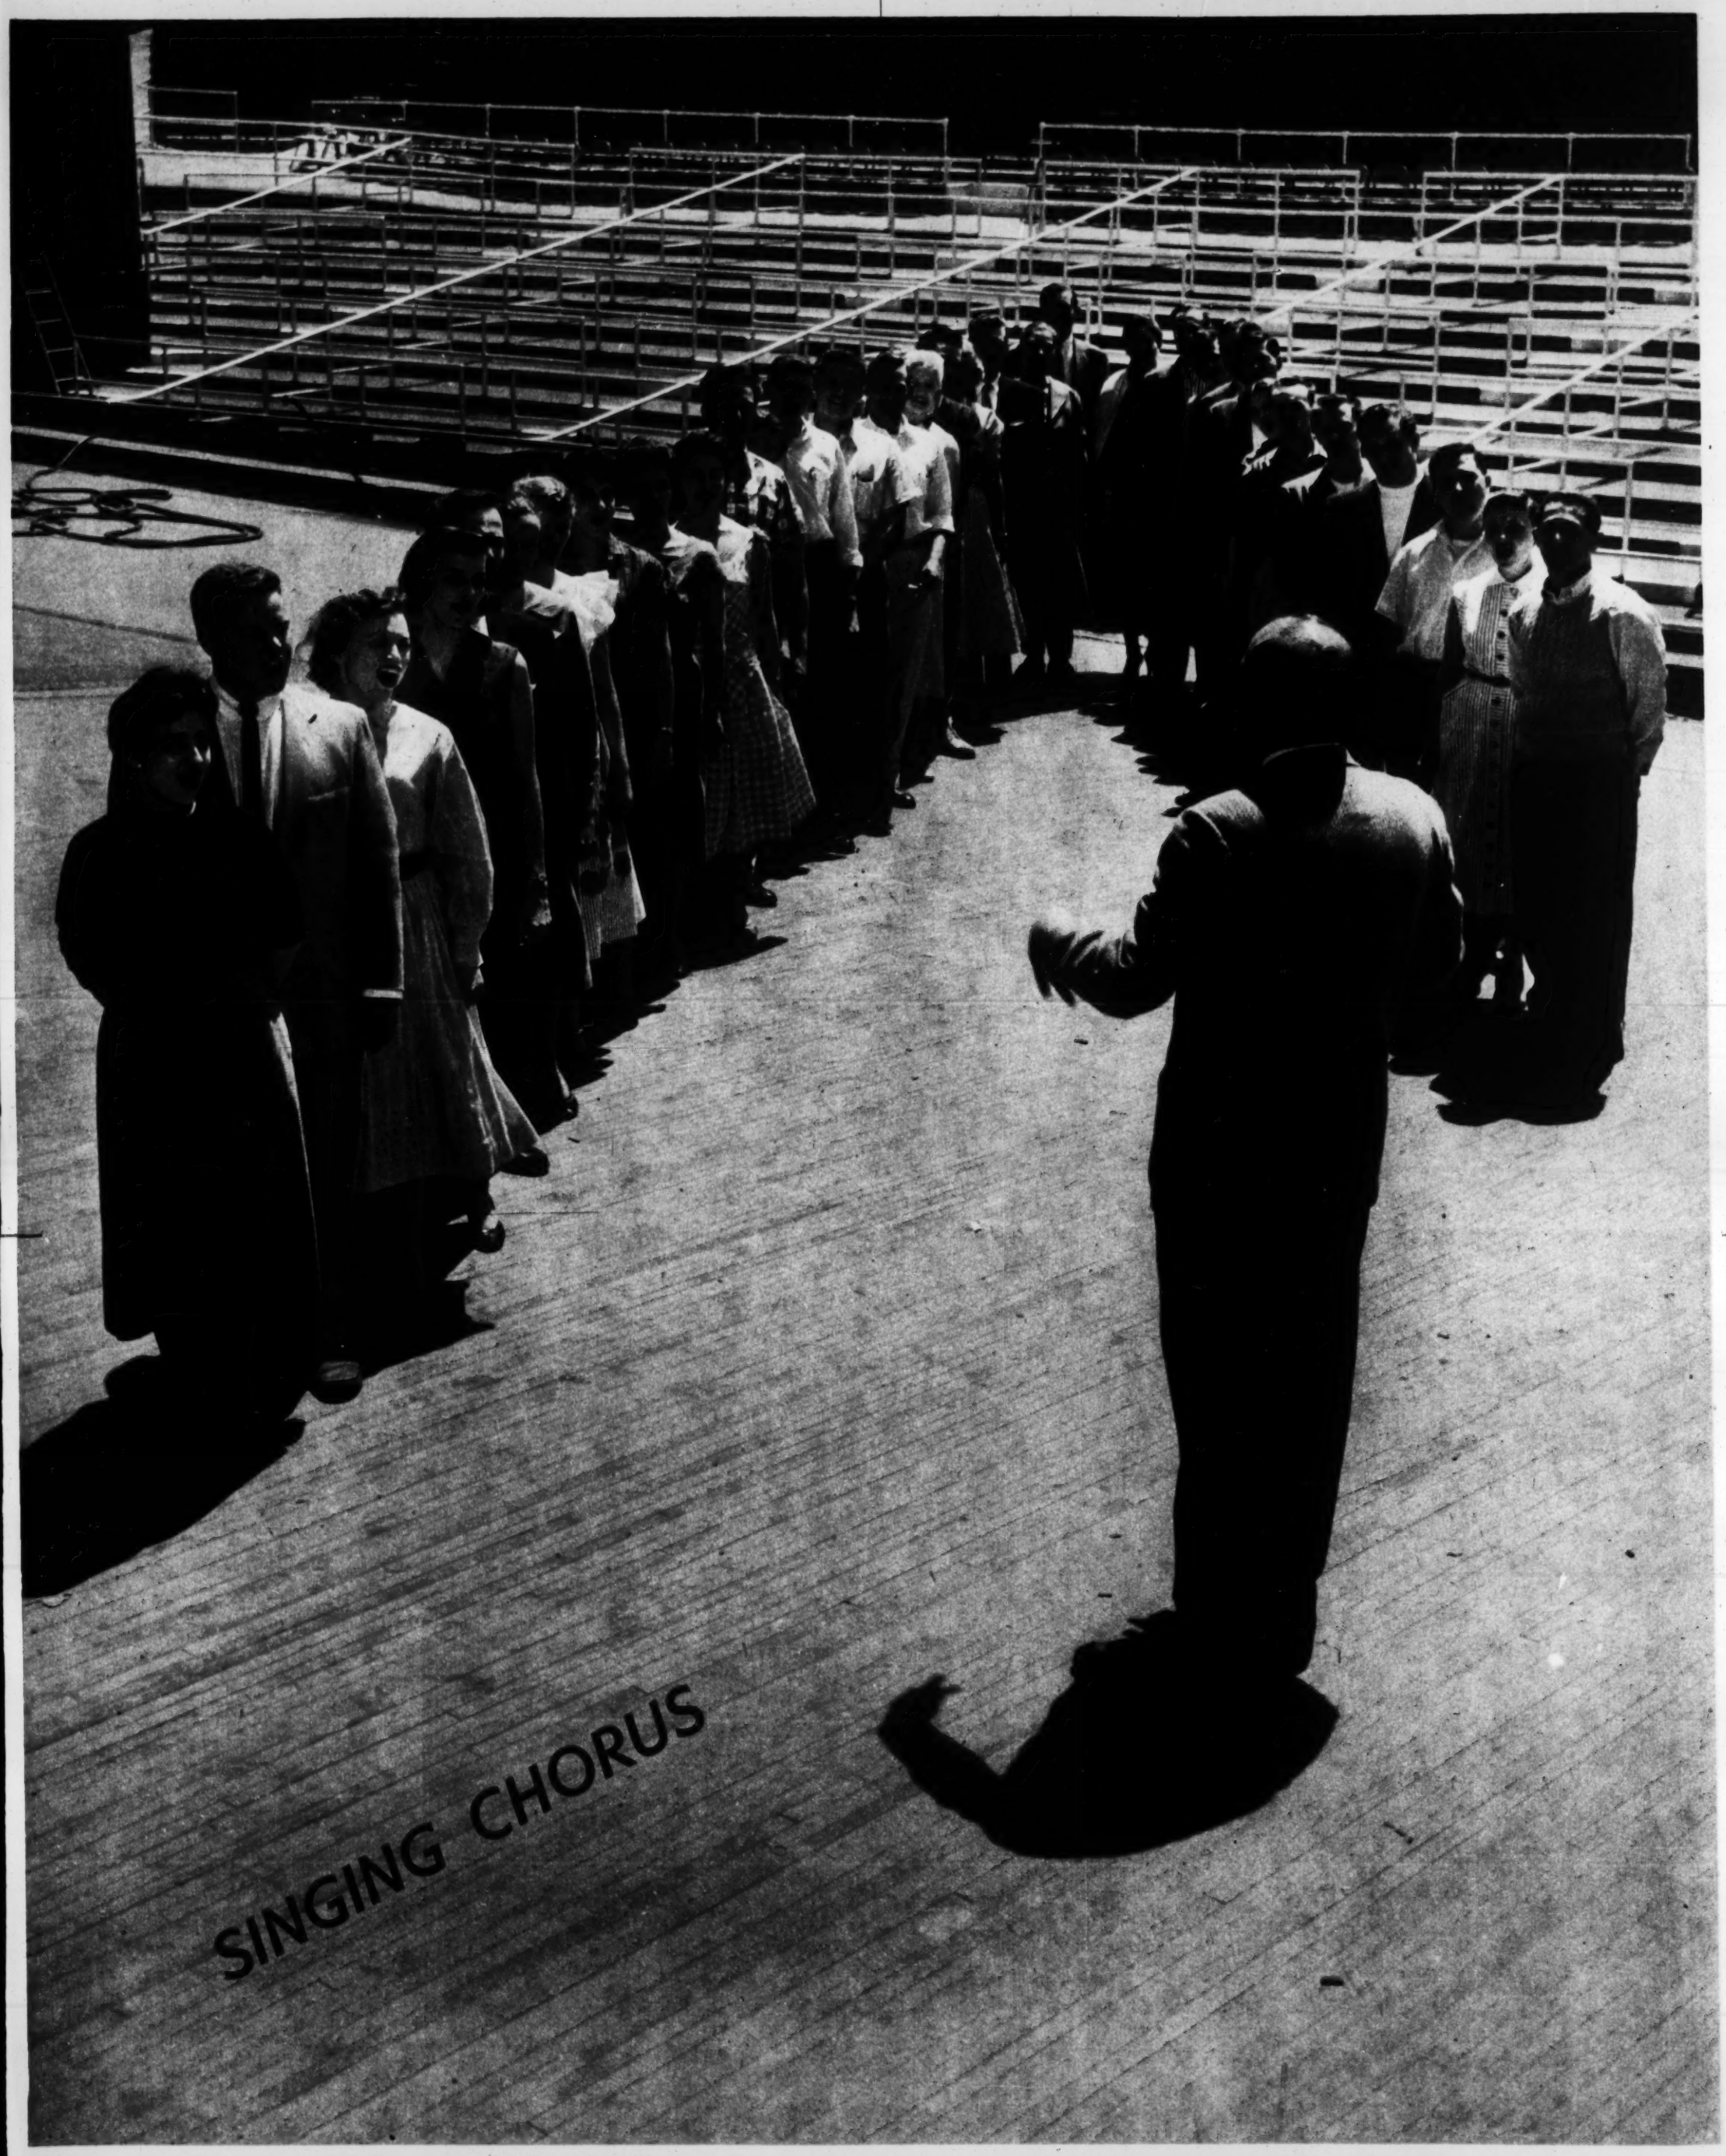
TERRY SAUNDERS

Terry Saunders sings "I Hate Men" in this scene from Municipal Opera's coming production of "Kiss Me, Kate." She will have the double role of Katharine and Lilli Vanessi in the Cole Porter musical. It's as Katharine in "Kate's" play-within-a-play—Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew"—that she sings her list of grievances against the opposite sex. Miss Saunders made her Municipal Opera bows last season in "Allegro" and "The King and I." In the latter she was Lady Thiang, a role she repeats in the soon-to-be-released movie version.



MUNICIPAL OPERA'S singing chorus, arranged in V-formation on the giant stage in Forest Park, hits practice notes for the ear of Rene Wiegert, associate musical director. The chorus of 38 members has 21 new faces. Heretofore the chorus has had an equal representation of men and women, but this summer the men are in a majority, 22 to 16. The reason: This season's shows call for a preponderance of male singing. Perseverance paid off for one of the women singers—she made it this time after six previous attempts to get in the chorus. Two of the women have the same last name—Dysart—but are not related. One is from Oak Ridge, Tennessee, the other from Webster Groves. Thirteen of the singers are from St. Louis, six from outstate Missouri. There are seven from Illinois, four from Ohio, three from Tennessee, two from Indiana, one each from California, Pennsylvania and Texas. Chorus members, reading clockwise, are Fannie Cusanelli, Brian Davies, Nancy Dysart, Rosemary Dysart, Peter Messineo, Suzanne Brussman, Shirley Raskas, Roberta Benesch, June House, Joanne Hoffman, Ken Stroud, Mary Ann Heltzig, Ben Reed, James Bowers, Rex O'Hara, Edye Vann, Bill Eastham, Lorraine Hotfelder, Jack Fletcher, Georgia Magrames, Joe De Pauw, Judy Moore, Carroll Wayham, Patricia Raymond, John J. Smith, Donald Beynon, Phoebe Knox, Ken Tihen, Donald Mallory, Harry Goz, Walter Lorenzi, Helen Held and Robert Lamm. Five men singers had not arrived in the city in time for this photograph: Jerry Jennings, Charles Magruder, Dean Phillips, Earl Rice and Arthur Schwartz.

Upon the death of a friend you should go at once to the house, write "With sympathy" on your card and leave it at the door. Or, you write a letter to the family. In either case you send flowers addressed either to the funeral of (name of deceased) or to the nearest relative. The latter method is preferable, if the relative is a friend. But the former method is followed if the deceased alone was known to you.

On the card accompanying the flowers, and addressed to one of the family, you write "With sympathy," or "With deepest sympathy," or "With heartfelt sympathy," or "With love and sympathy." When flowers are addressed to the funeral of the deceased, no message is included. If there is a notice in the papers requesting that no flowers be sent, you disregard it only if you are a very intimate friend.

A very natural impulse of kindness is to send a few flowers with a note either immediately or a few days or weeks after the funeral to any bereaved person who is particularly in your thoughts. A few flowers sent from time to time—possibly for long afterward—are especially comforting in their assurance of continued sympathy.

Only sweet cream—

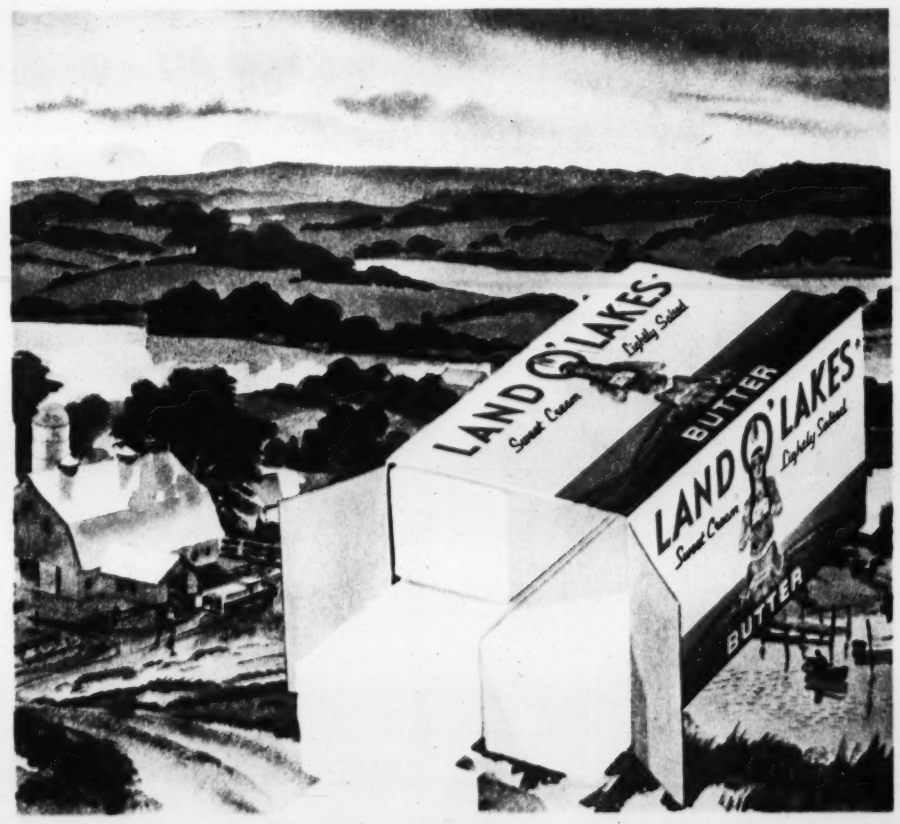
ever gets to be Land O'Lakes Butter

Sweet cream, sunrise-fresh, is collected in the Land O' Lakes early each morning. It is rushed to our creameries. Churned promptly into fresh, firm butter. Chilled and packed, ready for your table. That's why Land O' Lakes Butter is fresher when you taste it. That's why it stays fresher longer, too. It's churned from sweet — not sour — cream, every day.



Land O'Lakes® Butter

a full ½ gallon of Sweet Not Sour Cream in every pound*

*True. Here in the land of lakes and meadows—where nature and man work together to produce the sweetest cream ever poured into a churn—we use a full half gallon of sweet, fresh cream to churn each pound of this delicately flavored butter.

Lightly Salted or Unsalted

INGENUES

Paula Stewart's first roles with opera will be Looloo in "Hit the Deck" and Kathie in "The Student Prince."

In her Municipal Opera debut, Dianne Barton will be Gretchen in "The Student Prince."

Another of the newcomers, Elaine Dunn (top photo) will have the role of Winnie Tate in "Annie Get Your Gun." On her first Forest Park visit Patricia Marand (above) will be Teddy Stern in "Wish You Were Here," the role she had with the original company.

Margot Moser, on first visit, will be Marsinah in "Kismet," the role she played with the touring company.

PART-TIME MENTAL CARE PAGE 8

PHOTO BY LLOYD SHEARER

Twelve years after D-Day, I still remember . . .

That first soldier I met in Normandy

by GEN. MAXWELL D. TAYLOR
CHIEF OF STAFF, U. S. ARMY

At about 11 p.m. on the eve of D-Day in Normandy — June 6, 1944 — the parachute elements of the 101st Airborne Division took off from English airfields in more than 400 C-47s. General Eisenhower saw us off, which in itself would have convinced us that we were doing something a little out of the ordinary. In fact, our division was to spearhead the greatest military operation in history — the allied invasion of Fortress Europe.

Our planes were in tight formation, a huge V of V's with wing tips almost touching. This was required so that, at the drop zone, our men would jump together and land in comparatively compact groupings for combat. But as we headed across the Channel and approached the Norman coast, a gray wall rose in the distance: fog. We entered it, and every pilot, through natural fear of collision, began veering right or left. By the time moonlight broke through, my plane seemed to be entirely alone.

Suddenly we were in the battle area. Our earlier pathfinder planes had alerted the enemy, and from all sides ground fire was boiling upward. As we approached the drop zones of my division, the battlefield seemed illuminated by antiaircraft fire and the light from airplanes already hit and aflame.

Then we were jumping . . .

Thanks to a last-minute gust of wind that swung my chute away from the others, I landed alone in the high grass of a moonlit pasture. Quickly I struggled to my feet, pistol in hand. Although there was small-arms fire nearby, the only visible sign of life was a circle of curious Norman cows that stood chewing their cud and gazing at this unexpected disturber. I got busy on my parachute, tightly strapped to my body and legs. The morning dews had saturated my clothes, making release difficult. Clutching the pistol in one hand, and working the straps with the other, I soon realized I was getting no place. So I put down my pistol and cut my way out with a knife — fully expecting a German to appear at any moment. I must say that was an anxious and thoroughly undignified interlude.

Once out of the chute, the next problem was to find my troops. Where was this division which I had brought to Normandy? I should explain that in anticipation of the difficulties of a night assembly, we of the 101st had equipped ourselves with a toy-like mechanical cricket by which we could make a cricketing sound to identify one another in the darkness.

Now, cricket in one hand and gun in the other, I set out to find my soldiers. I was in newly dug earthworks — which suggested that a German garrison might be nearby. As I stumbled over each new bank of earth, I expected a challenge or a shot. This prowl through the German positions lasted some 20 minutes. They seemed like years.

Then, slipping along in the dark shadows of a hedgerow, I heard someone moving on the other side. Both of us were approaching the end of the hedge, which was just ahead. Pistol cocked, I moved forward slowly, slowly. The other person obviously was doing the same. Just as I was wondering whether to rush around the corner and fire, I heard a sound — one that I will never forget — the sound of the 101st Airborne Division's cricket.

And There He Stood . . .

I "cricketed" back and jumped around the headgerow. There in the moonlight was a bareheaded parachute infantryman, M-1 rifle in hand, bayonet fixed, the bright look of adventure in his eye. That young parachutist was the most welcome sight I ever saw in the whole war. We fell in each other's arms and gave that fraternal embrace which men can exchange only in moments of high action.

From that moment on, so far as I was concerned, the battle was won. Normandy was conquered. Fortress Europe had had it. ■

NEW HOPE FOR MILLIONS OF TROUBLED AMERICANS . . .

PART-TIME MENTAL CARE

En route to recovery via work therapy, these day patients at Boston Psychopathic Hospital learn to type. Later, they will do hospital clerical chores.

Here's a big step away from the 'snake pit' ideas that surround emotional illness

by ROBERT P. GOLDMAN and SID ROSS

GROUP THERAPY finds social worker (second from right) encouraging patients to discuss problems frankly.

BOSTON, MASS.

FOR SEVERAL months, a young, smartly dressed woman walked into Boston Psychopathic Hospital, a mental institution here, at 8:30 every morning. At 5:30 p.m. she would leave to go home.

Miss L. was suffering from a serious mental illness — and so, between morning and early evening, she received full treatment at the hospital. This included drugs, to help her achieve peace of mind; work and group therapy, to reawaken her interests and skills; and counseling to help her over the rough spots of daily living.

Then, on her own initiative, Miss L. went out to look for a job. Soon she landed one in a local department store. Today she is fully recovered. Neither her customers nor her boss dream that she was once a mental patient.

Such cases are not unusual, for Miss L. is one of a growing army of ex-patients who have benefited from a revolutionary idea now spreading through the nation's mental hospitals: part-time mental care on a day- or night-only basis.

Already, this bold, money- and time-saving idea has produced astonishing results. Its implications are even more exciting when you consider these facts:

There are about 750,000 patients in mental hospitals now. An added 9,250,000 Americans suffer from some form of mental disease. One out of four families is affected. Of this staggering total, experts say, a great many can be helped by part-time care.

You Could Be Affected

That means you, a member of your family or a friend could one day be helped by the new "open-door" therapy, which costs about one-third as much as full-time hospitalization and promises to take much of the fear and shame out of mental illness.

Open-door care will permit more and more people to regain their mental health with shorter hospital stays — or without ever having to be admitted as full-time in-hospital patients.

Thus far, day-care and night-care programs have sprung up around the U.S. — in Boston, Omaha, Des Moines, Washington, D.C.; Topeka, Kans.; Lafayette, La. New York City will embark on a part-time-care plan soon. Within the next three years, part-time care will spread to three or four times the present number of hospitals.

One authority told PARADE: "We visualize this approach as the next great step forward in treatment of the mentally ill. In the future, with day and night care, a large proportion of the individuals now hospitalized will never have to see a hospital bed or be cooped up within four walls . . ."

Six types of patient already are being helped by part-time care:

1) Once-hospitalized patients who are ready for discharge. They total more than 150,000 each year. Many of these people need an "emotional bridge" between the hospital and the world outside. Without it, 50 per cent or more may suffer relapses and be rehospitalized. Day care with its varied treatment services — drugs, counseling, friendly socializing, group and physical therapy, electric shock, occupational therapy — often can provide that "in-between" bridge.

2) Mentally sick people who do not need full-time hospitalization. Often, these people refuse to seek help in a hospital because they fear being "put away" forever. Psychiatrists estimate the number of these potential patients at more than 1,000,000.

Miss F. was such a case. A 52-year-old spinster, she became depressed and suspicious when her mother died. Reluctant at first to seek help, Miss F. finally went to the Menninger Foundation Hospital in Topeka.

Doctors there decided that she would do much better on day care than as a full-time hospitalized patient. In a few months, Miss F. was so improved that she returned to her job and has been well ever since.

Another Menninger patient, a 19-year-old college student, continued right on with his college courses while he was on limited day care.

3) Hospitalized patients who actually don't belong in hospitals. They would do much better on a part-time basis. As more such programs develop, more patients will be switched to them.

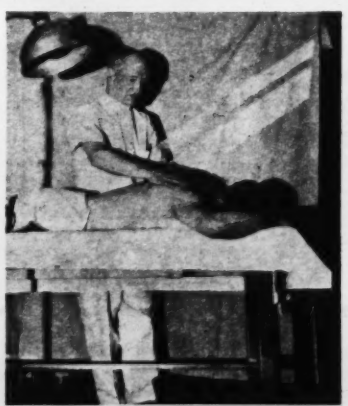
4) Mentally disturbed people who can hold down full-time jobs, but require the treatment and security of a mental hospital — overnight.

G.W. is a night-only patient at Boston Psychopathic. He works every day and returns to the hospital at dinner time. "I've got no family," he explains, "and I feel better here until they say I'm ready for final discharge. Working days helps me break the ice. But I know that if I lose the job I'll still not be out in the cold . . ."

Night care is especially valuable where families are nervous about the patient living at home — even if the hospital is prepared to discharge him.

5) Relatives of discharged patients.

Mrs. T., a 42-year-old housewife, was about to be discharged from the Menninger day-care program. But doctors felt that before she could lead a happy home life, her husband should learn of the problems which had contributed to his wife's illness.



PHYSICAL health of day patients is not overlooked. Here, one gets a massage.

So he reported to the hospital daily for a short period. As he participated in Mrs. T.'s treatment program, he began to understand the sources of her trouble. When she was discharged, her husband was equipped to meet his wife's emotional needs.

6) Children and the aging.

Today there are few part-time facilities for these two groups. One day-care center for children is located in Omaha at the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute. There, troubled children report at 9 a.m. They receive treatment and go to special school classes if they are able to. Parents call for the children at 4 p.m.

In addition, the Institute is hoping to set up an experimental day center for the aging. One of the biggest problems of this group is loneliness. Day care could do much to end that problem.

How does part-time care function?

The patient reports either in the morning or the evening. (At Montreal General Hospital, one of the pioneers in day and night care, they call it the "hotel" system of treatment.)

The day patient may start by chatting with the social worker or psychiatrist. He may then go to a group-therapy session — directed by a hospital staff member — where patients openly discuss their problems. PARADE sat in on such a session at Boston Psychopathic.

From patients came statements like: "I get confused when I leave the hospital and get back among all those people." . . . "Most of us are strapped for money, but that's secondary . . . First we want to get well." . . . "A couple of days ago, I just walked around in a panic." . . . "This treatment has helped me. At least now, I can get out of bed in the morning and come down here."

Later, the day patient may do some work. At Boston Psychopathic, patients man the coffee shop, do wall painting, repair work and other chores.

In addition, the patient may build something. He may paint a picture, which comes under the heading of occupational therapy. Somewhere along the way he may be given a "tranquilizing" drug, such as reserpine or chlorpromazine.

These drugs, used widely in mental hospitals only within the past three years, have revolutionized mental care. Since their introduction, hospital discharges have soared as much as 19 per cent, thus intensifying the need for part-time care.

Night patients go to the hospital straight from work. They receive treatment similar to that of their daytime counterparts. They dine about 8:30.

How open-door care pays off

Patients are in bed by 10:30 or 11 and leave for work or home after breakfast.

Montreal General is so enthusiastic about its program that it has written letters to big local businesses telling of the available service. The response has been great — and varied. As a result, "We can offer treatment 24 hours a day for every stage of mental illness," says Dr. A. E. Moll, head of the hospital's psychiatric program. He adds:

"I want to emphasize that there are no locked doors here — and we have some very sick patients indeed."

That statement reflects perhaps the most important aspect of part-time mental care. Says a psychiatrist in the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene: "Open-door mental hospitals, with no bars or shackles, will do much to break down the 'jail' aspect of mental care."

In addition, when more people are entering and leaving mental hospitals freely, many more cases will be detected early — when treatment results are best.

Dr. J. Sanbourne Bockoven, in charge of Boston Psychopathic's day and night care, goes even farther:

"This approach places the emphasis where it belongs — not on buildings and beds. Building more hospitals and getting more doctors isn't the solution. Many full-time patients become stagnating vegetables and lose both humanity and hope . . .

"With part-time care, however, I think we can keep thousands of sufferers from mental illness out of hospitals and also shorten the stays of many who have to be committed. Part-time care is becoming the dominant trend in the mental-health field . . ."

For patients like Mrs. R. B., a middle-aged woman with sorrow etched deep in her face, Dr. Bockoven's statements are as important as life itself.

Recently, after months of emotional turmoil, Mrs. B. volunteered for care at Boston Psychopathic. Under the impression that once you entered a mental hospital, you never got out, Mrs. B. was pleasantly surprised when she was put on day care.

"Tell me," she asked PARADE's reporters, "do you know of other people they've helped here? I'm a little scared."

When she got an affirmative answer, her face brightened. And later, when Mrs. B. sat in group-therapy session, the deep, sad lines in her face began to give way to a little smile. ■

"It's so 'ard," Josanne Mariani sighed, "to be engaged to Marlon Brando.

"All the time newspapers are asking: 'When are you and Marlon getting married? Why don't you wear your engagement ring? 'Asn't Marlon changed 'is mind about marrying you?'

"Honest," continued this wan, black-eyed French girl (see cover), "it's terrible, terrible. After all, we are not Janet Leigh and Tony Curtis. We do not say our most intimate problems to the public. Also it's not fair.

"Marlon is in Japan filming Teahouse of the August Moon and nobody bothers 'im with such questions. 'E will not answer them anyway."

We were sitting in Josanne's apartment, a sparsely furnished one-bedroom flat (rent: $80 a month) located atop a garage, where I was listening sympathetically to the soft-spoken woes of the girl slated to become Mrs. Marlon Brando.

Three years ago, Josanne explained, she had been an unknown New York governess brought over from France by Dr. Daniel Schneider, a psychiatrist, to teach French to his two children. Then she met the fascinating and unconventional Brando at a party, became engaged to him, and life hasn't been the same since.

Fan-magazine writers and gossip columnists demanded to be told how her fiance kissed, how he made love. Was it true that Brando was an impossible eccentric, that he had no real marital intentions, that she'd been used as a publicity device and then abandoned?

Josanne declared that these interrogations had shocked and bewildered her. After trying to be obliging and polite, she made up her mind not to answer such personal inquiries.

When Josanne arrived here late last year, some observers predicted a quick Las Vegas elopement. Instead, Brando organized his own production company and took off for location work in Japan. His fiancee signed up with a little-theater group and now attends drama classes two days a week, looking for acting jobs between times. In six months she obtained only one job, a feature role in a daytime TV show.

Casting directors say the girl has talent but that the roles she can play are limited by her Latin features and French accent. "Another important point," an agent told me, "is that if Josie is going to marry Brando she doesn't need the work. The casting directors feel they would rather give the job to a girl who really needs the dough."

"I'm a Lucky Girl"

Although lack of work periodically depresses her, Josanne says she is "really one of the luckiest girls in the world." Here's why she thinks so:

She was born in Marseilles on May 31, 1935, where her Corsican father, Charles Mariani, was a taxi driver. Her parents separated when she was an infant, and she was raised in the Mediterranean coastal village of Bandol by a nana named Madame Michel, while her mother worked as a waitress in seaside cafes.

Josanne was only 4 at the outbreak of World War II. She was evacuated to Romans, an Alpine village. She remembers bombing attacks nearby and a visit once from her father, who was killed in the resistance.

Her own life began producing excitement when she was 15 and started posing for Moses Kisling, a Bandol artist. Through Kisling she met Dr. Schneider, who later sent for her as a teacher-companion to his children.

She arrived in New York on March 5, 1953, a gawking newcomer. When she soon showed an interest in dramatics, Dr. Schneider was encouraging. When the family moved away for the summer, Dr. Schneider got her a job as apprentice at the Westhampton (L.I.) summer theater.

"I did everything," says Josanne, "prop girl, sign painter, 'anging posters, everything. When the summer was over, Dr. Schneider asked me if I still wanted to act. I said, 'Yes, more than ever.' "

Josanne enrolled in Stella Adler's drama school. In November, Marlon Brando, an alumnus, showed up at a school party.

" 'E was so wonderful," she fondly remembers. "We began going together. What a lovely man. We went to the theater mostly. I met 'is friends, Wally Cox, Maureen Stapleton, and then 'is father and 'is sister. But I do not talk about Marlon. It is too personal."

In 1954 Brando invited his young lady friend to come to Hollywood as his guest and watch him play the role of Napoleon in Désirée. This visit led to their secret engagement. Josanne flew back to France to tell her folks the good news. Brando arrived a few days later, rolling into town on a hired scooter.

With her engagement announced to Hollywood's famous bachelor, the fisherman's stepdaughter (her mother had remarried) became an international celebrity. Newsmen descended on tiny Bandol in droves, interviewing and photographing the young couple from every angle. Josanne became a figure of note. Brando became a figure of rage. "I can't stand this persecution any longer!" he shouted. "Isn't there any place we can have a little privacy?" In desperation he took off for Rome, leaving his fiancee behind to cope with newsmen as best she could.

Reporters pursued her in Paris and New York with relentless questioning. There were also radio and TV offers. The only one Josanne accepted was from a big variety show; she flew out to Hollywood and for $1,000 mumbled a few sentences while 30,000,000 video viewers gaped. She then returned to New York to resume her studies.

HAPPY TIMES are reflected in this snapshot of Marlon and Josanne during courtship.

While Josanne worked diligently on her dramatics and diction, Brando labored on Guys and Dolls in Hollywood. When the movie was completed, Josanne joined her fiance in the film colony and has been here ever since.

Whether or not she succeeds as an actress, whether or not she eventually becomes Mrs. Marlon Brando, Josanne, just past her 21st birthday, still considers herself one of the world's most fortunate young women.

"Whenever I am depressed out 'ere," she confesses, "I think of all the wonderful things that 'ave 'appened to me since I was 15. Then my 'eart dances a little dance of joy." ■

An Opportunity for All Patriotic Americans to Help

During this, our 150th Anniversary Year, we of Colgate-Palmolive feel particularly fortunate in joining with you—the American public—in doing our bit to help send the U. S. Olympic Team to Australia to participate in the 1956 Olympic Games.

Remember, there is no subsidy or other financial assistance available from any branch of government. America relies entirely on each citizen's contributions and self-sacrifice . . . because that's the way a democracy works.

The U. S. Olympic Committee must select, organize and equip our best amateur athletes. All items of direct expense must be covered, including expenses of the tryouts—plus transportation to and from the Olympic Games of all participants, coaches, managers, trainers and officials. Housing and feeding of these individuals at the site of the Games and a thousand and one other necessary expenses must be paid for by sports-loving American citizens.

Every generous-hearted American who desires to see the Olympic Games tradition perpetuated will want to help. That is why, with the sanction and co-operation of the U. S. Olympic Committee, we invite you to participate in this unique and personally rewarding fund-raising effort.

VACATION IN

Texas helicopter family

A Texas gas-station attendant was minding his business the other day when he heard an engine overhead. Glancing up, he was amazed to see a helicopter settle down on the station's concrete parking strip. He was even more amazed when the pilot — a pleasant-faced man in a business suit, accompanied by a pretty woman and four squirming children — leaned out to ask matter-of-factly: "Mister, you happen to have any high-octane?"

The attendant nodded. "Okay," the pilot said. "Fill her up."

Such visitations are routine for Joe Mashman, helicopter pilot-salesman of Dallas, who combines business with pleasure by taking his wife, Ernie, and youngsters on some of America's most fascinating vacation jaunts. The Mashmans may not be the nation's most widely traveled family, but they go farther, faster, than probably any similar group you know.

They fly to picnics. They fly on holiday week ends. They take cross-country trips to California or, in the other direction, to Grandma Mashman's house outside Chicago. Pictures here show the Mashmans on one of their typical "whirlybird safaris." As a family they've logged hundreds of hours of flying time.

The 40-year-old Joe, a crack test pilot by profession, is now assistant sales manager for the helicopter division of the Bell Aircraft Corp. Known as "Helicopter Joe," he is famous as a 'copter pilot-demonstrator in both civilian and military circles.

Because Joe has spent so much of his time in his helicopter, his youngsters practically cut their teeth on the instrument panel. As he says: "They flew before they walked." Mrs. Mashman herself is a competent 'copter pilot, although she has not yet obtained her license.

And because they are so continuously on the aerial go, the Mashmans have devised their own flight map, which is studded with colored markers. A red marker indicates a roadside gas station that sells high-octane gas. A red marker with a black cross means the station has clean rest rooms. Green markers locate good restaurants with adjacent areas where a 'copter can come to roost. Black markers mean good motels, and so on.

Out on the "open road," the Mashmans have adventures like any other tourists. Once, on a week-end trip, daughter Barbara developed a severe sore throat. Because polio was rampant at the time, the worried Mashmans landed at a gas station outside a small town.

A mechanic directed Joe to the nearest doctor. Hedgehopping a couple of miles, Joe brought his 'copter down in the country medico's front yard. The M.D. diagnosed Barbara's ailment as common sore throat and swabbed it to give her relief. Joe then took the 71-year-old doctor for a ride in the 'copter, simultaneously writing off the bill and creating a potential helicopter buyer.

On another trip the Mashmans landed at a restaurant on the outskirts of a town. A local cop tagged the 'copter for being parked too near a fire hydrant. Later an air-minded judge (whom Joe had taken up for a ride) ruled that parking near fire hydrants applied only to horse-drawn vehicles and automobiles.

The prize adventure happened on a visit to Grandma Mashman. Ernie was at the controls. Joe, weary from demonstration flights, was asleep at her side. Suddenly Ernie ran into a violent storm, with zero visibility.

Ernie didn't dare go on — and didn't want to awaken Joe. Resorting to a favorite 'copter-pilot trick, she located a tall, bushy tree that reared up out of the ground fog. Jockeying carefully, she landed the 'copter safely in the foliage, and there rode out the storm.

When the weather cleared, the Mashmans looked and gasped in surprise. The tree in which they were roosting was in Grandma Mashman's back yard. ■

TAKING OFF from spot where he landed family for a picnic, Joe Mashman looks back as wife and children wave goodbye. He'll go to his office, and rejoin them later.

For June parties, luscious cake and ice-cream sandwiches can be made, frozen and stored until needed

EVERYONE will applaud this beautiful cake (which will serve 12), and teenagers especially will enjoy the easy-to-eat ice-cream sandwiches.

KITCHEN HINT
Set cake to be frosted on a one-tier Lazy Susan. Revolve the Susan as you frost (center picture, above).

TO MAKE today's Party Cake, prepare your favorite angel food or use a packaged mix. Bake it, let it cool, then cut it into three layers (above) with a serrated knife blade.

WHILE cake is cooling, make chocolate frosting. Put cake on paperboard square. Spread frosting between layers (above), and on top and sides of cake. Garnish with walnut meats.

PLACE unwrapped cake in freezer compartment or freezer until firm. Then wrap, paperboard and all, in moisture-proof plastic film (above). Heat-seal and store in freezer until needed.

PARTY CAKE

1 6-oz. pkg. (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1 small can (⅔ cup) evaporated milk
2 eggs, separated
¼ cup sugar
½ cup heavy cream, whipped
1 10" angel food cake
Walnut halves

Place semi-sweet chocolate, milk and egg yolks in top of double boiler. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until chocolate melts and mixture thickens slightly. Remove from heat; chill just until mixture is cold. Beat egg whites stiff, but not dry. Gradually add sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold into chocolate mixture; fold in whipped cream. Place cake on foil-covered paperboard square. Cut cake into three layers; fill and frost cake. Border edge with walnut halves. Freeze until firm. Wrap-seal in moisture-proof plastic film. Overwrap with heavy foil if desired. Store in freezer. Remove from freezer 1½ to 2 hours before serving.

EASY ICE-CREAM SANDWICHES

1 6-oz. pkg. (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
2 tablespoons shortening
2 cups ready-to-eat oat cereal
2 pint pkgs. ice cream

Line bottom of two 9"-x-11" pans with aluminum foil. Melt semi-sweet chocolate and shortening over hot (not boiling) water. Remove from heat; stir in cereal. Divide mixture evenly between the two pans, spreading evenly with tines of fork. Chill 30 minutes. To make sandwiches, carefully peel off foil, then slip chocolate back into pan. Cut in half lengthwise, then three times crosswise. Cut pre-packaged ice cream of any desired flavor into 8 slices; put sandwiches together. Wrap each with heavy foil; store in freezer. Makes eight ice-cream sandwiches.

New suits are form-fitting or full-skirted; pants go to all lengths

It's the last call for getting beach togs ready — the Fourth of July's firecrackers will be going off in another month. Here, therefore, are some hot suggestions for a cool week end by the sea.

The expert swimmer should consider a functional one-piece suit. The girl with a good figure might like to show it off in the form-hugging elasticized type. If she wants to control her curves, let her consider the sarong suit. For the siren who wants to look pretty on the beach, barely touching her toes to the waves, there's the cotton with pleated pantie skirt. The dry-off is a grand little number for play on the beach after a dip in the water.

When it comes to pants, any length goes. All have international endorsement. It's up to the gal to choose.

▲ SEASIDE SIREN of elasticized cotton is in a fashionable paisley print. The colors are Persian blue, lavender and white. About $10. A smart Jantzen swim suit.

GIANT PLAID in granite red, white and navy cotton (Dan River) is eye-catching in a suit with a pleated pantie skirt. About $20. Brigance design for Sportsmaker. →

"PESCADORES" — Mexican fisherman's pants (left) — are ankle-length. Red-and-white checked cotton. Red drawstring cotton shirt. Pants about $6.50; shirt, about $6.50. Loomtogs . . . Capri short shorts (center) of marine-navy Ducklyn cotton are worn with striped cotton knit shirt. Shorts about $4; shirt, $4. Sacony . . . Riviera shorts (right) in dungaree-navy denim are topped by a shirt of bandanna-red cotton. Narrow matching red belt. Shorts about $4; shirt, about $3. Both from Korday.

SARONG SUIT has an inner sarong construction for figure control. Of Celaperm lastex, it comes in a wide range of colors with contrast piping. About $13. From Sea Nymph.

DRY-OFF one-piece is for after-swim play. Checked pink and white cotton knit (Alamac), ribbed collar and waist. About $12. By Pembroke Squires for Masket.

RIVERSIDE, CALIF.

Think you know a lot about sports? Maybe you do — and you can find out by taking the test on these pages devised with the help of college professors — but look to your laurels if your wife starts boning up on sports. Reason: During the past two years some 700 boys and girls have studied sports intensively in a unique "Sports Appreciation" course at the University of California branch here — and in the final exams the girls fared as well as or better than the boys.

The coeds outsmarted the boys at their own games because of necessity, believes Dr. Jack E. Hewitt, head of the physical-education department and founder of the course. "The girls didn't have as much background as the boys," he points out, "and thus had to study more."

The course, said to be the only one of its kind, gives students the history, tactics and rules of all major sports. "We teach the understanding of fine arts and music in colleges," says Dr. Hewitt, "so why not sports? Also, in the years ahead Americans will have more leisure time. To help them use it profitably, we concentrate on sports like tennis, golf and swimming, ones the students can participate in after leaving school."

Results sometimes have come astonishingly fast. One coed, a campus beauty queen, became so intrigued by fishing during the course that she and a girl friend, neither of whom had even held a net before, darted off to the High Sierras for a week of trout fishing.

Starting at the top of the next column are 20 questions designed to test your knowledge of sports. All are based on the ones given in the final exams of the Sports Appreciation course here. After scoring yourself, let your wife try. You may get a surprise.

HOW YOU RATE

Eighteen or more correct answers qualifies you to teach the professors a few things. A score of 16 or 17 puts you at the head of the class. From 11 to 15 correct answers indicates you're an average, well-informed sports fan. A score of 10 or less? Better do some homework on the sports pages.

NEWSPAPERBOY AT EXETER

Special scholarship helps Ohio boy

EXETER, N.H.

Here in the hills of New Hampshire, 755 boys are bustling through the busy days that precede a preparatory-school graduation. Among these students at Phillips Exeter Academy are 29 who never dreamed of graduating from one of the nation's oldest and most honored prep schools. Typical of them is Jon Mikal Townsley, 18, of Cedarville, Ohio (pop. 1,600).

Mike Townsley was transplanted from Cedarville to Exeter because he is an ex-newspaperboy for the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News. He and the other 28 were awarded scholarships by Exeter (top value: $1,600) through a program of the International Circulation Manager's Association.

HUNGRY Mike (r.) enjoys evening snack of chocolate milk and cookies with dormitory friends. Ohio boy's roommate is the son of a Maine bank president.

These scholarships are just one way the ICMA helps newspaperboys from average families become the leaders of tomorrow. America's newspapers now award more than a quarter-million dollars a year in prep-school and college scholarships. Some newspapers offer as many as 50. The amounts range from $100 to the full college bill of tuition, books, board and room. Winners are chosen for sales records, school grades and future promise.

Mike was grateful for the lift, although he found prep school a big step. He has worked hard: "The courses were the same" — mathematics, English, French, history and physical sciences — "but at Exeter there was more of everything." However, this hard work has paid off with high honors.

Not all he learned was in the classroom. There were Exeter's special slang, social customs — and contacts. But Mike, with plans to attend Harvard or Ohio State in the fall, took little time for social life. For an ex-newspaperboy from an average family, Exeter was an opportunity not to be wasted. ■

I like coffee, I like tea, I like that Dial feeling —and so will he. You always feel like you just stepped out of the shower. For Dial removes odor-causing skin bacteria that other good soaps leave on your skin. Then, Dial keeps on working, protecting you all day—and for several days if need be. Dial's AT-7 does it. No other leading soap has it. That's why Dial—and only Dial—stops odor before it starts!

Teen-age Topics

Q. Is it all right to take out a girl of my own age for my graduation from grammar school? If so, where would I take her? — R.D., Union City, N.J.

A. If there are no graduation parties to go to, perhaps you could take her to a restaurant for dinner and then to the movies or the theater. A nicer idea would be to have your parents give a small dinner party at home for you and another couple or so — this really is a night for a party rather than a solo date.

Q. I have invited a boy from another school to a Frosh-Soph dance. How can I let him know what color corsage I would like? Who should provide the transportation? — F.G., Eatontown, N.J.

A. I believe his florist will advise him to send white or pale pink, both of which will go with practically everything. If it is practical, his parents should provide the transportation.

Q. I am 13 and my brother is 17. He doesn't think I should attend the parties he gives. What do you think? — E.J., Chicago.

A. Try to put yourself in your brother's place; it is his party and to him you are a kid sister. When you are older, he may be more willing to include you.

Q. I am a 15-year-old girl and a sophomore. My parents approve of the people I go around with but they won't allow me to go out in their cars to get to and from a dance. It's not that the fellows are hot-rodders; most of them are careful drivers. I hope you can help me. — R.L., Scranton, Pa.

A. The clue here is your own phrase, "most of them are careful drivers." Your mother and father are perfectly right to be so cautious in this matter.

Q. I am a boy of 14 and have been going steady with a girl of 16. Do you think this is advisable? Is it proper for me to ask another girl to a party when she is away on vacation? — S.B., New York, N.Y.

A. By all means ask another girl. And 14 is too young to be going steady, especially with a girl older than yourself.

Chance Encounter Turns Skater into TV Actress

HOLLYWOOD, June 2

KAREN SHARPE, one of the tiniest actresses in television, had her mind set on becoming a professional ice skater when she was diverted into acting by a chance encounter. She is frequently seen in ingenue roles on NBC-TV's "Matinee Theater" (KSD-TV, 2 p.m. Monday through Friday).

The fragile-looking Miss Sharpe (clothing size five), a native of San Antonio, Tex., had dramatic leanings at first. She studied at the San Antonio Theater but finally decided that dancing was her forte, both on and off the ice.

With this in mind, she went to Los Angeles to study skating and was spotted by a movie talent scout while she was working out on a rink there. But she wasn't interested. She went on to complete her studies at the Hollywood Professional School and then got a job in a bakery to support herself while she continued her skating studies with a view to future appearances with ice shows.

ONE DAY AT THE home of her coach a friend of the coach dropped in. She recognized him—he was a customer of the bakery in which she worked. But he also was an actor's agent and persuaded Karen to let him try to place her in acting roles while she waited for an ice assignment. That led to a number of television roles and to the role of the young bride in the movie, "The High and the Mighty."

By now her skating ambitions had vanished, and she was thoroughly indoctrinated into acting. Her "Matinee Theater" appearances have included "The Runaways," "The Happy Rest," "The Old Maid," and "Dark Possession." Since each role has been entirely different from the others, Miss Sharpe has escaped being type-cast.

All St. Louis TV stations are now on Central Daylight Saving time. Listings of nearby cities are Central Standard Time except for KHGA-TV, WGEM, WTVP and WCIA-TV.

Bess Myerson with singer Betty Ann Grove and master of ceremonies Randy Merriman on "The Big Payoff" on KWK-TV at 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

America's Lady in Mink

NEW YORK, June 2

BESS MYERSON is America's "lady in mink." As one of the stars on "The Big Payoff" (KWK-TV, 2 p.m. Monday through Friday) she has been instrumental in giving away nearly 100 mink coats to successful contestants. She herself wears one as a symbol of the program as it opens each day.

Miss Myerson in 1945 was the first girl to win the title of Miss America after it was decided that talent as well as beauty should be a requirement of the contest. Her talent lay in music. She started studying piano at nine, and turned to the flute when admitted to the New York High School of Music and Art. By teaching piano, she earned her tuition through Hunter College from which she was graduated in 1945. As a highlight of her musical career, she was a guest soloist with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall in May, 1946.

Later that year she met Army Captain Allan Wayne, and they were married in October. They have a daughter, Barbara Carol, now nine years old. When Barbara no longer needed her mother's full-time care and attention, Miss Myerson decided to enter television and appeared on several network and local New York programs before going to "The Big Payoff." She still finds time for a half-hour musical program on television.

She is an excellent cook and prides herself on the fact that she prepares all the evening meals for her family.

Miss Myerson's weight and physical dimensions are exactly the same now as they were when she was chosen Miss America. She stands five feet, 10 inches, and weighs 135 pounds.

The Television Letter Box

Letters Intended For This Column Should Be Addressed To Television Editor, TV Magazine, Post-Dispatch, St. Louis 1, Mo.

TO OUR DISMAY, John Wayne movies are no longer listed for KSD-TV on Saturday afternoons. We always looked forward to them. There must be more John Wayne pictures for you to televise; the man must have made hundreds of them in the last 15 years. Please, for the sake of his devoted fans, give us back our John Wayne Theater. Incidentally, thanks for all the good programs you do televise. They are such a boon to young parents who have a stay-at-home life forced upon them.

MR. AND MRS. OSCAR EPSTEIN, JR.

(All John Wayne movies available to KSD-TV have been run.—Editor).

My deepest appreciation and gratitude for the Christian Science program telecast every Sunday morning. They are indeed an inspiration to me and my family.

ARLENE FLAUGHER

It is over a month now since the Liberace show went off the air. We miss it more every week. In these fast, troubled, push-button, atomic days we could use more and more good relaxing, enjoyable musical programs.

M.C.

There are others besides Liberace who can play the piano and the music will sound just as good. I believe a murder mystery is much better than Liberace and if you leave him off the air I promise I won't cry about it.

WARREN L. OPFER

There are so many fine programs on KSD-TV that we could not mention them all. Many are outstanding. So we say thanks for everything. We like the TV Magazine picture covers.

MRS. GUS GIEBE

Hope the Nelson family program continues all summer. It's the most wonderful family program on TV, so clean and wholesome. Certainly a change from the family wrangling in "Honeymooners."

MRS. P. F. G.

JUNE 3, 1956

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R. FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE ARN AND GARM SET OUT TO FIND A ROUTE OVER WHICH A ROAD MIGHT BE BUILT TO REACH THE RICH FARMLANDS IN THE INTERIOR.

THEY TRAVEL BY WATER AS FAR AS THEIR LIGHT SKIFF WILL GO.

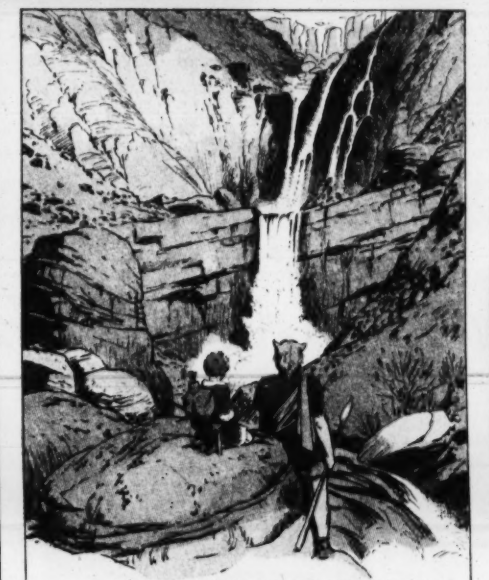
THE UPTURNED SKIFF OFFERS THE LAST SHELTER THEY ARE TO KNOW FOR MANY A LONG DAY.

GARM, THE HUNTER, IS WISE IN THE WAYS OF THE WILD, SO THEY TRAVEL LIGHT.

ON A SHEET OF PARCHMENT, RULED IN SQUARES, THEY CAREFULLY TRACE EACH DAYS PROGRESS. FOR ARN THIS IS SERIOUS BUSINESS AND A RECORD MUST BE KEPT.

ONE AFTER ANOTHER THE VALLEYS ARE EXPLORED... AND EACH ONE BEGINS SO PROMISINGLY.....

6-3-56



.....BUT ENDS IN A WILD CHAOS OF CLIFFS AND TUMBLED STONE. NOT ONE LEADS TO A PASS OVER THE MOUNTAINS!

HAL FOSTER

LIKE A TRUE SON OF PRINCE VALIANT, ARN IS AT HIS BEST WHEN FACED WITH SURE DEFEAT. "WAKE UP, GARM. I HAVE AN IDEA!"

NO PLACE TO TURN AROUND. GET HER ROLLING, PETER!

ABOVE CALHOUN, LEADER ANDREWS ORDERS A BRIEF STOP FOR THE "GENERAL"...
CLEAR TRACK AHEAD, BOYS— BUT LET'S MAKE SURE NO TRAIN CAN USE THE RAILS BEHIND US!
GENERAL
MAYBE THIS IS THE LAST TIME WE'LL HAVE TO DO THIS!
THEM JOHNNY REBS ARE SO FAR BEHIND THEY WON'T KETCH UP TILL THE WAR IS OVER!

WHAT JULIA FOUND SO FUNNY IN JUNIOR'S PICTURE OF ME IN THE "Y" EXHIBITION, I'LL NEVER KNOW.
HERE I AM AN ASSISTANT SALES MANAGER AND THAT PICTURE MAKES ME LOOK LIKE I CAN'T EVEN MANAGE MY OWN AFFAIRS.
THIS IS A WORK OF ART, JIM.

THE JACKSON TWINS

"PAYING THE MORTGAGE", THIRD PRIZE IN HUMAN INTEREST. HAW HAW!
THERE'S A LITTLE BANK INTEREST IN THERE, TOO.
IF YOU NEED FIVE FOR A WEEK OR SO LET ME KNOW MR. J.
NO, I AM NOT INTERESTED IN RE FINANCING MY HOME THROUGH YOUR BANK.
THERE'S A MAN HERE FROM THE HELPING HAND DEBT LIQUIDATION SERVICE, MR. JACKSON.
WHEW, I'M GLAD THIS IS HANDSHAKE CLUB DAY SO I DON'T HAVE TO LUNCH WITH THE BOYS FROM THE OFFICE.
HANDSHAKE 1961
.....AND SO, IN THE TRUE HANDSHAKE SPIRIT, WE HOPE EACH MEMBER WILL COUGH UP ONE DIME TO THE JIM JACKSON RELIEF FUND.
THAT NIGHT
I SAW THAT PICTURE OF YOU IN THE PAPER, MR. J. WHAT SHUTTER SPEED DID... UH...
LET'S GO, WIFFIE. FAST. WHEN HE TURNS PURPLE LIKE THAT A HORRIBLE EXPLOSION USUALLY FOLLOWS.
WOW. TALK ABOUT YOUR HUMAN FLASH BULBS. HE GOES OFF AT ABOUT ONE ONE-THOUSANDTH OF A SECOND.
LUCKY YOU CAME DOWN WHEN YOU DID, JAN.
WE WANT TO GET HIM CALMED DOWN SO WE CAN ASK HIM AND MOM ABOUT THE "CHEERY CHICKS" TRIP.
WE'VE NEVER ASKED TO GO ON A REAL HOSTELLING TRIP BY BIKE BEFORE.

THERE'S THE ROCKSLIDE AHEAD.....
SOME OF THOSE ROCKS LOOK MIGHTY SHAKY..... CLIMBING UP THAT SLIDE WILL BE RISKY BUSINESS!! HEY... I HEAR WHISTLING!
